CITY LEAGUE RACE IS ALL TIED UP

Four Teams on Even Footing as Result of Saturday's Games —Thistles Beat the Empires Easily and Classics Won Great Game From the East Citys.

As a result of Saturday's games all four City League teams are tied up, each having won two and lost the same number. The Thistles trimmed the Empires 18 to 4 in the first game, and the Classics for the second time this sason nosed out the East City team, beating Dan McCabe's outfit 7 to 6 after a finish that was hard on weak hearts. There was nothing to the first game but the Thistles, but the second was a battle.

Lornie Rose, who pitched for the Classics, was in great form until the ninth. He had nice speed and control, and for the first six innings the East City gang could not score. On the other hand the Classics bunched their hits to good effect in the fourth and fifth, sending six runs over the pan. East City scored one in the seventh and another in the eighth, but the Classics counted again in their half and it 7 to 2 when the ninth opened.

The East City's last innings was a nerve-wrecker. Swanston, first up, was out on a fly, but Kirn and Butcher hit safely and Hagerman followed with a smash to left that scored both runners, and when Frost's throw bounded past Kennealley the hitter also counted. Umpire Quinlan sent him back to third. He scored a moment later on Shaw's hit. Rose was relieved at this stage and O'Connell went in cold to do the twirling. He was wild as New Ontario and Lowe, batting for Clancy, walked. Guerin struck out, but Kennealley missed the third one and the bases were full. A pass to Barrie sent Shaw home and with the bases loaded and only one out the East City's were only a run behind. Captain Neary yanked O'Connell and went to the rubber himself, saving the game. He struck out Primeau, but Kennealy missed the last one. The batter was out automatically on the play and Lowe retired the side by walking into the plate where he was tagged out by Kennealley. Ignorance of the rules was undoubtedly the cause, but anyway the solid ivory play cost East City a chance to win out.

The box score.

The Thistles had a picnic in the first game. The Empires were shy their regular catcher and Dineen, who took his place, had his finger smashed in the first innings, and was badly handicapped. All three Empire pitchers were hit freely, and were poorly supported. Smythe for the Thistles, took things easy, and there was nothing to the game but the size of the score.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly allow me enough space in your valuable paper to add a few remarks to the article appearing in Saturday night's paper, re street watering: There are other places in the city that are suffering for water or oil, as well as East City. We, as ratepayers, have a right to demand from the Chairman of the Board of Works the reason why we are not being served with water on the streets, as usual, until the oil arrives. I have seen the watering carts this week as far north as the end of the street car line and as far west as Monaghan Road, during the past week, and places where the traffic is three times as heavy allowed to go without a water service until the dust is almost blinding. I mean, Sir, at the corner of Rubidge and Dalhousie streets. What we want to know is, why the Board of Works did not get a move on and have the attachments put on the carts and the oil on hand for an early spring service and not keep the people waiting all summer. If this kind of management of our city affairs is to be continued we may as well place our orders now for miniature snow plows, the Board of Works have in mind that we are going to have an open winter; but if we should have snow, which we are likely to have, they won't be ready for it. I am

Yours, Sir,

Better Service.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly, through the medium of your valuable paper, allow me to say a word to the public re Victoria Park. In the first place, the public are allowed on the grass only on the east side of the fountain. Also, that the old walk, at the south end of the park, has been filled in and seeded, and if the people would not walk on it, the young grass would have a chance to grow. People have asked me, why they are not allowed on the grass at the bottom of the park. Well, sir, if some of them would make a point of coming along on the morning after a band concert, I think the look of the top end of the park would speak for itself. Then, sir, there are those irresponsible persons who, whenever they have a piece of paper, must tear it into the smallest possible pieces before they throw it down. If they would throw the paper down as it is, a fellow could clear it up much easier. Anyway, there was at least one sensible peanut eater at the concert on Friday night. I know it, because I picked up on Saturday morning a small paper bag filled with peanut shells. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain, yours truly,

A. Brownn, Caretaker.

Evolution of the Apple.

Apples are now in the economy of the world's use and taste. At the beginning of the last century few varieties were known, and we can go back in history to a time when all apples were little, sour and pachery—crab apples and nothing else. The crab apple was said in its wildness nothing but a rosebush. Away back in time the wild rose, with its pretty blossoms that turn to little red balls, apple flavored, and the thorny crab had the same grandmother.

Russian English.

There is no "h" in the Russian alphabet. Therefore the Russians spell Hartlepool "Gartlepool." The captain of a Russian steamer greeted a friend of mine who had often sailed with him: "Ahl you are going for a holiday, yes? Where is your gutbend?"

The Russian alphabet also lacks our "w," and our "W." Jones has to be spelt "Dionez." Williams becomes "Vilyams," and an American friend of mine named Wilson is addressed as "Mr. Vesson." Yet in spite of these difficulties the Russians manage to give a very fair, usually an exact, version of English proper and place names.—New York Sun.

PETTICOATS FOR KILTIES.

Red Flannel Garments Made by an Old Lady in Sussex.

"I am sending you a dozen red flannel petticoats that I have made myself, every stitch. I want them to be sent to the dear Highlanders. I have put in tucks, in case they are not long enough. I will send some more as soon as I can get them finished."

Thus wrote an old lady of Sussex, in forwarding her mite to one of the many committees now collecting warm clothes for the British troops at the front, and although she was perhaps an extreme instance of zeal outrunning knowledge, she is by no means alone, says Oliver Madox Hueffer in a recent article. There is probably no truth in the statement that a similar offer was made of "pale blue silk pajamas," but one lady, inexpert at needlework, went forth and purchased a dozen soft-fronted evening dress shirts of the finest possible kind, to be sent to Mr. Atkins in the trenches.

This has, of course, its pathetic as well as its amusing side, if only that it shows the appalling waste of enthusiasm through lack of organization, in practically every civilized country just now. And it promises to be a cause of trouble to the authorities, as was the case during the South African war when whole wagon train loads of home-made plum puddings were tipped out on the veldt from sheer inability to know what to do with them, and overstrained supply officers were driven nearly crazy by repeated "Another load of chest protectors. What are we to do with them?"

The contrast in the attitudes of French and British toward prisoners is rather curious. The French soldier behaves admirably enough. As the long files of prisoners marched through the little town the infantrymen lining the footpaths said never a word. There were no taunts, or jeers, or abuse, or any sign of hatred; nothing could have been more dignified or more correct. But there was certainly no cordiality. With Mr. Atkins it was different. He regard the German no longer as an enemy to be hated, but very much as the more peaceful cockney regarded the German waiter in London before the war. "Poor old Sossidge—got it in the neck, 'e 'as," was about the hardest comment he ever bestowed, even if he carried his own arm wounded in a sling. And if the German was seriously wounded, Mr. Atkins would put himself to unheard of inconvenience to make things easier for him.

Let me add that the German soldier can be equally a sportsman, on occasion. My informant was a corporal in the Royal Field Artillery, who was slightly wounded and taken prisoner during the retreat from Mons. He fell into the hands of a German sergeant who proved to have lived in London for several years and spoke pure cockney. It even proved that they had lived in the same London suburb—Hither Green—and within a few streets of each other. Finally they became such good friends that the German tended the Englishmen's hurts, shared his food with him, and, when a favorable opportunity came: "Tole me to 'ook it, an' I bloomin' well did. Not 'arf a bad sort, 'e weren't. Bit of all sorts, them Sossidges, I suppose, jest like ourselves."

Among the inventions patented during 1914 are:

Motor-car without wheels. It "walks" over rough ground on three parallel pairs of sledge-runners which move forward and come to the ground alternately.

Handbag for bank messengers, in the handle of which is a revolver that can be fired without releasing the grip of the bag.

Luminous ink, by which you can read your letters in the dark.

Pneumatic scenery, which is inflated to set it up, and when deflated packs in small compass.

Gun which sticks bills.

Whistle for special constables who easily get out of breath. It is blown by a blub in the same way as a motor horn.

Only Half a Bishop.

Dr. Lloyd relates that when he became Suffragan Bishop of Thetford some people refused to have their children confirmed by him because they said he was only "half a bishop." On one of his visitations, as he was being driven from the station to the rectory, he saw the flag on the church tower at half-mast.

"Who is dead?" he asked the coachman.

"Nobody as I knows of," was the reply.

"Then why is the church flag at half-mast?" asked Dr. Lloyd.

"Oh, that's for you," he was told. "We puts the flag whole mast for a real bishop and half-mast for a suffrin' bishop."

Its Weak Point.

"Yes, that is its greatest fault."—Boston Transcript.

Natural Result.

Pleasant Conversation.

She—Are you fond of Strindberg? He—Yes, but I prefer Roquefort.—Stanford Chaparral.

An Exception.

"That woman can't tell a thing without exaggerating." "Did you ever ask her her age?"—Houston Post.

WOODMEN HALL NOTES

Out in the placid waters of the artificial lake of Jackson Park, and amid the quiet and delightful scenery of Nature, with the great luminary of heavens adding resplendence to all, a very impression ceremony was performed by Elder F. W. Johnston on Saturday morning, when those who have accepted of the Adventist faith, followed their Master, the Lord Jesus Christ, in the solemn ordinance of baptism. Before the ceremony itself, however, the regular preliminaries of an ordinary service were followed out, and after Scripture reading and prayer, in which were set forth the meaning of baptism, Elder Johnston then went out with the candidates and immersed them. This, the Elder said, was in perfect agreement with the teaching of Scripture in Acts viii., 36-38, and that the only individuals qualified to participate in such solemn service were those who have first repented sets ii., 38, secondly, believed Mark xvi., 15, 16, and, thirdly, have accepted the teaching of God's word, Acts ii., 41. With these pre-requisities in mind, it can be readily seen that infant sprinkling is without any warrant, and is merely founded on fancy. No proof whatever can be got from Scripture that supports the baptism of the babies, nor is there any virtue in the act of simply waving a flag over the infant in the temple. Let us not be deceived by the utterly false notion that bringing a child to a service and dedicating it with prayer is all that is necessary. If we stop with this we shall make a fatal mistake. The only profitable way is to give it proper instruction until it comes to the years of maturity and then in the Bible order let it be baptised; for not until then is baptism of any value. Being exclusively private, only a few of course were present at the baptism in the park.

WEDDING BELLS

WORTH —HARPER.

A very pretty house wedding took place Saturday afternoon, at 26 Classic Avenue, Toronto, when Helen Mary, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Harper, was married to Mr. Edgar Worth, Peterborough, the Rev. H. Peckover officiating. To the strains of the wedding march played by the bride's cousin, Miss Eva Allen, of Orono, the bride looking charming in a braided net gown over taffeta, en traine, and wearing a tulle veil and Juliet cap of real lace of her mother's, with a wreath of orange blossoms, was brought in by her father. She carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley, and wore the groom's gift, a pearl and diamond pendant. Miss Zetta Harper was her sister's bridesmaid and wore yellow crepe de chine and lace with plume shepherdess hat to match, and carried a sheaf of yellow tea roses. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Walter Worth. The bridal party proceeded through an aisle formed by four ribbon bearers, Misses Ruby, Maud and Olive Coo, cousins of the bride, and Miss Emma Worth, sister of the groom, to a floral arch, where the ceremony took place. Mrs. Harper received the guests wearing mauve taffeta and corsage bouquet of mauve sweet peas, while the groom's mother wore black taffeta draped with ninon, and leghorn picture hat. After the wedding supper, the bride slipped away and donned her travelling suit of sand coloured silk and citron coloured hat with wreath of French flowers. After a honeymoon spent in New York, Atlantic City and Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Worth will reside at 591 Weller street, Peterborough.

A Good Impression.

First impressions are tenacious. The customer who gets an unpleasant impression on his first visit to a store, is not likely to be a permanent customer. On the contrary, a favorable first impression will insure a steady patronage.

First impressions are often obtained from a firm's advertising, even before the store is visited. A frank, straightforward statement of values and advantages, will create an impression of fair dealing, and bring the customer to the store in a receptive state of mind.

Our advice to merchants is to give careful thought to their advertising and to advertise regularly.

Complainant Was Not Present To Give Evidence

Mr. James O'Grady Who Accused Local Man of Stealing $70 Was Not at Trial This Morning

Mr. Samuel Long, manager and bartender of the American Hotel, Hunter street, is appearing for trial before His Honour Judge Huycke, in County Court to-day on a charge of stealing the sum of $70 from Mr. James O'Grady, lately of Washington State.

Mr. Long appeared before Magistrate Dumble some days ago and was defended by Mr. G. N. Gordon, who in behalf of his client, declined to plead or elect.

When court was commenced this morning the complainant, Mr. O'Grady, was not to be found about the vicinity of the Court House Building. The Deputy Sheriff was called to see if he had been served, but his papers did not call for the serving of O'Grady. It looked for a time as though an adjournment would be asked for, but Mr. Gordon came to the rescue with the suggestion that the deposition from the Police Magistrate be taken as if in the case of an absent witness and Mr. Hatton acting for the prosecution, consented. After the reading of the deposition by Mr. Hatton, the evidence was taken.

The money was supposed to have been taken some time on the evening of May 25th. Mr. O'Grady came to the city from his home in Washington State to visit his people in the Township of Ennismore. He stopped at the American House. According to his evidence at the police court he got very drunk on May 25th, the day after his arrival in the city. He was at Mr. Hogan's Hotel in East City and had a number of drinks and returned to the city and to the livery barn of Mr. Fontaine, near the American Hotel. Here he asked for an outfit to [illegible] horse available and he went into the hotel. He was invited to take an auto ride and in the party were Mr. Long, with three men besides the driver of the car. There was some whiskey produced by some one in the party and he had some more drink. When he came back from the trip he realized that his money was gone. He notified the police.

TOOK HUSBAND SUBJECT TO APPROVAL

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 7.—"It is always best to live with a man you are going to marry before you marry him, and then you know what you are going to get," was the explanation offered by the then Mrs. Louise Ladew Wenman for the presence of G. Fritz Nave, a wealthy St. Louis resident, in her country home, at Northport, L. I., according to the testimony of Elizabeth McGuirk, her maid. "Mr. Nave apparently was satisfactory because she married him about a month ago."

Byrd Wilson Wenman, a wealthy New York cotton broker, having a fine home on Shippan Point, Stamford, began the action, which was suddenly terminated to-day, to obtain possession of his minor son, asserting that the influence of the boy's mother was not suitable.

Mrs. Wenman began an action for a divorce two years ago, alleging cruelty. Mr. Wenman filed a denial but later withdrew it and Mrs. Wenman obtained the divorce and the custody of the child.

The case came to an abrupt end today when the names of prominent New York men and women were about to be introduced in connection with gay revels at Northport. Counsel for both sides agreed that the testimony might result in too much of a sensation.

Elizabeth McGuirk had only begun to tell of the lively happenings in the Northport house when she was stopped and counsel reached an agreement withdrawing the case from court. The crowd in the court room was deeply disappointed.

At one party, according to the maid, when there were present several men and women from New York "and every one was drinking, Mrs. Wenman gave a cocktail to her baby to drink."

Referring to the presence of Mr. Nave in the home of Mrs. Wenman, the maid testified that he occupied a room adjoining that of Mrs. Wenman. "I thought he was Mr. Wenman," the maid testified, "until he told me not to call him Mr. Wenman. He told me his name was Mr. Nave, and later, when I explained my mistake to Mrs. Wenman, she explained that she expected to marry him.

"Mrs. Wenman always had gay friends at Northport, and there were lots of parties at which there was much drinking."

The maid was asked to mention who attended these parties, and had mentioned the names of a Mr. Laroque and a Miss Grace Ellis when the testimony was halted and the attorneys conferred. It was not decided who would have the custody of the child.

Russians Stem German Advance on the East

CAN SWITZERLAND MAINTAIN HER NEUTRALITY?

RUSSIANS AGAIN RETARD ADVANCE OF ENEMY

Austro-German Forces East of Jaroslau and Przemysl Attempt to Push Forward But Fail---Berlin Claims 13,000 Prisoners Were Taken at Przemysl.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, via London, June 7.—The forward movement of the extreme Russian right flank operating on Sinnai, Yata, Zargina, and Lentowina continues to retard the advance of the central Austro-German forces east of Jaroslau and Przemysl, which thus far has failed. Krawco and Burdzi, which are particularly mentioned in this connection, are just north of Stanai and Alsem on the Leg River.

Southward the fighting front may be traced by following the San to the mouth of the Lubaczowka and then following this river to the village of Tukhla, which is twelve miles southeast of Jaroslau. Thence the front is on a straight line twelve miles east of Przemysl, including the villages of Kalnikof, Kosmenitza, and Krukenitza, and proceeding southeast to the Dniester, which marks the southern front.

On the eastern flank of Hindenburg's force the armies of Generals Linsingen and Pflanzer sustained hard punishment at the hands of the Russians and, instead of turning the Russian flank or invading Podolia, as fondly hoped, remain respectively on the Pruth and beyond Stry.

Of five armies which were driven straight at the heart of the Russian position, one group—two armies under Mackensen —got across the San Another group composed of three armies struck south of Przemysl, but was unable to get beyond the line stretching toward the Dneister marshes.

The strength and valour of the Russian resistance compelled the Teutons to devote all their energies to the humbler task of capturing Przemysl.

GERMAN MOTIVE IS POLITICAL.

Following the capture of the Russian position at Przemysl the Germans apparently have sent heavy reinforcements to the western line where there are distinct signs of a resumption of the offensive on the part of the invaders. Nevertheless, the French report a slow and uninterrupted advance in the sector north of Arras, and important gains north of the Aisne.

In the east the Austro-German advance is continuing, with eastern Galicia figuring prominently as the objective. This move is regarded in London as political, the idea of the Germans and Austrians being to exert an influence upon Rumania.

Petrograd announces a Russian success along the river Pruth near Kolomea, where the Austro-Germans are said to have been forced back across the river. Petrograd says also that the Russian lines of defence must be readjusted on account of the use of poisonous gases by the Germans. The reason for this is that these works, technically correct under the ordinary conditions of warfare, become death traps exposed to this new engine of hostility.

BERLIN CLAIMS 13,000 TAKEN.

BERLIN, June 7.—An official statement to-day says:

"North of Kurschany our cavalry forced a passage across the Windau and advanced in a south-easterly direction. Southeast of Kurtowcgwy and in the region east of Rawdyniki our offensive made good progress, and an additional 3,340 prisoners and ten machine guns fell into our hands.

"South of the Niemen the bank of the river has been cleared of all enemies as far as the line from Touauale to Sapiezyszki.

"East of Przemysl the troops of the Teutonic allies continued their victorious battle. They drove back the enemy towards' Wysznia, to the northeast of Mosciska. Part of the army under General Von Linsigen has crossed the Dniester at Zurawna and has taken the hill to the north of the eastern bank by storm. Further south the pursuit reached the Nowica-Kaluss-Tomaszowce line. The number of prisoners taken has been increased to more than 13,000."

7,000 PRISONERS AT PRZEMYSL.

Special despatches received in Berlin from Austrian army headquarters give certain details of the capture of Przemysl by the Austro-Germans, which have not hitherto been published.

The Teutonic allies took 7,000 prisoners, 31 cannon, and 30 machine guns when they entered Przemysl. The Russian garrison had been given orders to hold Przemysl to the end, but they were overwhelmed by the terrific artillery fire of the Germans and the Austrians.

Everything indicates that the Teutonic allies are beginning the sixth week of the Galician campaign with a promising outlook.

The Russians have lost their line on the River San, and they appear also about to lose their positions on the River Dniester. These same advices indicate further that the Russians to the east and northeast of Czernowitz already have begun to retreat.

AN ANXIOUS MOMENT FOR LITTLE SWITZERLAND

Two Points in Switzerland Would Prove of Advantage to Austria and Germany for the Advance of Their Troops

Special Cable to The Examiner:

GENEVA, Switzerland, June 8. — Will Switzerland become a second Belgium? Will this little state be able to maintain its neutrality? Will she, moreover, be able to feed her people and her many guests when all nations which surround her are locked in life and death struggle?

Consider the present military position of the Teutonic allies. On the Italian frontier Austria and her enemies have between them a mountain barrier 9,000 feet high. These mountains are pierced by only two railway passes. In addition to the natural defences, both nations have added an immense system of forts, bastions and field fortifications.

Importance of Positions.

Similarly on the other side of Switzerland the Vosges stretching north have proved a stumbling block to the French and the Germans alike. These two mountain lines of battle cannot be turned—except by a violation of the neutrality of the Swiss.

By cutting across a little corner of southeastern Switzerland Austria could pour an army through the Engadine and suddenly emerge on the plains of Milan, dealing a blow to the heart of Italy. By invading a few miles of northwestern Switzerland the Kaiser might hope to approach the French fortified district of Belfort from the south.

The same advantages would accrue to Italy or to France by using the territory of this mountain people to flank Germany and Austria's forces and thus avoid the costly and slow "frontal attack."

Would it be worth the cost to the belligerents? That is what Switzerland is wondering. Switzerland would fight as bravely as Belgium did—and she is prepared. However, the few hundred thousand troops, hardy and good marksmen though they be, would probably not suffice to check the great masses now engaged in the world war, especially as no attempt would be made to invade the heart of Switzerland, but only to use a handy corner as a roadway.

The entry of Switzerland in the war on either side would be a great shock to the sympathies of a large share of the Swiss populace. Here in the north the Swiss speak German and are Teutonic in their sympathies. Other parts of Switzerland are French speaking and still others Italian. The United States alone presents a parallel to the unanimity with which these people of diverse race stocks have so far stuck together.

Expect Invasion.

On the whole, even here, a German invasion is considered more likely than a violation of Swiss territory by either France or Italy. There is first the precedent of Luxemburg and Belgium. Then it is well known that Germany has in the archives of her wonderful great general staff at Berlin complete detailed plans for entering Switzerland should this be judged expedient.

STONEY LAKE BREEZES

TRAVELS OF THE EMDEN CREW THROUGH THE ARABIAN DESERT

BERLIN, (by mail to New York), June 7—"Have I really the Iron Cross?"

That was the first question put by Lieut.-Capt. Muecke of the German sea raider Emden, when, after months of wandering, he and his command of fifty men suddenly appeared out of the Arabian desert at El Ula.

From August 11th until November 9, the German light cruiser Emden, one of the most daring raiders of the war, destroyed twenty-three merchant vessels of the allies, with cargoes aggregating $20,000,000. On November 9th, after a spectacular raid on the harbour of Penang, Sumatra, the Emden was overhauled off the Island of Cocos, by the Australian warship Sydney, driven shore and destroyed. Her commander, Capt. Von Mueller, and most of her crew were captured. Lieut.-Capt. Muecke and fifty of the men, who were ashore at the time, evaded capture by escaping on a small steamer which they seized. Later they transferred to a German steamship and finally landed at Hodeidah, Arabia. Thence they proceeded by camel caravan through the Arabian desert to Damascus, the Turkish headquarters.

Wearied from their long months of wandering, the Emden men refused to rest more than three hours at Damascus.

"Bath of Rhine wine?" they were asked.

Wanted New Command.

"Rhine wine and then bath," said Muecke. It was then that he saw the German newspapers and learned that he had the Iron Cross and a Saxon orde. He wanted to know if it really were true, and laughed like a boy. He said he was proudest of the Saxon order, because his father wore it before him.

The bearded blonde giant telegraphed Berlin asking for another command against the enemy, and then ordered the party to start for Germany in three hours. A train was waiting with steam up.

According to Muecke, the most amusing feature of the long and devastating cruise of the Emden was the incredulity with which her victims received the news that it was indeed the Emden who had captured them. It will be remembered that for many weeks before the raider finally was destroyed off Cocos Island there were reports of the destruction of the German cruiser. She was blown up, sunk, torpedoed and otherwise destroyed countless times, according to reports, in the Pacific and Atlantic, off South America and elsewhere.

Free Lancing It.

On his arrival here, Lieut.-Capt. Muecke said:

"We on the Emden had no idea where we were going, and on August 11, 1914, we separated from the cruiser squadron, escorted only by the cialer Markomannia. Under way the Emden picked up three officers of German steamers. That was a piece of luck, for afterwards we needed many officers for the capturing and sinking of steamers, or manning them when we took them with us. On Sept. 10th, the first boat came in sight. We stopped her. She proved to be a Greek tramp, chartered from England. On the next day we met the Indus, bound for Bombay, all fitted up as a troop transport, but still without troops. That was the first one we sank. The crew we took aboard the Markomannia. "What's the name of your ship?' the officer asked us. Emden? Impossible. Why the Emden was sunk long ago in battle with the Ascold!"

Hated the Victor.

One captain greeted us cheerily with: 'Thank God I've been captured.' He had received expense money to Australia and was thus saved half the journey.

"Another captain gave me a new oilskin, and his wife asked for an Emden arm-band and a button as souvenirs."

Muecke's hatred of the Emden's "hangman" was shown when Muecke, during his amazing narrative, asked after the Sydney, "Is she at the Dardanelles, maybe?" he asked.

Muecke gave graphic accounts of all of the exploits of his ship. Most of these were related in the newspapers at the time of their happening. Her richest haul was the Diplomat, off Calcutta, loaded with $2,500,000 worth of tea, all of which was sunk.

Has Fleet of A Thousand Aeroplanes

Special Cable to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, June 8.—Great Britain has a fleet of more than a thousand aeroplanes of a new pattern now ready for the greatest aerial raid in the history of the world, according to Henry Woodhouse, chairman of committee of dirigibles of the Aero Club of America. Woodhouse said to-day he had this information from trustworthy sources. "This number is now ready for an active campaign,' he said. "I have the authority for the statement that British makers of a new type of plane are confident of their ability to approach three mile a minute speed with this air fleet. Britain will invade Germany and more than counter act the Zeppelin raids on England."

"CANADIAN EXAMPLE GIVES US COURAGE"

Corp. O'Brien, Coldstream Guards, Generously Praises Men From Canada

LONDON, June 8.— "It gives us great courage to know that we have such men to rely on," writes Corporal O'Brien of the Coldstream Guards, of Canadians. "Only the other day," he says, "they went into action just as if they were drilling on Hyde Park. I never saw anything like it, each man keeping about two paces interval, going at a walking pace with dozen of maxims turned on them, besides field guns; and the whole of the German rifle fire for about a mile in front of them. In fact no better example could be shown by any regiment under the British flag."

Shortage of Doctors For The Hospitals

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., June 8.—While the Government up to the present time has accepted all offers of beds for hospitals at the front, including one from Laval University of 1,000 beds, some doubt is being expressed as to the ability of those making the effort to secure the necessary number of medical men with military training to equip the proposed hospitals at the front. Already over seven hundred Canadian medical men have been despatched by the Militia Department to base and stationary hospitals, and the supply is not inexhaustible. Should the war continue for an indefinite period this is going to be one of the most serious problems of the war.

40,000 Turks Wounded and in Pitiful Need

Special Cable to The Examiner:

ATHENS, June 8.—Forty thousand Turkish soldiers, wounded in the Dardanelles fighting, and 250 German officers are in pitiful need of medical attention at Constantinople. Despatches received here to-day said that the hospital facilities in the Ottoman capital was entirely inadequate for the care of the wounded and that there is a great shortage of doctors. Hundreds of wounded are reported to be dying daily for lack of proper care, and an epidemic of typhus and smallpox has added to the sufferings of the wounded.

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

Isaac was just like the rest of the health experts, he was allus 'preachin' about what a feller shouldn't eat and shouldn't do, and he looked about as rugged as a feather-luster himself; but he claimed to be able to cure any disease in the world that any one else had, ever if it was one of his own complaints.

Red began to harp on how poorly old Josiah Cornell was lookin' and Isaac said right now that what he need was to do some intelligent exercisin' and to take a diet. The old hermit stood six feet four and was about as frail as a grizzly, but Isaac hooked up his mule, loaded Confucious and his umberella into the chariot and drove forth to spread the gospel of health. I wanted to see how some hosses up at the end of the range were doin', so I went over the same day that Isaac did, and chanced to arrive at the hermit's a little before. Josiah sat at the door of his cabin smokin' his red pipe and lookin' forty miles into nothin' with his old hawk eyes.

We nodded at each other and when Isaac drove up I expressed surprise to see him so far from home, but he didn't have any time for me, knowin' my health was too scared of his treatment to experiment with it. "How sez he, slow and serious, "why I ortn't to feel discouraged if you once left like I do, and then outgrew it into the shape you are now."

"What do you mean?" sez Isaac.

"I mean," sez Josiah, "that your blood is thin, your muscles are flabby, your joints are stiff, and you're more 'n half dead all over."

Isaac pulled off his glasses and wiped 'em careful, after which he put 'em back on and regarded the hermit in astonishment. Seein' that Josiah didn't show any symptoms of insanity, he wriggled himself about a bit and sez: "Let me see you do this." Then he reached over and touched the ground with his finger tips.

"What for should I do that?" sez Josiah.

"To prove 'at you're as limber as I am."

"Listen here," sez Josiah. "If I wanted to use my beard for a door-mat I might try some such antics as that; but not havin' any such cravin' I don't see any sense in it."

"You're afraid to try it," sez Isaac.

"All right," sez Isaac, "go ahead."

This was a whole lot better 'n I had figgered on, and I dropped back to one side and kept quiet. I had about given up hope of ever seein' [illegible] and be natural; but here he was actin' like a regular kid. He got up, stretched himself, smiled down and then bent over, laid the palms of his hands flat on the ground and left 'em there. "You're bendin' your knees!" yelled Isaac.

"You feel of 'em and see," gurgled Josiah through his beard.

Isaac felt of 'em with his face mighty suspicious; but it soon changed to amazement. "You got wonderful legs!" sez he.

"You'll think so, after you've run again' me," sez Josiah.

Well, they lined up and started and Josiah ran ten rings around Isaac before Isaac fell down pantin'. As soon as Isaac could get his breath they came back side by side and Josiah was grinnin' like a pleased child, all the glitter gone from his hawk eyes, which twinkled like a couple o' stars. Isaac was beggin' him to tell him what exercises to take to get in such condition.

"Steamin'," sez Isaac. "What do ya mean by that?"

"Never did," sez Isaac.

"Then it's dirt that ails ya," sez Josiah, "nothin' but plain dirt."

Well, they argued about bathin' and rubbin' and such like until the' wasn't much left to say on these subjects, and then the hermit lost patience and told Isaac to either get ready for a sweat-bath or to go on home, so Isaac gave in and they set to packin' wood around some stones, while I chuckled at the continuous naggin' each kept up on the other.

As soon as they had started a roarin' hot fire afound the stones, back they came to where I was, sat down again, and began to discuss dogs. The hermit introduced the subject by pointin' at Confucious and sayin': "That there is a sort of a dog, isn't it?"

"I wish I owned one of 'em," sez Josiah, and this bulged out Isaac's vanity and he put the silver blue pup through his paces while the hermit sat and smoked in silence while his eyes took on the far away look again.

When Connie had gone once through and Isaac was lookin' for the burst of applause, Josiah sez: "I'm surprised 'at the's room enough in his head to remember all that stuff; but as for me, I never cared none for tricks in a dog."

"What use would you have for a dog like this?" asked Isaac.

The old hermit he looked down affectionate at his two wolf dogs and then he sez: "These here two dogs have to work mighty hard at times, and when they get a chance to rest, I'd like to have 'em able to do it without any bother. If I had a dog like yours I'd teach him to trail down fleas in my dogs while they were takin' the rest they'd earned — I reckon he could whip a flea, couldn't he?"

Isaac generally didn't take offence easy on his own account, but he'd go to war in a minute for the pup, and he lit into Josiah Cornell and rawhided him until he wore all the oil off his vocal cords and had to either stop or get a hot-box. He bragged about the different things that Confusious had frightened on the ranch as though it was somethin' to be mighty proud of; but if that was to be the test, why, his umbrella was a couple o' points ahead of the terrier.

From time to time Josiah would go down to see how the stones were cookin' and when they were red hot he put 'em in a hole at the back end of his bath house which was a pit, roofed over with loop-poles and covered with dirt, with an old blanket for a door. He threw a skift o' sand over the stones and said for Isaac to take off his clothes, so Isaac, who was allus willin' to try anything once, went into the little house that stood close by and when he had stripped, he came forth wrapped in a gaudy blanket, his face all lit up at the prospect of a new sensation. The hermit gave him a big drink of some brown, face-makin' stuff, took off the blanket, shoved Isaac inside, and then fastened down the blanket at the door till I wouldn't 'a' wanted to have been inside if I'd been Satan himself.

The twinkle had come back to Josiah's eyes again, and he picked up Isaac's pup and toted it back with him, though it was plain to be seen the pup was worried about havin' Isaac buried in the hole. I finally opened up on the hermit about Tom Smith, and was just beginnin' to get in it and said he would do what he could to find out what had become of him. That old hermit could fire out questions like hail on a tin roof, once he got interested and he'd got possession of all I knew about Tom Smith, and was just beginnin' to let what I guessed, when Isaac began to yell and we posted down to see what was up.

"Let me out," sez Isaac.

"Ho, you haven't begun yet," sez Josiah.

"I'm fair cookin'!" bowled Isaac.

"I want ya to cook," sez Josiah, "your blood hasn't been clean for ninety years and the only way to clean it is to cook the poisons out. When you feel the flesh beginnin' to loosen up on the bones you're about done, and then you call me and I'll tend to ya."

"I'm comin' ont right now," sez Isaac. "If you don't loosen that blanket I'm goin' to plunge right through it."

"All right," sez Josiah, speakin' savage but winkin' at me, "I've got your flea-hound in my hand here and if you do, I'll toss it to my dogs. You're gettin' a treatment in there that you've needed for more years 'n you've got hairs in your head, and I don't intend to have you spoil it just 'cause you're gettin' a leetle mite warm."

Isaac groaned, but he stuck it out for five or six minutes more and then he gasped: "My flesh is loose from my bones, I'm drippin' from every pore, and my brain's starting to sizzle."

"Well," sez the old hermit, "if that's the way you feel, you must be just about done. When I pull back the blanket, you run right down to the crick and plunge in, and be sure to get the top of your head wet. Don't go in gradual, but plunge."

Old Josiah jerked back the blanket and Isaac shot out like bullet from gun. He was red as a tomato, drippin' with sweat, and had a wild look to his fringe of hair which was plastered down on his neck like a flock of young snakes, while his bald spot looked like the settin' sun. His limb-joints were like those of a day-old colt and also about as wobbly, his shoulder blades were like the wing-sprouts on a calf-duck, his neck like that of a moltin' heron, he was gaunt where he should have been muscled out, baggy where he should have been trim, all the clothing he wore was his black-rimmed spectacles, and all in all he was a sight to behold.

He didn't pause when he reached the pool, but plowed into it with a splash, took two steps, and went in over his head. "How deep is that pool, Mr. Cornell?" sez I.

"Can't the critter swim?" sez Josiah, hastenin' down to the bank. When Isaac came splutterin' to the surface, the old hermit held out a long pole to him and pulled him out. "That's good water," sez he, "and a little water'll do you good."

He made Isaac roll over and over on the sand while he got a bucket of water ready, then he led Isaac up to the bath house again, threw the bucket of water on the hot sand over the stones and made Isaac go inside with nothin' stickin' out but his head. "I had some medicine in that bucket," sez Josiah, "and it'll help to put your baby skin back on ya."

Isaac was beyond argument, and when his pup came up to the blanket and kissed him on the nose, hanged if it didn't bring tears to his eyes. The next time tears came to his eyes they were caused by the steam inside, and the old hermit told him to hustle into the crick again, but not under it so far. When Isaac came out this time, the old hermit caught him, rolled him on the sand, and then rubbed him with sand until he howled.

As soon as he had polished him satisfactory, the old hermit gave him a gentle push toward the crick again, sayin': "There, now, rinch yourself off well and you've had one complete treatment."

Isaac's eyes were glazed behind his glasses and he looked blank-like at Josiah and sez as earnest as possible, "I'd never in the world be able to walk that far, I really feel very weakly."

"Nonsense," sez Josiah, "the water'll brace you up."

Isaac wavered worse than ever this trip, but he made it, rinched himself off and staggered to the bank, where the old hermit met him with a blanket which he wrapped around him and led him into the little house where he'd took off his clothes. The' was a bunk in here and Isaac toppled on to it, Josiah rubbed some grease all over him, put on another blanket, and left him sound asleep.

(Copyright by New York Herald Co.)

The above picture has been made by Mr. Matania from his actual sketches executed while he was in the trenches on the battlefield of Neuve Chapelle in the latter days of April. The only divergence from the actual drawings in Mr. Matania's sketch book is that the view has been slightly altered in order to show the whole line of the trench and the position of the bursting shell; otherwise the scene is a literal transcript of his notes made while shells were bursting around him. One of his sketches was actually spattered with the muddy upthrow from the discharge of a high-explosive shell. The officer who was acting as guide and mentor to Mr. Matania and an American correspondent is seen seated in the centre of the picture and bending slightly before the air blast from the explosion. As Mr. Matania bent his own head he had an instantaneous vision of the party and the surrounding scene just as it is shown here. The picture, therefore, has a documentary value apart from any other interest. The extraordinary amount and variety of the litter on the battlefield particularly impressed Mr. Matania. Not only is the litter churned up once or twice by shell fire, but it is in a constant state of unrest owing to the incessant bombardment.

Italy Will Hurl Famous Corps Into Battle Line

Bersaglieri and Alpine Regiments Will Vie with the Carabinieri in Maintaining High Traditions of Brilliant Service in the Field.

(Special Dispatch.)

ROME, June 5.—Italy's advent into the European war will bring into action several famous corps of picked soldiers, some of whom have already fighting records dating back for many years such as the Bersaglieri and the Carabinieri. The Alpine regiments, units of which have already been engaged in the first skirmishes, are receiving their baptism of fire. This corps, of which Italy is very proud, and which has never before been engaged in battle on its own ground, is recruited solely from the population of the Alps.

The Alpini are armed like the infantry, but their equipment and uniform are especially adapted to the mode of living and manoeuvring in mountainous regions. Each company is provided with little mountain guns carried upon pack mules. There are eight regiments of the Alpini—on peace footing 14,000 men. These troops are the rivals of the French chasseurs alpins, who have proven themselves to be such terrific fighters, and officers and men are imbued with the desire to outdo the exploits of the French mountain soldiers.

Italy's Picturesque Sharpshooters.

The most picturesque and striking infantrymen of Europe are the Bersaglieri of Italy—the sharpshooters. The Bersaglieri are chosen from among the strongest and best proportioned men in the country and undergo special instruction besides the regular infantry training. The first regiments of Bersaglieri were organized in Sardinia in 1836, and after the confederation of the Italian States they were retained in the service. They have always been noted as fighters. During the Crimean war they proved themselves splendid soldiers, and have since kept up their reputation.

Their flat brimmed hats, trimmed with cock feather panaches, give to the Bersaglieri a jaunty appearance, well in keeping with their reputation. Well set up, clean limbed men, they make ideal light infantrymen, capable of long marches and brisk manoeuvring; troops possessing the utmost of mobility combined with good discipline amenable to fire control of a high degree. There are twelve regiments of the Bersaglieri.

The Carabinieri, the gendarmes of Italy, make up a corps that has served with distinction in many campaigns. The Carabinieri were instituted in January, 1861, by bringing together in one corps all the military organizations having charge of the public peace of the various provinces of the kingdom. This corps was organized upon the same principles as that existing formerly in Piedmont. The largest contingent of the newly formed corps came thence, and the uniform, regulations, discipline and corps pride came likewise from Piedmont.

The personnel of the Carabinieri is chosen with the greatest care and the men are very jealous of its traditions, for in peace time the corps performs all the services of a constabulary; in time of war it furnishes to the various divisions and army corps section of both horse and foot men for police and guide services. There are twelve legions of Carabinieri—approximately 30,000 men on a peace footing—of which 4,000 are mounted. The foot Carabinieri, mobilized in battalions, constitute a somewhat heavy but select and very solid infantry. The mounted men nearly all own their own horses.

Of the infantry proper there are two regiments of grenadiers and ninety-four of infantry of the line. The grenadiers and those regiments organized into the first nine brigades have a very brilliant military history, dating from the sixteenth century. All the other brigades except the last eight took part in the campaigns of 1848-61 and of 1866. The Italian infantry has always shown coolness under fire and resolution in attacking when ably led.

Italy's first line artillery has just been equipped with the latest field artillery—the Deport 75-millimetre field piece—the invention of Colonel Deport, France's widely known artillerist, who designed the famous seventy-fives of the French army. The piece itself is slightly lighter than the older French model, giving it more mobility, and the principal feature of the carriage is the split trail, which gives the gun great support and steadiness. It also allows for the depression of the breech of the piece, thereby giving an elevation of forty-five degrees if necessary.

By digging holes in the ground and dropping the trail into them the field gun can readily be transformed into a mortar if need be. This piece is the type now being manufactured in France for the artillery of that country.

Get Patterns from France.

The Italian order for the new guns had been placed in France last year, and would have been filled last August in the ordinary course of events. The outbreak of war, however, caused all gun foundries of France to hold up outside orders to fill her own demands. One battery had been delivered, although there was much discussion as to the advisability of delivering to a member of the old Triple Alliance a type of piece similar to that of France's latest designs. Italy's breaking of the Triple Alliance changed the status of affairs, and the four guns of the French battery were sent to as many Italian foundries as patterns, work was at once commenced and the entire order was filled only a month ago.

The reserve batteries of the Italian field artillery are the Krupp seventy-seven pieces, with which the entire service was formerly equipped. It has been said by military experts that reserve artillerymen of Italy ordered to fill up gaps in her first line personnel will be at a disadvantage because of the difference in action and handling of the two pieces.

"DIGGING IN" UNDER SHELL FIRE "A HORRIBLE DREAM OF CHAOS"

(Special Dispatch.)

PARIS, June 5.

Impressions of active fighting, including the digging of shelter trenches under fire, are given in a recent number of the Revue by Charles Tardieu in another instalment of his "Impressions of a Corporal," under the title, "The Pine Wood." His narrative follows:—

"After we took the farm of M—— the Boches left us alone for an hour, while we rested. Then a few trial shots came flying our way. In a few moments the fusillade began to swell and our pickets came flying in. It is the counterattack! We are ready. When they get within three hundred yards we open fire at will from the shelters we have been preparing. They do not seem to be very well satisfied; nevertheless they keep advancing.

"They are only 300 yards away now. What splendid targets! One can already see the gaps in their line. Their officers and under officers throw themselves in advance to urge them on, but our fire swells, and after a moment's hesitation they turn and flee. We return to our interrupted reverie. During the afternoon reserve supplies of ammunition are brought up, and the order comes that we must advance at daybreak, no matter what the cost.

"An artillery officer arrives to reconnoitre the terrain, and I am chosen to accompany him with a patrol. At twilight we set out, and without difficulty gain a little clump of trees a hundred yards away. From there we crawl on hands and knees, through the fields, which offer but little cover. At last we hear voices and from a thicket in front of a pine wood we see the enemy trench. Pointed helmets are to be seen. They are hard at work. Some few have come out of the trench and are cutting down the trees before it. Back of the trench, in the woods, the sound of axes. They are preparing for a hard tussle.

The Attack Begins.

"Night falls and we see a German patrol about to set out. We retire and reach our position without a single shot having been fired. The night is cold, damp and icy. Clouds obscure the sky. An hour before the dawn a fine, penetrating, icy rain begins to fall. We shiver, in bad humor.

"By daybreak we are ready. The seventy-fives open the ball, as we wait. The attack will be general.

"On our left the Zouaves have for their objective point a clump of oak and evergreens that was later termed the woods of the Zouaves. The German seventy-sevens are returning the fire of the seventy-fives. Strangely enough, no shells fall near us. But the fields and the road are well peppered.

"'Take packs! Load!' It promises well!

"The seventy-fives recommence—an efficacious fire. We leave the trench and traverse the gardens of the villa, also strangely spared by the shells. Beyond is a space of rolling ground, in the centre of which a hundred pine trees raise their heads. Beyond is a double alley of false acacias and shrubbery. If we could only get as far as that without damage! But no; already the watchers blaze away at us, and in an instant the fusillade opens.

Through Hail of Lead.

"We run through the hail almost elbow to elbow. They fire a bit too high, because of the slight slope of the ground, and we are not seriously damaged. We run almost bent over. At last we reach the pines and throw ourselves upon the ground. We have hardly reached our shelter when a burst of shells, 155's probably, sweeps through the woods, cutting branches over our heads, tearing the earth up in huge jets, spitting shrapnel all about us. The company on our left has gained the edges of the field; so we go crawling along, scraping hands and knees, tangling ourselves in bayonet scabbards and suspender slings.

"Now their fire is lowering. The bullets snip along the ground beside us. We plant ourselves behind our unslung packs midst the trees in the shelter of mounds of earth hurriedly piled up with rifle butts, with tin cups and with knives, and open fire. Seven or eight comrades have already fallen; most of them, wounded, crawl painfully through the rain of shells.

"The day has now broken, gray and bleak. A cold fog slaps against our faces, almost as disagreeable as the bullets.

"We stay there firing at will for nearly ten minutes. Despite the humidity the gun barrels heat up. We will burn our hands if we are forced to use the bayonet now. My comrade, B——, corporal in the Fifteenth, is swearing fluently at the cartridge clips which are always getting loose and spilling the cartridges about. We are able to distinguish better now the enemy position, about four hundred yards away. Our presence and the fire of the "seventy-fives" make them prudent. Their fire is more unsteady, but the shells still keep tumbling about us. The bullets clip the tree trunks. Now and then one strikes a canteen or meat tin with a dull 'plunk!' There is a movement on the left; we must advance. Our fire redoubles, despite the unsteady position.

Packs for Shields.

"'Take packs!' We content ourselves with holding them like shields, our left arms through the slings.

"Now is the real test of courage—to get up, offering one's head and chest as a target for the storm of metal that is tearing through the air; to walk into the very jaws of death, into the muzzles of the guns that are spitting fire at us! We know it, but if our faces are a bit pale and our looks anxious, no one hesitates and we step out into the fire.

"The fusillade grows heavier. One feels as the hail of death tears through our ranks how fragile the human body really is. Comrades are falling—some of them without a sound, others cursing horribly at the Boches as they go down. One can see it all through the corner of one's eye, but there is no time to stop to lend a helping hand. The sergeant major is gone, both my sergeants have fallen, one after another, and we stop in a little dip of the terrain. We have gone about one hundred and fifty yards.

"'Fire at will!' shouts the captain. 'Take cover! Use your intrenching tools!'

Digging In Under Fire.

"I repeat the order and take command of the section as the senior corporal. I push my pack close to that of my neighbor. 'Take your shovel!' I tell him, 'and hurry!' I open fire while he digs frantically, raising a little embankment. The bullets rain. Oh, if one could only see them come! But it is better not, after all. The ones we hear whistling past are not dangerous; those which pierce one's forehead, traverse the chest, one does not hear. A shock, a burning dart and it is over.

"The earth is heaping slowly higher, but he is getting tired and his movements are slowing up. I grab the spade and push my piece into his hands. While I dig and dig and dig, for all the world like a frantic terrier, he keeps up the fire. I am tearing up great clods of earth with every swing of the short spade. The sweat is running down my face; my hands are torn raw.

"At last it is large enough to shelter us both, and I drop the spade and pick up my piece. The entire line has finished its shelter. In our little trenches we are firing, two by two. The best shots are making good practice.

"The seventy-fives are roaring continuously. How far does this line of battle extend? As far as one can see on each line the wavering line of men can be seen. The bursting of shells, the dry barking of the cannon, the rattle of the small arms and the machine guns, the shrieks and cries of the combatants, make a bedlam—a horrible dream of chaos. Some of the wounded are crawling and wriggling, like worms, back to the farm.

"My neighbor drops his piece to pick up the spade and rearrange our embankment, already somewhat displaced by the bullets. He utters a howl of rage. A bullet has torn off a finger. Crying with rage and pain, he sits up, ties a handkerchief about the wound and then settles back to work, firing madly.

The Trenches Taken.

"Suddenly, on the right, another noise; one of our machine guns has opened up. Some three hundred yards away and at a height equal to that of the German trenches two sections of marines have unlimbered their machine guns. The German fire slackens for a moment. Our instinct warns us that the decisive moment has approached. Without slackening fire our heads turn toward the captain. His revolver slips out of the holster; we know what that means! Our seventy-fives stop. Down the line goes the order, 'Fix bayonets!' Then, 'Forward!'

"With savage whoops we spring out of our shelters. Down below the Zouaves are dancing across, with bayonets ready, and we put on a burst of speed. It is a race to the enemy trench, but this time the Zouaves win, and when we jump, cheering, into the trench, ripped by the shells of the seventy-fives, heaped with bodies and with wounded men, into the horrible, unspeakable muck in which the dying wallow, the Zouaves have just killed the last German who resisted. What is left of the defenders are running toward the woods.

"While our two supporting companies are preparing the captured trench for defense and clearing up the horrid mess we advance cautiously as skirmishers through the trees, firing upon the fugitives. We have gained a hundred and fifty yards when a determined fire rings us to a halt. They have more trenches there. Crouched behind the trees, we keep up the fire. My left hand, blistered by the spade, is a mass of burns from my hot gun barrel. My pack is once more left behind me, in a hole somewhere that

British Prisoners Interned in Berlin Shine in Vaudeville

German Newspaper Publishes Programme to Refute Lord Kitchener's Charge, Made the Same Day, That War Captives Are Mistreated.

(Special Dispatch.)

BERLIN, June 5.

"It is rather a pleasing coincidence," says the Berliner Tageblatt, "that on the evening of the day when Lord Kitchener made his ridiculous announcement of the cruel treatment of English prisoners of war in Germany a monster concert and vaudeville performance was given by the interned Englishman in our midst. The following programme certainly does not give any evidence of mistreatment of British subjects by Germany:—

"This programme was submitted to the commandant, who gladly gave his consent to its performance. The evening was a most enjoyable one and there was not a hitch in the programme. These vaudeville performances are not the only means by which the interned and English prisoners pass many happy moments, but this particular occasion will show that the life of the English prisoners on German soil is by no means an unhappy one, and in many respects quite an enjoyable rest cure."

GERMAN "CORK" LEGS OFFERED TO FRENCH

(Special Dispatch.)

PARIS, June 5.

The marvellous workings of the German brain, rivalling even Bret Harte's "heathen Chinee," who "for ways that are dark and for tricks that are vain" was "peculiar," are instanced by the following, taken from the Figaro:—

"It is only recently that we have mentioned the ridiculous attempt made by certain German business men to organize a Parisian company to exhibit German films. But that was nothing to what we have heard to-day.

"Surgeons and physicians of prominence throughout France have just received the catalogue of a German firm manufacturing artificial limbs. The catalogue declares that these members are manufactured 'at a price defying competition,' and offers to the physicians fat commissions on all orders they may place. Our soldiers may thus exchange their arms and legs torn off by Boche shells for artificial limbs 'made in Germany!'

Thin, Run Down Men and Women

GAIN IN WEIGHT FROM TEN TO FORTY POUNDS

Sargol, The Flesh Builder Gives New Life, New Strength, New Vitality And Puts Firm Healthy Stay There Flesh On People Who Are Underweight

When I started takin Sargol I weighed 123 pounds. Now I weigh 138, says J. G. Wilson. It put new life in every nerve. E. A. McCullers reports he gained 25 pounds and his health was made perfect, sleeps better and feels better than for 10 years. Miss Maud Smith reports a gain of 10 pounds and still gaining. Health greatly improved. When these and hundreds of other once thin, underweight people write to say that as soon as they began to make Sargol a part of their meals they began to get fat, don't you think that there must be something in this widely advertised method of flesh building after all?

Don't you think you ought to try it, particularly as leading druggists everywhere sell it with the positive guarantee that unless it makes an increase in your weight you can have your money back?

You may say, "I am naturally thin. Nothing can make me fat," but until you have tried Sargol you do not and cannot know that this is true.

Thin folks stay thin no matter what or how much they eat and they begin to think food has nothing to do with flesh making. But they are wrong.

Thin people stay thin because the fats, oils, starches, sugars and other flesh and fat-making elements in the food are merely passing out of their bodies as waste. Only enough nourishment is retained to keep the body going. Nothing is saved for flesh making.

Sargol of itself will not make fat. Eat it between meals and you probably will not make a pound. But eat a single Sargol tablet with every meal and soon you may be gaining a pound of flesh a day. Sargol is the missing link between food-eating and fat-making. It makes the food of your meals put flesh on your body.

If the sugar you put in your coffee does not dissolve it does not sweeten the coffee. It is the dissolving, not the sugar, that makes the coffee sweet. It is the same with your food. Unless it properly dissolved in your stomach, separating the flesh-making nourishment from the waste, and unless the blood absorbs its full portion of the fat-making material you must stay thin.

Here is where Sargol plays its part. It acts on every mouthful you eat. It promptly stops the leakage of fats. It lets only the waste leave the body. It puts your food in a condition that means perfect assimilation by the blood and tissues. Your body cells thrive, and soon starved begin to thrive and you begin to take on weight quickly. It's not a theory—not an experiment, but a proved fact that thousands are trying every day. Sargol succeeds where all other so-called flesh builders fail because it enables you to get 100 per cent. efficiency from your food.

Your good common sense must prove to you that if the food you eat pays you only 25 per cent. of its 100 per cent. value, that you are cheating yourself just 75 per cent. You can never be the man or woman you should be and can be so long as you continue to live on a 25 per cent. basis.

No matter how thin you are or how long you have been thin Sargol should add pounds of solid, healthy stay-there flesh to your weight and make your figure plump and symmetrical. Get a package of Sargol from your dealer and prove it to-day. Use it as directed and watch your daily meals put pounds of flesh on your body. Sargol is absolutely harmless and is always sold on a positive guarantee of weight increase or money back by

A Scene Before the Mirror.

What the jungle ladies of Africa lack in clothing they make up in hair adornment. Some styles are pleasing, while others are very grotesque. Their hair combs are made of a very tough wood, and they need be tough, for one of the feminine customs is to put gum all through their hair to keep it in place. A very strong comb is needed to get it apart, but the women contrive somehow to do it, and as time is not money in Africa they are never in a hurry. One is not surprised to learn that sometimes it takes a woman a week to have her hair properly arranged.—Christian Herald.

Aftermath.

"Aftermath" is a persistently ill used word. Early July is the time of the "math"—that is, the first mowing of the meadow. The short grass with a sufficiency of rain will grow again, and later will come the "second mow," or "aftermath." The phrase "The stars and its aftermath" seems a favorite with some story writers, but it is difficult to understand how a storm can have a second mowing.

No Place For Letters.

A learned young woman of Boston was spending her vacation in a little country place. To the local bookshop of the village she went one afternoon and made known her mental wants to the clerk:

"I should like the 'Letters of Jane Welsh Carlyle.'"

"I beg your pardon, miss," said the clerk, "but this ain't no postoffice."—New York Globe.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MODISH SUSPENDER SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

The suspender skirt is stylish and at the same time simple for the home dressmaker. This design consists of two gores, seamed at each side, a yoke facing laid over the upper part of the skirt, and suspenders. The hem facing, and yoke facing as well, may be omitted if one prefers to save the material and the time required, but they are excellent style features and deserve to be retained if possible. After cutting out the pieces close the seams of the skirt, except at the left side, which should be left free about twelve inches for the placket.

Then close the right seam of the yoke facing and arrange the facing on the skirt with the upper edges even. The placket should be finished and the skirt mounted on an inside belt before the hem is turned. As soon as the length is determined the hem facing may be basted in place. After that comes the pocket, unless one prefers to omit it, and, lastly, the suspenders. The suspenders should be lined, buttonholes worked in each end, and the back ends crossed in buttoning to the skirt.

Almost any sort of plain blouse may be worn, something made of organdy, lawn, voile; or, if the skirt is a wool material, crepe de Chine, satin or China silk may be used for the blouse. The skirt itself may be made of serge, gabardine, poplin, taffeta, pongee, cotton corduroy or linen. For medium size, with yoke and hem facings, 3¾ yards of 44 inch material would be required. The pattern, No. 7,170, comes in six sizes, from 22 to 32 inches waist measure. Price, 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

JONES WROTE POETRY.

And Laid a Layer of Bricks For Every Line He Composed.

Several years ago I wrote an essay for the Atlantic Monthly on "The Hundred Worst Books." For a place in the list I selected a book in my library entitled "Poems on Several Occasions," published in 1749 by one Jones, a poet whose name was unknown to me till I perused his verse. The pages were so fresh that I cherished the belief that I was the only reader in a century and a half. I had the pride of possession in Jones.

It was some time after that I came across, in Walpole's letters, an allusion to my esteemed poet. It seems that Colley Cibber, when he thought he was dying, wrote to the prime minister "recommending the bearer, Mr. Henry Jones, for the vacant laurel. Lord Chesterfield will tell you more of him."

I was never more astonished in my life than when I visualized the situation and saw my friend Jones "the bearer" of a demand for the reversion of the laureateship.

It seemed that Walpole was equally surprised, and when he next met Lord Chesterfield the eager question was, Who is Jones, and why should he be recommended for the position of poet laureate? Lord Chesterfield answered, "A better poet would not take the post, and a worse ought not to have it." It appears that Jones was an Irish bricklayer and had made it his custom to work a certain number of hours according to an undeviating rule. He would lay a layer of brick and then compose a line of poetry, and so on until his day's task was over. This accounts for the marvelous evenness of his verse.

This was but a small discovery, but it gave a real pleasure, for should I meet my Lord Chesterfield he and I would at once have a common interest. We both had discovered Jones, and quite independently.—Atlantic Monthly.

ONE VIEW OF BISMARCK.

Talking of the arts Bismarck said: "Of music I am very fond, but now I have to abstain from hearing it because tears come only too readily into my eyes. My heart is stronger than my head. Indeed, what self control I have has been bought by experience." Many instances occurred during our conversations which gave the truth to this assertion.

The extreme mobility of his countenance and the various shades of expression which passed over it told of a sensitive, emotional temperament. "But I have a fire within me still which burns at times with fury." Upon that I asked, "Are you in reality the iron chancellor?" "No," he said, "not naturally; the iron I have created to use when necessary." And that I believe to be true.

I asked him if he knew Wagner personally. "Yes," he answered, "but it was quite impossible for me to care for him or to encourage his society. I had not time to submit to his insatiable vanity. Before breakfast, at breakfast, before and after dinner, Wagner demanded sympathy and admiration. His egotism was wearisome and intolerable, and his demand for a listener was so incessant that I was obliged to avoid his company. I was too busy with my affairs to be able to give him all or even a portion of the demands he would have claimed upon my time. But I admire his music greatly, though I have been compelled to give up going to the opera because the beautiful and touching melodies I cannot get out of my head; they cling to me, and I find it difficult to release myself from them, and now it tires me to be so much moved."—From "Conversations With Prince Bismarck," by W. B. Richmond, the English painter, in North American Review.

Wind Pressure.

A wind traveling at the rate of three miles an hour presses with a weight of about three-quarters of an ounce upon every square foot of surface which stands in its way. A wind of eighteen miles an hour gives a pressure of one pound and a quarter to each square foot, a wind of thirty-five miles an hour gives a pressure of six pounds on the square foot, a gale of fifty miles an hour thirteen pounds, a storm of seventy-five miles twenty-eight pounds and a hurricane of ninety miles forty pounds on the square foot.

Dogs of Ancient Lineage.

Some breeds of dogs are of comparatively modern origin. But when it comes to determining the ancestry of such a dog as the toy spaniel difficulties in plenty are encountered. The toy is one of the oldest breeds in the world, boasting a proud line of ancestry that carries it back at least 2,000 years and then is apparently lost in antiquity. Another dog as old is the Maltese terrier of Europe, a breed that enjoyed the favor of the highborn women of Rome and Greece a thousand years before the Christian era.

Marcy and His Patch.

Credit is usually given to General Jackson for saying, "To the victors belong the spoils." Governor W. L. Marcy of New York actually made the phrase which cut a big figure in the Tyler-Cass-Van Buren battle. Marcy was perhaps the most bitterly caricatured American prior to Lincoln. He was usually represented with a patch on his trousers labeled 50 cents. That was the sequel to a bill for that amount which he rendered to his state for having had his clothing mended.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Words Not Adequate.

Human emotions may be portrayed with words. Anger and every emotion are common qualities, generally understood. But the external spectacle, the Zambesi that leaps over a 400 foot precipice, the active volcano, the geyser that hurls boiling water into the heavens, the hurricane, the battle, flood, earthquake, conflagration—these elemental things cannot be portrayed by the finest artifice. They must be seen, heard, realised through an impact of the senses before they gain full meaning.—Exchange.

Early Western Banking.

Here is an odd item written by an observer who visited Cleveland in 1840. It will have an amusing flavor for the modern banker.

"In the western states the business of private banking flourishes to a considerable extent. A deficiency of banking capital and the demands of commerce called it into existence, and the competition for money has made it the most certain, and perhaps the most profitable business of the west."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Her Name.

"I beg your pardon, madam," said the society reporter, approaching one of the occupants of a private box at the opera, "but will you oblige me by giving me your name?"

"Mrs. Archibald Jo Neeze," replied the lady haughtily.

"Pardon me," repoined the reporter. "I did not quite catch your last name."

"Jo Neeze."

"May I ask you to spell it?"

"Certainly," said the woman; "J-o-n-e-s—Jo Neeze."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Cleaning Shoes.

Very few people have the least idea of how to clean a pair of boots. The mistake that nearly every one makes is of failing to brush the boot clean before putting on the blackening. Another blunder is that of putting on too much blackening and not working it well into the leather before starting to polish the boot. When cleaning brown boots it is necessary to get all the dirt out before putting on the polish. Otherwise you cover the dirt with a coat of polish and leave it there for good.

ALLIES FRATERNIZING.

British and French Soldiers Form the Most Surprising Friendship.

One of the few war subjects which has not been exaggerated is the really amazing friendship which has sprung up between the soldiers of the allied armies. If you consider that they cannot understand a word of each other's languages, you might imagine that real intimacy were no more than a dream. Such is not the case. Mr. Atkins and M. Piou-Piou have become actual and real friends, and to see them strolling along in liberty hours, arm in arm and talking volubly, is a liberal education in the possibilities of human nature.

One incident which the writer personally witnessed "somewhere near the front," as the war correspondents say, and which speaks volumes for the friendship of the allied private soldiers, must be prefaced by the statement that some 40 per cent. of the British troops at present at the front are total abstainers. I happened to be walking across the market place of the little town with a staff officer of the British. Just in our way were, I suppose, a couple of hundred French privates. As we came up to them they fell away becomprehensible, backing toward the nearest wall, keeping their faces always toward us, and saluting continually with a surprising enthusiasm. I asked the colonel what he supposed it meant. He replied, with raised eyebrows, that it was altogether incomprehensible.

Three minutes later, having left the colonel at the door of his headquarters, I discovered the key of the mystery. Three British stragglers, who had lost their battalions and were looking for them had wandered into the town. They had come far, and on the way the peasantry, who by this time positively adore "les Anglishes," had offered them the wine which was red. Their French comrades, recognizing their condition, had flocked together to protect them from any possible punishment at the hands of the British officer—whence the manoeuvring in the market-place.

The pains which those French soldiers took subsequently to insure the safety of their charges was a lesson in humanity. After long consultation they decided that the village church was the best place of sanctuary, and accordingly they led them there, procured large trusses of straw, and left them to sleep off their "fatigue," as one of the Frenchmen put it. Two of the culprits proved perfectly amenable and went quietly to sleep. The third, of more heroic mold, no sooner found himself abandoned than he rose swiftly to his feet, left the church, and wandered again through the marketplace, hinting by signs to the passers-by that he was still athirst.

His watchful French protectors rose to the occasion, led him again to the sanctuary, and again put him to bed. Two minutes later he was out again, recommencing his tour of the market place. I do not think I am exaggerating if I say that this performance was gone through ten times, with unvarying patience on the part of the Frenchmen, before the infantryman-errant was at last persuaded to go to sleep. Even then guardian angels in red breeches waited outside another quarter of an hour to make sure that he should not change his mind.

The writer could instance a hundred cases within his own personal knowledge where the instincts of our common humanity have triumphed over the red bestiality of war, from an actual set-to at fisticuffs between a Bavarian and one of the West Surreys in the space between the trenches, with both armies as enthusiastic spectators, to a case of which I was told by an eye-witness, when an Englishman and a German both sacrificed their lives unavailingly, as it proved, to save that of a French peasant boy who had somehow wandered into the very middle of the fight.

His Choice.

Just after the fall of Bloemfontein soldiers were called for, owing to the scarcity of civilians, to work the railway. The weary "Tommies" were lying in a camp one night after a hard day's work, when a sergeant called out:

"Any of you men want to put your names down as railway porters, drivers, stokers, half-boiled clerks, or for any other appointments connected with the railway?"

Silence, broken only by snores. Then one "Tommy" slowly raised his head and drowsily muttered:

"Put me down as a sleeper, sergeant."

A Venturesome Journey.

On his perilous expedition through Tibet Dr. Sven Hedin stained his hands and face like a native's and, disguised as a common Ladakhi, made his way through the country, exploring and collecting information of great value. When the party met strangers the doctor would get down and walk with the attendants driving the baggage and sheep and going by the name of Hadji Baba. Even so, more than once the real business of the party was suspected, and the venturesome doctor had more than one narrow escape.

CURIOUS WAYS IN JAPAN.

One Thing in Particular That Pained a Visitor From Missouri.

I knew before I got here that Japan was queer, but I had no idea that everything was backward. I can't get used to sitting on the floor and sleeping with a tomato can with a napkin around it for a pillow. The easiest way to figure out how the Japanese would do a thing is to think what would be exactly backward in Missouri. When two Japanese meet they bow and bow, giving their heads short jerks as if trying to get salt water out of their eyes. When they separate they tip their hats. When they come into a store they tip their hats. When they buy a ticket they tip their hats. Their elbows are always bent toward their hats.

Japanese never kiss. This pleasant pastime has not yet been imported into cherry blossom land. It is only recently that a few of the Japanese have learned to shake hands. We travelers are hoping that they will take up other great American institutions. Japanese look upon kissing as being low and vulgar, believing that a few moments spent in bowing is much better. The girls feel that way about it, too—they say.

When an ardent young Japanese suitor slips his arm around the girl's waist and whispers into her shell-like ear that she is the only woman who has ever understood him and when she looks up confidingly into his eyes and breathes "You are so strong!" he does not clasp her to his bosom in an ecstasy of joy and plant a delirious kiss on her trembling lips—no, instead of that he gets up and bows politely and thanks her in a few courteous phrases.

One cannot help feeling sorry for them when thinking how many pleasant evenings they miss. From my limited experience I wouldn't give a good old fashioned Missouri kiss for ten minutes of bows.—Homer Croy in Leslie's.

Reversing a Phonograph Record.

A remarkably curious experiment may be performed with any ordinary phonograph. The sound box is reversed so that the needle slopes the other way, enabling the disk to be turned backward by the finger being placed near the center. The effect produced is extremely astonishing. You hear the human voice singing songs backward; you hear the harmony of Wagner backward—plain English sounds like a Chinese language. The most remarkable effect is perhaps to play a chime of bells in this reversed manner. The sound rushes up and up, but there is never a single strike or clash of a bell. The strike on the ear is reversed and is nothing but a sharp "cessation of sound."—Strand Magazine.

Told of Lauder.

Harry Lauder's advance agent is telling a new story having to do with the Scot's caution in monetary matters. An agent for a trunk newly put on the market met Lauder, entertained him at luncheon, and then showed him the stock of trunks of the new model. Later he wrote to ask the comedian if he would mind penning a word or two of praise of the trunk, that his letter might be used in advertising. Lauder wrote in reply: "I liked your trunk so much that I nearly bought one."

HEART WOULD PALPITATE.

HAD WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

Palpitation of the heart is one of the most common of all heart troubles. The heart will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over the system accompanied by weak and dizzy spells, making you feel that you are surely going to die. When you feel this way what you require is a real good heart and never tonic; one that will strengthen the weak heart and build up the nerve system. For this purpose we know of nothing that can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to try your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better within a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble ever since childhood and finds great relief in using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FRENCH TROOPS CONTINUE TO ADVANCE

AUSTRO-GERMANS LOSE HEAVILY IN GALICIA

COUNTER ATTACKS FAIL TO STOP THE ADVANCE OF FRENCH

Pressing Steadily Eastward Towards Lens, Victorious French Troops Take More German Positions by Daring Bayonet Dashes---Three Counter Attacks Beaten Off With Heavy Losses to the Enemy.

NORWEGIAN VESSELS SUNK BY SUBS.

Special Cable to The Examiner.

PARIS, June 8.—Pressing steadily eastward toward Lens, the French have occupied another group of houses east of the Souchez sugar mill by daring bayonet attacks. Everywhere in the region north of Arras the enemy is making desperate attempts to stop the French advance by heavy counter attacks, but without results. An official statement from the war office this afternoon said that the French had made slight progress on the slopes east of the Lorette Hills. The Germans counter-attacked three times during the night but were beaten off with heavy losses. The fighting around Neuville and the "Labyrinth" is piling the ruined trenches with dead and wounded. The artillery fire goes on without cessation, and neither side can collect its wounded. In one German trench the French found several Germans, who had been severely but not fatally wounded, dying from starvation and thirst. The fighting to the south of Arras, where the French launched the offensive near Hebuterne, has brought large forces into clash. The French yesterday captured two lines of trenches northeast of Hebuterne.

FOUR STEAMERS SUNK

LONDON, June 8.—Captain Wirth, his wife and daughter, and fourteen men of the crew of the Belgian steamer Menapier, torpedoed by a German submarine in the North Sea, were drowned, according to despatches received here to-day. Only five members of the crew were rescued.

Three Norwegian vessels have been sunk by submarines in British waters in the last 24 hours, according to other despatches. They are the Burgen steamer Trudvange, of 1040 tons, the Christiana steamer Glitterlind of 650 tons, and the Christiana bark Superb.

PETROGRAD, June 8. — Five thousand Austro-Germans were killed and 720 taken prisoners in a bloody engagement in southeast Galicia, the war office announced to-day. Those losses were suffered by the enemy on one sector alone between Kolomea and Nadvorna. Along other portions of the battle front in southeast Galicia the Austro-Germans also lost heavily in killed and wounded. Despatches to the war office to-day admitted that the Russians who evacuated Przemysl have withdrawn several miles to the east of the fortress in the direction of Lemberg. The Russian positions around Lemberg were described as satisfactory

EXCEEDS 8,000 NOW

OTTAWA, June 8. — The Canadian casualty list now exceeds the eight thousand mark, the total up to ten o'clock this morning being 8,008. The killed number 1,213, wounded 5,230, and missing 1,565.

From the missing there may now be deducted almost a score of men formerly reported missing but who have now turned up and have joined their regiments. Cabled statements that the Canadians have been resting in reserve for the past few days means that the casualty lists may be smaller now for a while.

River Completely Choked With Dead

The Dubysa Changed Hands Five Times in One Day and Bridge Was Laid Over Dead Bodies—A Fierce Conflict.

FOUGHT IN THE WATER

LONDON, June 8.—The Post's Petrograd correspondent says: "The fiercest fighting of the war as far as the Baltic provinces of Russia are concerned, occurred a few days ago in a battle for the mastery of the Dubysa river. The river changed hands five times in one day, and at nightfall the stream was completely choked with the bodies of thousands of dead, so that a plank roadway for the artillery was laid by the victorious Russians across a solid bridge of bodies. The Dubysa although wide, is so shallow it can be crossed on foot at some places. The Russians and Germans met at a ford half a mile wide north of Rossijeny, where they fought all day in the water. There were several bayonet charges in midstream, and all who fell, even though they were only slightly wounded, were drowned. The troops on both sides in their attacks and counter-attacks late in the day advanced over the bodies of the dead.

CITY'S PAVEMENT COSTS $11,120 PER MILE PER ANNUM

Business-like Statement Presented by Ald. Green—2 1-2 Miles of Pavement at a Cost of $4,530 a Mile

THE CLEANING BILL

Two and one-half miles of pavement is costing the city $11,120 a year, according to a statement furnished by Ald. Green. The Chairman of the Board of Works prepared a few facts which he told the Council might be of general interest.

Cleaning the pavement costs the city $1,450 a mile.

The debenture interest per annum per mile is $2,760.

This means a total of $4,530 per mile, as the cost to the present taxpayers. Over half of that of course represents the original cost, and the rest is really upkeep.

Ald. Green said he did not wish to throw cold water on the construction of new pavements. The figures were a reminder that the expenditure connected with a pavement does not end when the construction work is finished. Cleaning and watering by the figures quoted cost $1,770 per mile a year.

Mayor Buller referred to the permanence and satisfaction from the pavement. No stronger indictment of the old system could be found than the present condition of Charlotte Street, from the Boundary to Park Sreet. A few years ago it was put in first-class shape. To-day it is as bad or worse than ever.

Y. M. C. A. CAMPAIGN IS IN FULL SWING

Workers Gathered at Supper Last Evening and Planned To-day's Work—Short and Cheerful Addresses Given.

PTE. CHAS. MULLIN has written his mother from a German hospital. First information since he was reported missing.

NOTES OF THE CANVASS

Last night the assembly room at the "Y" was a scene of intense activity. For why? Because

It was the culmination of the preparation for the big campaign that has been in progress of incubating for the last three weeks. Such enterprises are the result of some preparation, and the more careful the preliminaries the more likely that it will be successful. So the directors had met and determined that a campaign should be put on and the work was taken up. Its objects have been already referred to and need not be mentioned here. Any one who does not know must by this time be either deaf or blind or most heartlessly indifferent.

President Geo. Gillespie sat at the head table. The head table is not any better supplied with provender than any other table. In fact it occurred that there were pickings at some others that had been left off the one at the top. For instance, specially lucrative places had been provided for the press, and the press failed to put in an appearance. Distinct loss for the press. We should never neglect our opportunities.

Most competent and zealous ladies, concerned and connected with the "Y," provided supper. For this large thanks. Woman is often of uncertain age and hard to understand, but when she gets down to provide and serve a Y.M.C.A. lunch those who are not present have missed one of the joys and satisfactions of life. So the supper was fine, and put out of sight with celerity and diligence.

Mr. Gillespie spoke words of encouragement. Brief and to the point. Mr. C. M. Copeland, of Toronto, who holds an important position in the association work, gave a short and cheerful address. He spoke of what he had been told as to the value of Y.M.C.A. training to many of the men in the trenches. The effect as shown was and would be a mighty factor in inculcating a spirit of thoroughness, a fine sentiment of loyalty and determination to do the very best possible. It was a feature of esprit-de-corps, and a bond of sympathy between man and man. Army officers expressed the same view and bore testimony to it. Brought out a spirit of faith in the cause, optimism and stick-at-itiveness. That was what would tell in the final analysis.

Mr. E. A. Peck had a few things to say. Very few, but good. Mr. Peck is an inspiration, in a quiet way, but it is recognized that the things he is interested in are good things to help out. He is on the right side, a good side to be on!

Mr. H. B. Cowan had the floor for five minutes and said a whole lot. The "Y" has no warmer friend, heartier worker and general push than Mr. Cowan. Responsible for a good part of the campaign, a man of faith in the work and hope for the results his short talk helped to inspire the workers.

Then Adjutant McElhiney. A two-horse team in public matters where the matter of giving is concerned. Works quietly, but it will be a surprise if he does not land some important fish. Fish, it may be explained, means contributors. The Adjutant said things. Things he will back up. He looked on the "Y" as an investment that would pay good dividends.

Speaking of the "Y" some one said that of the men who had enlisted, sixty-nine had been trained and associated with the Peterborough "Y." That is out of the enlistments from Peterborough. A good showing. And it can be depended on that among the bravest and steadiest and reliable will be found those "Y" men. Pity the Germans had'nt a "Y" or two to inculcate something of honour and decency. But, German, whew!

It is understood that this evening there will be shown at Central Park a whole raft of fine limelight views of things. Battle scenes, portraits of local boys. Y.M.C.A. pictures. Well worth looking at. Come out and add to the crowd. Without money and without a nickle. Free for and to all Sure thing. All to help on the work and swell the fund. Once convinced the people will give freely. One team captain said he had been out all morning and not turned down once. Went most hopeful and cheery. His

PTE. CHAS. MULLIN RECOVERING IN A GERMAN HOSPITAL

Fragment of Shell in His Leg at Langemarck—Says He is Being Treated Well and Is Able to Sit Up

ASKS FOR CAKE AND MONEY

Mrs. Geo. Grant, 1033 Water street, received a post card to-day from her son, Private C. Mullin, 5th Battalion, Canadian Reserves, who is wounded and a prisoner in a German hospital. The message lifted a weight of anxiety from his relatives and friends as only the report that he was missing had been previously received after Langemarck. Private Mullin writes as follows:

"My Dear Mother—I suppose you will have received Queenie's letter by now telling you that I am wounded and a prisoner of war. I am in the hospital at present being treated. I was hit in the right leg with a piece of shell, but am getting on fine. I can sit up in bed and write. I hope, dear mother, you are not worrying about me as I am well looked after. The Sisters and helpers are good to us. Don't expect a letter from me often as I am only allowed to write once in a while. I consider I am lucky to be able to write at all. I wish mother, you would send me plenty of cake and chocolate and nice things to eat. You dont have to pay any postage to prisoners of war. Now, mother, I want you to write me often, too, and in your letters don't mention the war. Please send me a hat, size 7 1-4 and a couple of socks.

From your loving son, Charlie.

Please send me a little money if possible.

His address is—

WHAT WE ARE FIGHTING FOR.

We have often sympathized with the child's inquiry in Southey's little poem—

"Now tell us all about the war
And what they killed each other for?"

But we have no need for such an inquiry in this present great war. We know what we are fighting for, and what we are fighting against. We are fighting for human freedom, national honour and keeping plighted word. We are fighting against a monstrous militarism, against a system of duplicity that makes honour, mercy and peace only a memory, conjoined with an insane ambition, whose way to realization lies over every consideration that involves the good and ennoblement of humanity. We are fighting for international honesty and good faith, of which Germany and her gang are the embodied enemies. We have this borne in upon us every day. Germany gives official sanction and aid to the forging of passports—even doing the dirty work officially — to promote her monstrous system of spying and lying. When whole-cloth stories can be invented, as in the case of Brigadier Turner, and forged documents published as if found upon his person, to carry the idea of the cruelty of Canadian war methods, we have further evidence that Germany has lost all regard for truth and decency, to be added to the ruthless cruelty she is every day perpetrating. We read so much of German atrocity and savagery, that we sometimes fail in appreciation of its enormity. Against all these things we are fighting, and that is what half the world is "killing each other for" to-day. We are fighting for the good of humanity, and fighting against the degradation of humanity, and its enslavement to ideals that have their genesis in hell.

INFORMING THE PEOPLE.

Those ratepayers who think they are done with a street pavement when traffic is turned upon it, are under a delusion. They are something like a citizen of Peterborough, who had an obsession of paying his way by notes. When a bill would be presented, he would give his note for the amount, with the exclamation—"Thank goodness, that bill is paid!" If any citizens have any delusions as to what paving streets means, Alderman Green, chairman of the Board of Works, dispels it. At the Council meeting last night he presented a detailed statement, to be found in our news columns, showing that the responsibility only begins with the physical completion of the pavement. He showed what will be required to meet interest and sinking fund, required to pay for the pavements; what their cleaning and maintenance will cost. This action upon Alderman Green's part may only be useful as a reminder of the responsibilities we assume in providing the great boon of paved streets; but it shows something else. It shows that, to use the language of the street—paved or otherwise — Alderman Green is "on the job"; that he takes his duties seriously and recognises his responsibility to keep informed the people who have to pay. This is commendable and necessary. There is a disposition on the part of government and administration bodies, large and small, to constitute themselves close corporations—to keep the public, to whom they are responsible, whose money they spend, and whose interests they are supposed to serve, in the dark. There should be more and better understanding, especially in civic matters, between the governing and the governed. In connection with all important civic enterprises, the people should be taken into the confidence, judiciously of course, of our civic rulers. We are committing ourselves to a great financial responsibility in respect of a great public utility—electricity for light and power. But we don't know much about the extent of the responsibility we are assuming. We are not informed, or kept informed, as should be done to people who have to pay the shot. The public is in the darkness of ignorance of the condition of our sewage disposal plant enterprise, but possibly not more so than the authorities. In these matters the people should know — know what, as taxpayers, they have to face. This does not seem to be a case where mysterious secrecy is necessary. Unfortunately all wisdom is not under aldermanic hats; and a public knowledge of conditions and circumstances might elicit some suggestion that would help to solve some problem that if unsolved may result in error that will involve large unnecessary expenditure to correct. We have wasted a great deal of money in correcting mistakes.

THE DESERVING RICH.

We often hear the cant phrase, "the deserving poor." Nobody, however, seems to have thought of a variorum reading—the deserving rich. A perhaps unconscious spirit of envy leads us to speak disparagingly of the rich. Even otherwise thoughtful journalists take the popular and superficial view. The Montreal Journal of Commerce, a responsible, well-edited paper, has the following comment:

> John Jacob Astor, son of the late financier who went down with the Titanic, has more than thirty thousand dollars a year spent on his clothes, food, toys, etc. We know of little boys on whom not one-hundredth part of that is spent, yet who are just as good material and probably better than the heir to the Astor millions.

We may not be far amiss in considering such language demagogic. The fact is forgotten that thirty thousand a year spent on a rich boy represents so much employment given to the poor whose labour produced the articles consumed. From an economic point of view, the more spent upon such a boy, or any other person, so much the better. The employment given in the production of thirty thousand dollars' worth of articles is better than thirty thousand given in charity, with the possible and probable result of corresponding pauperization and deterioration of citizenship.

We have in these times numerous examples, many in Canada, of the deserving rich. This war has brought them out in scores. We have our men of wealth, spending money in equipping regiments, supplying munitions of war, to help the fight for humanity; organizing hospitals and all that sort of work, making their money a blessing to humanity, and an agency in promoting the interests of the highest civilization. We have many other examples of the reserving rich—of rich men and women sacrificing their personal ease, in personal sacrifice, for the relief of the suffering caused by war. One example that will appeal to us here, is that of the wife of Major Astor, who is personally present in the war zone, ministering with her money and personal service to the relief of the wounded—even doing the work of writing letters home for a Peterborough boy, with his pen hand useless by wounds. And where shall we find a nobler example of the deserving rich than Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who on the sinking Lusitania, forgot his wealth, and the pleasures of the easy life it could bring, and in the supreme moment of danger, with his own life at stake, thought only of saving others—at the risk and, as it proved, at the sacrifice of his own life. His last words, "save the kiddies," consecrated that word of slang forever, and in a catalogue of last words of great men, can be found no nobler words than "save the kiddies."

We have the deserving rich and we owe them honour. They not only set an example of the wise use of a tremendous instrument of good, rightly applied—money—but they set us an example in personal sacrifice, that demonstrates that the possession of great wealth, does not in all cases overlie and obscure the noblest impulse of the human heart.

Automobile Accidents and the Drink Habit

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir, — I was present when some gentlemen were discussing the frequency of automobile accidents. One related the circumstances of cases that had come within his knowledge, and another would relate cases that he had known of, or heard of. I was struck with the frequency with which the remark was made "Oh that crowd were drunk." Not all, but a large proportion of the cases referred to had evidently been caused by drink. A young man recently told me of having been out in the country with three other gentlemen. Three of them had some whiskey, but were not drunk, the fourth had not partaken of the whiskey at all. On their way home in an automobile they were running right in front of an express train, when one of them called out to the chauffeur. They were all amazed that they had not seen or heard the train. The one who saw and warned the chauffeur was the one who had had no whiskey.

Science has proved that even one small glass of beer or whiskey will dull the senses of sight and hearing, and the Union Pacific Railroad will not allow an engineer or conductor to take out a train who has had even one small glass of liquor. Evidently they know that many accidents are caused by drink, although the man is not drunk.

We are using three terrible powers, steam, gas and electricity, which call for all the senses with which people are endowed, and to dull these senses is to invite disaster. The killings are becoming terribly frequent, and no one knows when his turn will come to be mangled by the fault of some half-tipsy man. To allow such a powerful engine as an automobile on the public thoroughfare in the hands of a man crazed or stupid with drink, is sheer madness and something must be done quickly to lessen the frequent killings. If it were made a criminal offence for one man to offer another intoxicating liquor it would do away with most of the trouble.—H. Arnott, M.B., M.C.P.S.

Behold the Guns and Ammunition! But Where Are the Soldiers?

Mr. William Howard Taft, ex-President of the United States, and formerly Secretary of War, needs a new calendar. He is under the delusion that this is the time to tell in Mexico, and to publish in Berlin that the mighty in the United States have fallen and the American weapons of war have perished. Mr. Taft has an article in the Saturday Evening Post on "The Military and Naval Defences of the United States; what they are—What they should be." What on earth induced Mr. Taft to write such a humiliating confession of national weakness, such an invitation to the Huns to carry the war into America, Mr. Taft only knows.

"The limit of the regular army now permitted by law," the Germans may read from Count Bernstorff's cabled summary of Mr. Taft's article, "is one hundred thousand men," which includes not only the coast artillery, but four thousand Filipinos officered by Americans and fit to do duty only in the Islands. Then "on June 30th, 1914, the Regular Army consisted of 4,701 officers and 87,781 men. Of these 758 officers and 17,901 men belong to the coast artillery; and 1,006 officers and 18,484 men belong to the staff and non-combatant branches of the army. This leaves a mobile army of 2,935 officers and 51,446 men." With which to invade Mexico, defend the Pacific Coast against the Japs, and form an expedition to wallop Germany!

The present Secretary of War recommends the enlistment of 25,000 more men. Says Mr. Taft, "The Board of Army officers appointed to report on a proper organization of Our third line of defence, estimated that we should need roughly an army of 500,000 men. We have small million men and ammunition enough." How could we raise the remaining 300,000 men of our third line of defence? Some effort was made in the second Congress of the last Administration to provide for a reserve of men trained in the regular service. It has proved an entire failure and has attracted not more men than enough to furnish a dinner company for Congressman Gardner." The Berliners must shriek with laughter and cry triumphantly "No wonder the war lord of Washington roars like a sucking dove!"

Mr. Taft wants to increase the number of coast fortifications and lengthen the range of the guns and to organize an International League of Peace. The guns will need a very long range indeed to protect American interests and the lives of American citizens in the war zone. The resolutions of the Peace League will be about as potent in protecting the United States against German piracy and treachery as were the rules of the Hague Convention and the Scrap of Paper in protecting Belgium.

But Mr. Taft has been so childishly frank in confessing the impotence of the United States that he has fearfully exaggerated the weakness and helplessness of his country:—innocently, of course. In these days of broken treaties and brutal warfare, diplomatic common sense may save a great nation which is weak from a military point of view, from humiliation and injustice. A few good alliances would be worth more to the United States, to-day than all the coast defences, peace leagues, and pledges bearing dishonored signatures, ever dreamt of. If the great bully of Europe and the world is held in check to-day it is because all the great powers of Europe are in alliance against her. With the exception of Great Britain which is still supreme upon the sea, not one of them could stand against Germany alone. If the United States has plenty of ammunition and rifles for half a million men, but not nearly enough men to use them and no hope of getting the men, why not send the ammunition and rifles to one of the Allies which has plenty of men, but is short of ammunition and rifles. Why should not the United States Government itself manufacture shells by the million and explosives to charge them, and get the Allies to fire them in defence of civilization in general and the United States in particular? Notwithstanding the weakness which Mr. Taft bewails, the United States of America can strike a more effective blow at the Huns than all the Balkan States together. Lloyd George declares that the fate of England and the Empire depends upon the masters and men of the workshops. How long would the liberties of America survive the liberties of Europe? Such alliances as now exist cannot be made every year.

Then, as to the recruiting capacity of the United States, is it really so much inferior to that of Canada? In 1914 the Canadian Permanent Force consisted of 3,520 men and the active militia of 73,000. But we had nobody to tell us of our impotence, and to the present war we have sent fully fifty thousand, more are going all the time, and we have thousands more ready and eager to go. We are not great on coast fortifications, but as we see our men marching to the ships we paraphrase the Spartan King and say: "These are the walls of Canada and every man is a brick."

AN OLD-TIME POEM REVIVED.

Note.—The author of this recalls at this present time a song, a favourite of his dear departed father. Believing it to be appropriate for the present hour, it is herewith presented:

Mark that Pilgrim—lowly binding
At the shrine of prayer ascruding,
Praise and sighs together blending,
From his lips in mournful strain.
Glowing with sincere contrition,
And with child like blest submission,
Ever riseth this petition
"Jesus come, oh come to reign."

Here the wicked lives securely,
Of to-morrow boasting surely,
While from those who'er walking purely,
They extort dishonest gain.
Yea the meek and burdened driven,
Want and care to them are given,
While they lift their cry to heaven,
"Jesus come, oh come to reign."

Kingdoms now are reeling, falling,
Nations lie in woe appalling,
On their sages vainly calling,
All these wonders to explain.
While the slain around are lying
God's own little flock are sighing,
And in sacred places crying
"Jesus come, oh come to reign."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

LITTLE CINDERELLA

She Was Used as a Foil for a More Fortunate Cousin.

By H. N. EGBERT.

Cinderella was a foil for Beatrice. That, perhaps, was the real reason why Mrs. Lanham, who had never been known to do an unselfish act, surprised her intimates by asking her little orphaned niece to make her home with her after her brother's death.

Esther and Oliver Benton had grown up together in the same home in Ohio, and Oliver had supported his widowed mother and sister until Esther's brilliant marriage to a wealthy lawyer. The Lanhams had gone up in the world and when Mr. Lanham died he was one of the richest corporation lawyers in the country. Esther mourned her husband decently for a year; then she moved to New York and soon became a member of the rich and not very intellectual society that finds its doings recorded daily in the newspapers.

Why Mrs. Lanham should have taken little Cinderella—whose real name was Elizabeth—into her home was a mystery until Mrs. Bentham-Jenkins solved it.

"Why, my dear, the reason is perfectly obvious," she said to a friend. "It is only necessary to look at the children's faces. Did you ever see a more glaring contrast between beauty and homeliness? Beauty and the [illegible] and that charity child won't improve with years, either."

Elizabeth heard it and ran away to cry. But she had always known instinctively that the difference between herself and Beatrice was as that between darkness and daylight. Beatrice had an abundance of flaxen hair, merry blue eyes, a contagious laugh, and a figure which gave promise of that quality which is called "svelte." Elizabeth was thin and sallow and lanky, and nobody ever stopped to admire her as they did her cousin.

Perhaps this was partly due to the fact that Elizabeth wore Beatrice's cast-off dresses, after the trimmings had been removed and a certain dowdiness imparted by Mrs. Lanham's deft fingers. That excellent woman knew the value of a foil for her daughter, particularly now that Beatrice was of a marriageable age. Beatrice was kinder. Once she gave Elizabeth one of her cast-off ball gowns.

"Some day you may be invited to a ball,' she said, with innocent scorn, "and then you will be glad to have something to wear. But don't tell mamma or she will be angry.

She did not know that little Cinderella treasured in her room a pair of Beatrice's old slippers which she had rescued from the lumber room just as its contents were about to be thrown away. In the seclusion of her little attic chamber she would dress herself in the gown and in imagination she would be the belle of some ball, the admiration of all eyes. But nobody ever invited Cinderella to a ball; first, because she was only a sort of companion and never met anybody; secondly, because it was understood that after Beatrice's marriage she was to go out into the world and work for her living.

And that date, toward which Cinderella looked forward with rapturous anticipation, was likely to be long delayed, if one could believe in signs. Lester Martin had been a frequent caller at Mrs. Lanham's house of recent weeks. Martin was the son of old Roger Martin, the banker, but he was more than that, although it counted for less with Mrs. Lanham—counted for nothing at all, in fact. He was the most famous architect in America and was the man who had designed the new frieze for the state capitol. He was always very kind to Elizabeth, and because he was the only person who ever noticed her she longed for a sight of him. And one day something very surprising happened.

Lester was calling at the Lanham house, and Beatrice, having heard the news from her maid, was hurrying into her reception gown. Cinderella was all alone. She was just going upstairs—for Mrs. Lanham did not like her to receive her guests—when she met Lester at the door.

"Why don't I ever see anything of you, Miss Benton?" he asked, detaining her.

Elizabeth did not know what to say, so she said nothing.

"You dear little Cinderella," said Lester Martin, and bent down and kissed her.

How she got out of the room Elizabeth did not know, but she was in her room at last, and sobbing as though her heart would break. She cried wildly for hours, until Beatrice came in and found her there.

Beatrice was too much excited to notice Elizabeth's red eyes. She began chattering about Lester.

"Mamma thinks that he is in love with me," she said. "She says he wouldn't come here so much if he wasn't. And it will be such a fine match for me, for his father is worth a cool ten millions, and I shall have carriages and autos and go to Paris each year and [illegible]

"Do you love him, Beatrice?" inquired Elizabeth.

"I don't know. I guess I could," said Beatrice, whirling about. "Mamma says you needn't come down tonight because we are having guests."

She came back presently. "Do you know old Roger Lester is giving a fancy dress ball next month?" she asked. "Yes, the invitations have just come. And, oh, I forgot to say that there is one for you. Mamma has written accepting for me and declining for you."

When she was gone the girl gave way to an access of unrestrained grief. For the first time rebellious thoughts came into her mind. Lester loved her. Else why had he kissed her? No man ever kissed her before. To kiss meant, in her simple view, to plight one's troth for ever. Or had he been playing with her? It was obvious that he meant to marry Beatrice; but then he must have had a passing affection for her. Suddenly an amazing plan took root within her. She would go to the ball. She had never been to a ball, but why should she not go once? It was to be a fancy dress and nobody would recognize her, masked and disguised. There was Beatrice's dress, but that had been altered and Beatrice had had so many dresses that she would never remember that one. And there were Beatrice's slippers.

She trod on air during the next four weeks. She went so happily about her duties that more than once she caught sight of Mrs. Lanham surveying her with amazed disapproval. At last the night of the ball arrived.

"You need not sit up for us," said Mrs. Lanham condescendingly. "We shall probably not be back until late, and you must be up early in the morning to accompany the parlor maid to the station to put her on the train. Poor Mary could never find her way about the streets alone."

Mary, the parlor maid, was going home to pay a visit to her sick mother.

But Elizabeth did not care, for her heart was beating wildly from sheer ecstacy. When the auto rolled away she hurried upstairs and slipped into the ball dress and slippers. Then, with her head and shoulders shrouded in her wrap she went into the street and entered a street car.

Nobody stopped her at the door. Masked, among a hundred other masked women, her presence excited no comment. She recognized Beatrice, in her creation of filmy white, and her aunt, seated among the chaperons and watching her daughter with an expression of admiration in her eyes. But nobody dreamed that Cinderella was there. It was ten o'clock. Two hours—and then she must go home as silently as she had left.

The music intoxicated her. Elizabeth could dance divinely. The little drudge was in heaven as one partner after another took her upon his arm and swung her out among the dancing couples. But when she saw Lester approach and gravely ask her, her head swam and her eyes filled with sudden tears.

"Shall we go into the conservatory?" he asked, when the music stopped. He offered her his arm. At the door of the ballroom they passed Beatrice and her mother. Their eyes rested on her, and with a sudden terror Elizabeth perceived that she was recognized.

Mrs. Lanham rose to her feet with an exclamation of anger, and, overcoming herself with an effort, scowled at her. Elizabeth trembled with fear. She had not calculated upon the aftermath.

"What is the matter?" Lester asked, as they sat down. "You are not feeling well? May I get you a glass of water?"

"Do you think I do not know who you are, Cinderella?" he asked, "for all that mask? See if I can guess. You are Miss Benton and you ran away to the dance because Gorgon would not let you go."

"And I can never go home," said Elizabeth in panic. "She recognized me. I had never been to a ball before and I could not bear not to just once. I don't know what I shall do."

"I'll tell you," said Lester. "You need never go home again if you will marry me."

He mistook the look in her eyes.

"O, Cinderella," he cried, stretching out his arms longingly, "I love you with all my soul. It was you I went to see, not Miss Benton. I know all about your circumstances and your unhappy life. But, Cinderella, I want you for my own, and I know a clergyman over in Jersey who doesn't go to bed till twelve, and if we take a taxicab we can just make it. Will you come with me, Cinderella, dear?"

"Yes," sighed Cinderella happily, and that was the second time he kissed her.

KILLED IN ACTION.

Vacant is now his place
No more his dear, loved face
Still bright with boyhood's grace
Shall ye behold;
Dim are the smiling eyes,
And 'neath far foreign skies,
In a red grave he lies
Pallid and cold.

Not by slow wasting blight,
But in the thick of fight,
For country, king and right
Nobly he fell;
Where thundering cannons, roared,
And a fierce Teuton horde,
A deadly torrent poured,
Of shot and shell.

With golden pen shall fame,
Inscribe our hero-s name,
In characters of flame,
On history's page;
Record each gallant deed,
Glory, the stainless meed—
That the wide world may read,
To times last age.

Then dry those bitter tears,
Soon life's few troubled years,
Beset with cares and fears,
Will pass away;
And ye shall meet again
Where parting death and pain
Or strife's discordant reign,
Come not for aye.

Better at duty's call,
For freedom's cause to fall
Ere grief has turned to gall
Joy's chalice fair;
When hopes gay dream has flown
Friend, trusted, faithless grown,
Till heaven's sweet love alone
Saves from dispair.

Tho' o'er that barren sod
No gentle lilies nod
The watchful host of God
Ward ever keep;
Sound as in churchyard bed
Amid his kindred dead
Proud marble at his head
Shall be his sleep.

Weep not with drooping head,
As those whose hope is fled,
Rather rejoice instead,
That he has won;
Rest 'ere the shadows grey
And full regard as they
Who bear the toilsome day—
Till set of sun.

THE SLAUGHTER OF THE INNOCENTS

BY CAPT. STANLEY HUNTLEY LEWIS.

Unseen, the vicious viper lurks,
Two leagues beyond the land;
And oh, the hate, the bitter hate,
That nerves the guiding hand!
Above her deck the herring play,
The scaly hake and sculpin stray,
The gaping weakfish throng;
The seaweed, where the swift tide swirls,
Hangs from her sides in floating curls
Like sodden hair of long-drowned girls;
Half blind, she gropes along.
Below, the deeps are ghastly gray;
Where, in the broad sea lane,
Securely safe from watchful eyes,
Slinking and venomous she lies,
Awaiting death's most piteous prize—
To choose the Sinless Slain!

Full speed ahead toward her port
The floating palace drives,
Bearing her precious, heedless freight,
Two thousand human lives.
About her decks the voyagers stand,
And happy lovers, hand in hand,
Are gazing toward the distant land—
The journey's almost o'e'r.
Soft breezes odorous and clean,
Blow o'er the bow, and dimly seen,
Lies the low strip of vivid green
That marks the Irish shore.
A fin-like object cleaves the spray—
A single whistling breath
Comes from a tube of compressed air;
A widening wake is marking where
The grisly viper, lurking there,
Has launched the bolt of death!

The craven blow has found its mark—
Dull-muffled thuds the stroke;
From out the stagnering steamer bursts
A cloud of lurid smoke,
No craft to hear the drowning calls—
The useless boats jam in their falls,
As lower sinks the wreck;
Their last gaze on the bright May skies,
Women and children cling like flies
Upon the sloping deck.
Of what avail to flout God's laws,
Proud Wilhelm? Has it helped thy cause
That babies' blood be spilt?
Before the throne of Him on high
Will outweigh all thy majesty.
"Help save the kiddies," last choked cry
Of dying Vanderbilt!

A foaming vortex marks the spot
Where once a good ship rose;
Dotted with futile clutching hands,
The oil-streaked whirlpools close.
"Life's beautiful adventure," so
Much-loved Frohman said;
His noble work was nearly done,
The most of his life's thread was spun;
But how about each tiny one
Whose little life was just begun,
Now with the nameless dead?
Below the cool, translucent deep
Until the last great day they sleep,
Victim's of war's red rage—
Waiting the final call divine,
Beneath the green Atlantic brine,
Vanderbilt, Frohman, Charlie Klein,
The genial-hearted "Philistine"—
Fair Roycroft's kindly Sage!

Proud Wilhelm of the Mailed Hand,
These folk were of a neutral land;
What quarrel had these babes with thee?
Had these mothers harmed Germany?
Had Frohman ammunition stored,
Or Elbert Hubbard drawn the sword?
When, stripped of pomp and pride and place,
You grovel at the Throne of Grace,
When these drowned innocents you face,
Denied their own home god;
When, answering the final call,
Naked and whimpering, you crawl
Before the mighty Lord of All,
WHAT WILL YOU SAY TO GOD?

Capt. Lewis was in Peterborough last summer with the Washburn Show, which remained a week at the Exhibition Grounds. His red car attracted considerable attention. Capt. Lewis is a friend of Mr. Chas. Brownlee.

Rainfall Came In Nick of Time Crops Benefitted

Immense Advantage Will Accrue to Peterboro' County as a Result —Half an Inch of Rain Fell

FARMER KILLED

Just what last night's rainfall will mean to Peterborough county would be difficult to estimate. It came in the nick of time. The crops were beginning to take on a parched appearance, and a few more days of drought and the prospective hay crop would have suffered considerable depreciation. Approximately half an inch of rain fell during the night or, to be more exact, decimal fifty-six. The temperature dropped to 45 degrees from its high level of yesterday, which was 81 degrees. The rainfall last night will prove a boon to the farmers, many of whom were predicting blue ruin, while to the dust-laden citizen it will have an advantage of another character.

RAIN WAS GENERAL.

Woodstock, June 8.—Heavy and widespread rains yesterday have done much to balance the damage caused by the frosts of a fortnight ago. Though hay will not be up to the 1914 averages, and barley has suffered greatly in many districts, the prospects for a heavy cut of clover are said to be excellent, and wheat is now thriving. In the eastern part of the county oats will make a notable crop, several farmers reporting stands averaging eighteen inches high.

FARMER KILLED.

London, June 8.—A tornado which swept the south-east part of Downie Township, Perth county, late yesterday afternoon, during a severe rain and electrical storm, caused the death of David Dillabough, aged 80, a retired farmer, destroyed the houses and barns of John Reilly and James Corbett, and ripped up the orchards of both farmers. Dillabough was killed by a branch from a tree that had been uprooted as he was on his way to bring in his cows. He was almost instantly killed, his body being found some hours later.

HEAVY FROST.

Winnipeg, June 8.—The heavy frost of Sunday night did damage to gardens around Winnipeg estimated at thousands of dollars.

Wheat is saved, but practically all early garden stuff is ruined, and a new planting will be necessary.

Voice of The People

Editor of the Examiner:

I see by this morning's Times that our City Fathers have once more taken a stand in the interests of the community by refusing a license to the Greek peanut vendor who has been endeavouring to keep the wolf from the door by selling the "double-jointed" product. Sweeping through the dust clouds, breaking away from such minor details as sewage disposal plants and pavements, our gallant civic legislation saw the peril and rushed in bravely to meet it. It seems a peanut stand shouldn't stand, and this one did, at least for too long periods, between moves. Although its chauffeur kept piloting his machine from the Y.M.C.A. corner as far south as Charlotte Street, there had been complaints, it was said, that he did not move often enough. How a two-by-four push cart is an encumbrance to traffic when automobiles are allowed to be packed along both sides of the street for hours is a piece of reasoning too deep except for the finely trained mind of Chief Thompson and his men. When it comes to a choice between the peanut cart and the automobile, the average citizen will throw his hat in the ring for the former. At least the peanut vehicle never swept down George Street at thirty miles an hour or rounded a corner at twenty miles. Never has it threatened life and limb as some of our motor cars do daily. The incident shows that our Council, brilliant at all times, is at its best when question of peanut policies and politics are to the fore. What does it matter that citizens are being smothered by dust. It may rain once in a while, and the longer the oiling is put off the more chance of the appropriation lasting the summer. What of the dust when big matters like peanut licenses are to be considered?

We would advise our Greek citizen to put a couple of headlights on his push cart. Sprinkle a pint of gasoline over it and take out an automobile license. Then he can leave it standing around anywhere from daylight until midnight, and carry on business as usual.—Yours,

COMMON-SENSE.

LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE BOMBAST

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Under the pretense of trying to secure a day of rest for the working men Rev. W. L. Armitage, according to last night's Examiner, preached in two churches "in the interests of the Lord's Day Alliance" work. Now that is the truth. He is working for the Lord's Day Alliance, not for the working men. How absurd and ridiculous for a man coming around here trying to get a day's rest for the working men when hundreds of poor working men would like to get a day's work. Why the working men who are working get only four days a week in some factories, and Mr. Armitage is trying to get them to rest more. How absurd. It would seem more grateful if Mr. Armitage would preach a sermon on how to get work to earn something to feed the many hungry mouths who are suffering because "Dad" has been resting too much. Lots of people would be only too glad to even get seven days a week working to catch up some of their back rent, or pay the grocer. What say ye grocers and landlords? Are we going to sit silent and hear these Lord's Day Alliance fellows, who are getting paid for talking to come around here talking idleness for workingmen, instead of talking employment? This Lord's Day Alliance has nothing else to do and the people of the community has better sense we hope than to listen to them.

Sincerely Yours,

Common Sense.

Note.—Space is given the above letter, since it is the function of a newspaper to reflect every shade of public opinion decently expressed. The writer forgets that the requirement to work only six days a week is made by the law of the land and any encouragement to break the law is in the direction of creating a low grade of citizenship. If "Common Sense" and those who think with him, desired to bring about seven days' work a week, he should direct his efforts to procuring a change in the law, or its abolition. The Emperor of Germany has set the example of disregard of both human and divine law, and no one would hold him up as a model. We must keep our reputation as a law-abiding people. Even laws that we may personally consider bad are to be respected; and it is not hard to find fault with a law that restricts our actions and is counter to our desires, as illustrated by the couplet of Hudibras:

"No rogue e'er felt the halter draw
With good opinion of the law."

at to-day's cabinet meeting and would be despatched within a very short time. He denied that any serious friction had occurred in the cabinet over the note, though he said that all the members had made suggestions. He added, however, that he was sure all—including Secretary Bryan—would be in accord when the note was finished.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 8.—Via Berlin, and wireless. — The British general offensive on Gallipoli has been repulsed at all points, according to the reports to headquarters here. The casualties of the allies were extremely heavy, hundreds of dead and wounded being left on the retirement. The Turks took many prisoners.

The above is by Berlin wireless.

British Army Headquarters, France, June 8. — Addressing the Canadian troops recently, General Alderson said: "Before we go any further, let us pause and give thought to those brave comrades of ours who have gone. My faith in the Almighty is such that I am perfectly sure he takes to Himself and looks after men like them whatever their lives may have been, who, doing their duty nobly, have died fighting for their country and empire. Let us leave them at that. We could not leave them better. Since May 16 our line, that is the first line, has advanced on a front of just over three miles. The whole hostile front has been captured on a front of 3200 yards and on the remaining portion the first and second line trenches have been captured, and nearly 800 prisoners have been taken, 22 machine guns captured or destroyed and considerable quantity of material and equipment taken. The G.O.C. of the 1st army desires me to express his satisfaction to all ranks on their achievement."

THE AMERICAN NOTE

WASHINGTON, June 8.—President Wilson caused the announcement to be made at 1.15 this afternoon that the German note was complete. Through Secretary Tumulty he let it be known that "he hoped" that it would go forward to-morrow but his cabinet was not unanimous in its approval of the document, and the man whose name it will bear, if the President's plans are completed, Secretary Bryan, left the cabinet meeting determined to fight for modification right up to the very minute that the note is placed on the cables. Bryan believes that the United States is on record for arbitration, so as to make it a mockery to send to Germany a document which he considers savours of an ultimatum, and although the majority of the Cabinet was against him to-day he carried his persuasive powers from the cabinet meeting to the University Club, where he and his fellow members had lunch. It was understood that Secretary Bryan carried to the cabinet meeting a memorandum which he had prepared in which he justified his views that the proposed note was not of a character that the United States should send to Germany. He took the position that the United States in executing arbitration treaties with the great majority of the countries of the world has taken a direct position against war. Although Secretary Bryan will continue his efforts to secure a modification of the note persons close to the president insisted this afternoon that they will prove unavailing. The president is said to have decided after hearing all of the arguments that the safest course for the United States to pursue was to remain firm in its demand that its rights under international law be preserved.

Y. M. C. A. Campaign

experience is a sort of reflection on the cause. You can pretty nearly always tell or gauge a cause by the men who are working for it and are in sympathy with it, and proceeding on that basis the "Y" is a good institution. Sure thing, again.

To-night there will be a rally at the "Y." Suppose you look in. Just to see how things are going. Sort of hearten up the men who may not have had the best of luck.

To-morrow's paper may tell of the takings so far. There are three days. The first may not be the biggest. But the other two days will help to make a record. $12,000 to reach the mark. It will be reached, if good work can count.

Just to show off the calibre of the men who are engaged in the work of shoving to a successful conclusion the campaign of the Young Men's Christian Association the names of the real workers are given below. Lots of others are interested. They would be on the firing line if business egagements permitted. But no matter how important the duty some one has to stay at home and keep things moving. So while their thoughts and hearts are with those who are out on te streets and pushing into the offices and business places those who are actually doing the work of securing the subscriptions are printed below. It is a fair honour roll. Why not come on to-morrow and take a hand. Get your name on the map, so to speak.. Who knows but brass tablets will be put up in the "Y" as a sort of recognition of individual effort. If not enough of the big effort will hang around the place to make identification possible, those who work will be remembered, and deserve to be..

LOST CHILDREN AT POLICE STATION

The Police Station is proving a haven for lost children to-day. Up to 10 o'clock this morning three children had been found and two of them restored to their anxious parents. The third was still occupying the couch, chewing at a stick of candy, and being amused by the Police Officers, who are making efforts to amuse her, awaiting some person to come along and prove ownership.

The first youngster was disposed of when another was brought in. This second, a bright, curly-haired boy, proved to be the son of the late Pte. Douglas Leal, who was killed in action at the battle of Langemarck. The boy could not give his name but explained in his childish way that he lived "across the street." He was quite contented sorting over a bunch of old keyes when his grandmother arrived. Dire threats of "the policeman getting him" have lost their significance to him after his treatment this morning.

The Leal youngser was promised a playmante when a message came over the telephone to send a policeman to Gordon's butcher shop where there was a lost girl. P. C. Lawrence made the trip and returned with a little girl. Almost at the time of his return a lady arrived for the boy.

"Glad To Be Able To Do My Little Bit" Writes Peterboro' Boy

Gunner Arthur Hann Says That It's Up to All Men Who Are Fit and Able to Join—People in England and Canada Have No Idea What the War is Like.

DRIVER A. HANN

BATTERY'S FINE WORK

Driver Arthur Hann, a Peterborough boy with the 4th Battery, 1st Brigade, writing to his sister in this city, gives some interesting news in regard to the local artillerymen. He says:

Very glad to get your letters. Sorry I have not answered before, but you will understand how busy we have been. We have been engaged in this big battle that has been going on. I am quite well and doing fine. Our battery did excellent work and got great praise for it from the colonel and other officers. Our major is quite pleased with us. We have been very lucky, two men killed and about eight wounded. Its an awful war. People in England or in Canada have no idea what's it like. Two shells came in our horse lines. The first one cut a horse's head right off and threw it about twenty feet and killen another, and the next one killed seven belonging to a French battery. The gas shells are awful, but we are giving the Germans hell now, and we will lick them with all their dirty work.

It makes a man's heart ache to see the poor Belgians beating it from their homes, old men and women carrying babies and leading all kinds of animals, mixed up with wounded soldiers. I am not sorry that I joined, because I see that I am needed, and I think it is up to every man that is fit and able to join I am glad to be able to do my little bit.

We are back from the firing line now, having a much needed rest for a few days, but will soon be at it again, because we are doing too good work to rest long. We have only lost four horses. My team is looking fine. I still have the same team, the best in the battery. I picked them myself when I was in Cobourg. We are having fine weather now and the crops are looking fine in this country. You can send me a few Examiners now and again if you like."

Driver Hann has a brother, Corp. Frank Hann, who is with No. 3 company, 1st East Surrey Regiment, and who has been through all the fighting since the war began. Writing to his sister in Peterborough, Corp. Hann says: I have been out here right at the front nearly ten months now, so I guess that by God's will I have come through a great deal of danger quite safe and it is God's will whether I get through the remainder or not, for what is to be will be, and no person on earth can alter it. We have had some very hot work since I wrote to you last, but my good luck has stuck to me right through and I am enjoying splendid health."

FRENCH KIND TO GERMAN PRISONERS

Mr. Paul Rochat, who is serving with the French Army, writing to his wife, who resides at 61 Fredericа street, Toronto, gives a graphic description of the life of German prisoners in a French detention camp. Mr. Rochat was badly wounded last November and was confined to the hospital at Dijon for three months before he was invalided at Algeria. It was while he was staying at Algeria, previous to his return to the front, that he obtained permission from Capt. De Coppett to visit the camp.

Complaints Groundless.

"My first impression," says Mr. Rochat, "was that the Germans have no grounds for the complaint that the camps at Algeria are unhealthy. This on at Latif is situated 4,000 feet above sea level, in an ideally healthy climate. There are 400 prisoners, only four of whom are ill, and they only slightly."

Humanely Treated.

Mr. Rochat states that he chatted to some of the Germans, who appreciated the good treatment meted out to them by their captors. They were glad to be away from the horrors of war, and admitted that Germany would not gain the measure of victory hoped for.

"The men are divided into squads, each under command of their own non-commissioned officer. Upon arrival at the camp the prisoners are undressed, bathed and their clothes disinfected. The latter necessity being only too apparent. First thing in the morning they receive a cup of real coffee with real sugar. At 10 and 5 they have their meals, consisting of rice or potatoes, sausage or stew, and each man gets a pound and a half of good fresh French bread a day. Not war bread."

Good for Evil.

After describing how the men are given manual employment in workshops, where the men work as blacksmiths, carpenters, tailors and shoemakers, the letter shows how those not skilled are employed cleaning and repairing the military buildings, while four of them cook appetizing dishes. The sick are cared for by trained nurses and doctors at a hospital.

"This treatment may seem too kind, and I know through the experiences of friends of mine of the horrors our allied soldiers undergo in German camps, but we are no people to return evil for evil, and victory will be none the less glorious because we shall win without cruelty and with generosity.

Vengeance for Lusitania.

"France is filled with horror at the sinking of the Lusitania. The moral effect has been just the opposite to what the Germans wished. Everybody feels as if vengeance still more terrible than we have thought of inflicting will descend upon them. France and England will hold their heads high and march hand in hand forward to greater accomplishments.

Attachment For Sprinkler Was Delayed Also Shipment of Oil—Ald. Green's Statement at Regular Council Meeting.

WHAT THE COUNCIL DID

The regular June session of the Council last night presented the City Fathers at their best and worst. At the outset they handled communications, deputations, by-laws and similar matters with a business despatch that was commendable. But the break came in the home stretch. The meeting underwent various transformations. At times the Council appeared to be virtually a Board of Works Committee of the Whole, Legal Committee or practically any committee that might be called up.

Like some motor rides, the session started away with a pleasant purr from the motive source, only to develop too much gas, and falter along the return road, labouring under missed strokes in the engine. And in that respect most 1915-model Councils show little improvement on former designs

Too Many Brown Streets.

Robert Reid, J. Gates, E. Coveney, G. Coveney and other citizens residing north of Smith Street and east of the river, petitioned that the Brown Street be re-named. It runs parallel with the river, beginning just east of the bridge. This Street was changed to Auburn Street, but when the concrete sidewalk was constructed the name Brown Street was stamped in the pavement, the change apparently not having been registered. The petitioners said that there was another Brown Street in that section, and also one in Brownton, which gave rise to considerable confusion. They asked that the name Auburn be retained.

Statement of Roll.

Tax Collector Green presented the following statement:

To total amount on roll....$302,922.46
By total amount deposited. 294,283.67

Balance $8,638.81
Amounted collected and deposited during May, $3,417.57.

Acknowledged Letters.

Sir Robert Borden and Harold Wallace, secretary to Premier Hearst, acknowledged the Council's recommendations that after the war preference in employment be given men who have volunteered in the present war.

Fire Chief's Convention.

The annual convention of the Provincial Fire Chiefs' Association will be held in Ottawa on August 24—27. The Council was asked to be represented by the Peterborough Chief and any Council members.

On motion of Ald. Dobbin and Ald. Stratton the communication was referred to Ald Duffus, with power to act.

Trees Shut out View.

A. McNabb of the G.T.R. wrote that the Sherbrooke Street gateman reported that trees shut out the view of Sherbrooke street, west, from his ducket. For the safety of the public he asked that the trees be trimmed to relieve the difficulty.—Referred to Board of Works.

War Tax Reminder.

Copies of the War Tax Act were received from the Provincial Treasurer. This is the Legislature's tax of one mill on all rateable property in Ontario. The Act requires the forwarding to Hon. Mr. McGarry a list of all this rateable property in the city and council.

Sewer for Maude Street.

Ex-Mayor Rush presented a request for a sewer service on Maude Street. It extends north from Lansdowne Street, 240 feet, and is immediately west of Lock Street. The petition includes a short sewer on Lansdowne street, between Lock and Maude Streets. Mr. Rush said that eleven of the fourteen lots had been sold. Nine houses would be immediately benefitted and a sewer service would encourage the building of three other houses. Four residents of Maude Street were present with Mr. Rush, who asked that the Board of Works consider the matter in the near future, and advise him of the meeting.

Ald. Green said he had no hesitation in recommending the construction of this sewer.

Mayor Buller said these residents should receive the consideration already accorded others. A precedent for this kind of work had been established some time ago.

Removed Guy Wire.

E. G. Patterson, General Manager of the C. G. E. Works, wrote that pursuant with a request from the Council he had removed a guy wire at a post near Charlotte Street and Monaghan Road corner, to which objection had been raised.

Factory Affects Insurance.

Arthur Stevenson, Secretary of the City Trust, wrote that the insurance rate on he Municipal buldngs had been advanced from 40 cents to 94 cents, because the old band hall was beng used as a factory. Mayor Buller remarked that the tenant should assume this extra expense.—Referred to Property Committee.

BY-LAW APPOINTING DR. C. H. AMYS AS CITY M.O.H.

By-law No. 1,822 was passed, appointing Dr. C. Hewitt Amys, Medical Officer of Health during the absence of Dr. McPherson, who is on active military service. The salary, ($800) remains unchanged.

CITY WILL OPEN AN EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

Your Committee considered the matter of an employment bureau, which was referred to them, and received a verbal offer from Ald. Dobbin, Executive Officer of the Patriotic Fund, to open a register at the Patriotic Fund office, in which to keep a list of the names of men requiring employment, and also keep a record of the names so far as they may be given to them, of those wanting labour. Your Committee accepted this offer.

Your Committee referred the letter of Messrs. Corley, Wilkie & Duff, written on behalf of Messrs. Henry Hope & Sons, asking for a conveyance of the property on which their factory is situated, to the City Solitor, with instructions to ascertain whether the terms of the agreement had been complied with by Messrs. Henry Hope & Sons, and if so to prepare the necessary papers for the city to carry out its part of the agreement.

Regarding the employment bureau, Ald. Dobbin suggested an efficiency idea, whereby the city would be in a position give the character of the men to be recommended to those who would apply for labour. He advised a few advertisements acquainting the unemployed, and on the other hand farmers and others requiring men of the city's scheme.

This was adopted on motion of Ald. Dobbin, seconded by Ald. Stratton, and the Chairman was empowered to consider and arrange for the necessary advertising.

THE CONSTRUCTION BOND IS RETURNED TO CONTRACTORS

The Legal Committee's report presented by Ald. McIntyre was adopted as follows:

That if an action is brought against the City by T. J. Moore for damages on account of an injury received on the sidewalk on Aylmer Street, the City Solicitor be instructed to defend the city, and to take all the necessary steps, including subpoenaeing witnesses, so do so.

That Messrs. Foley and Gleason, having finished their contract of July 24th, 1914, for the construction of pavements, and given a maintenance bond in connection with it, the construction bond given by them in connection with that contract, be returned to them.

MR. SPENCE TALKS OUT.

One of the paragraphs in the Finance Committee's report read: "That a letter from G. H. Howson regarding an account sent in by the Sanitary Inspector for $9.00 be referred to the Council.

Mayor Buller explained that Mr. Howson had been notified by Mr. Spence that a certain work should be done. Instead of engaging a man to do it, he told Mr. Spence to have it done for him. When it was performed Mr. Spence presented a bill for $9.00 which Mr. Howson termed extortionate. After waiting a month Mr. Spence simply collected the $9 from the city and had that amount placed on Mr. Howson's taxes.

"We can't have our Sanitary Inspector paying citizens' bills," Mayor Buller said. "Mr. Spence paid the workmen out of his own pocket."

Mr. Spence said he objected to being made a scapegoat for citizens who refuse to abide by the Health Act. The Sanitary Inspector quoted the Health Act to the effect that the Council had no jurisdiction whatever in the matter. When such a bill is not paid within one month it is automatically collected by the tax route. The bill was not extortionate. Mr. Spence said it would have cost Mr. Howson more than $9.00 if he had engaged men himself. The Health Act provides no redress except for sums over $2,000. In spite of the Act the Council sent the matter back to the Finance Committee to be "discussed."

DAYLIGHT SCHEME WAS GIVEN A SHORT SHIFT.

Kingston's City Clerk asked the Council to support a request to the Legislature to alter the standard time one hour from April 1st to November 1st. This was the "daylight measure." It was greeted with derision by some of the members. The main propasl was to advance the clock one hour, and its chief advantage was an extra hour of daylight between supper and bedtime, and, of course, getting up an hour earlier in the morning. The people now rising at 6 a.m. would get up at 5 a.m., but the regular 11 p.m. bed hour would really be only 10 p.m.

But several aldermen received the idea with crude facetiousness.

Ald. Dobbin and Stratton moved that the Council support the Kingston proposal.

Ald. Saunders and Ald. Green moved in amendment that no action be taken.

Mayor Buller's attitude was "let the people talk it over more until they decide they want it."

The amendment carried by 6—4, Ald. Dobbin, Stratton, Weir and Evans alone opposing it.

WILL ASK FOR POLICEMEN AT GEORGE STREET CORNERS

Ald. Duffus said he felt the Saturday night crowds on George Street should be more carefully guided, and he moved, seconded by Ald. Green, that the Police Commissioners be requested to provide a policeman at each of the Hunter, Simcoe and Charlotte Street crossings on George Street.

Mayor Buller—"And arrest every auto owner who runs along as if he owned the city; some of these people think pedestrians have no rights."

Ald. Weir—"The slow-going vehicles should keep to the curb."

Any policeman who will show signs of enforcing the motor by-law will win the approval of some of the Aldermen.

STREET CAR SPEED.

Ald. Edgar asked if there was a by-law covering the speed at which street cars may travel. He referred to Saturday night's accident, and said he was informed that cars travel on Park Street at from 30 to 35 miles an hour.

Mayor Buller—While we want to protect citizens, we do not wish to cripple the street car service. It is a credit to the city, and is greatly appreciated by the poor man and others who do not own automobiles. We need make no big noise now, but quietly see the manager and talk it over with him.

ALD. GREEN'S RESUME OF STREET WATERING CASE.

Ald. McIntyre echoed some of the recent questions as to where the watering carts were keeping themselves.

Ald. Green explained matters, but he reminded the Aldermen that every one of them was a member of the Board of Works. That he was chairman was no reason why he alone should receive any blame that might have been stirred up. When the Board of Works first recommended the oiling of the streets, a large deputation of citizens objected. The oil scheme was temporarily shelved. When the auto owners learned that the oil would not injure tires they were satisfied with the proposal and the first obstacle was removed.

The Board decided to get an analysis of the oil submitted by manufacturers before giving orders. Several weeks passed before the results were received.

In the meantime it was believed that an ordinary sprinkler would suffice for spreading the oil, but enquiry showed the advantages of an air pressure apparatus which would secure better control and less wastage. The apparatus was ordered from New York and delivery was assured in two weeks. But it was three weeks before the pressure attachment arrived. This was an unforeseen delay of a week. The apparatus was received three days ago. Oil was not ordered because the Board had been assured that a shipment would reach here on 48 hours' notice. When Peterborough's order was forwarded it seemed that there was a rush of orders from municipalities, and the local shipment was several days overdue.

Ald. Green said the apparatus was tested yesterday (Monday) afternoon, and would be ready for use to-day if the streets were dried. The city is using a heavy oil for the best results from which warm weather is required.

Ald. Green had expected to be oiling the streets by May 20, but the several delays referred to had arisen.

HAVE BEEN WATERED.

Five of the seven watering carts have been used constantly so far this season, putting over 105,000 gallons of water on the streets every day. Some of the streets which were regularly watered before have had to be passed over because two carts were beyond repair. But many good residential streets have never been sprinkled by the city.

Ald. Green regretted not only that there should have been complaints, but that the city was unable to water every street. Under the circumstances the City Engineer had done all that could be expected. Conditions were not nearly so bad as what some citizens fancied them. When a choice had to be made for watering until the oil apparatus was ready the most-travelled roads were selected. When the new system is working well in a short time there should be no more complaints.

IDEA CAME TOO LATE.

During the reading of the by-law to authorize the paying of certain streets previously listed, Ald. Green directed the attention of the Council to the clause pertaining to the payment for the work in ten yearly instalments. He suggested that the debentures be extended over a larger period. It was generally agreed that the surface drains, curbing and pavement base would endure longer than ten years.

Mayor Buller considered fifteen years the limit.

Ald. Green and Ald. Stratton moved to this effect, but City Clerk Armstrong pointed out that this would make considerable change in the by-law which would therefore have to be postponed.

That closed the matter.

CUT IN ON THE GERMAN WIRELESS

Berlin's Only Means of Direct Talk With U.S. Interrupted Often by Storms on Atlantic

"Static," the bane of the wireless operator — the sizzling, bubbling, crackling ripple that snorts and snaps in the receivers when the ether is heavily charged with electricity — is violating neutrality. It is doing its best to cut off communication by wireless between Germany and the United States. It was admitted at the offices of the Atlantic Communication Company, which directs the Sayville wireless station, that because of "static" messages from Nauen are being received in fragmentary form, and that it was necessary to repeat each message several times in order to get it at all.

THEIR ONLY "LINE," TOO.

It is upon the Sayville station that the German government has been depending since the start of the war to keep up communication with the United States through a channel not controlled by its enemies. If communication now should be interrupted between Sayville and Nauen the daily German War Office statement could not be received here without passing through London.

Atmospheric electricity — which is what "static" really is—always makes felt its presence in the months of May, June and July on the North Atlantic. The aurora borealis is one agent which is responsible for much "static," while electrical storms also are much more prevalent at this time of year. Each electrical discharge in the ether causes a wave similar to that produced by the spark of the wireless to surge out. This wave comes in upon the receiving apparatus and is heard by the operator. Sometimes it is a long, meaningless hiss and splutter, sometimes a rattling succession of dots and dashes, as if some joker were pounding aimlessly on some huge key.

IS DIFFICULT ALL TIME.

In any case the sounds disturb the reception of signals. Only the clearest and strongest signals can be read through "static," and faint signals, such as the trans-Atlantic waves cause on the detectors, can be read only with the greatest difficulty. At times it is simply is impossible to read any signals at all through "static." The disturbing element cannot be "tuned out," as can other signals, for its wave is so broad it can be got all over the coils, no matter how far up or down the operator "tunes." And the higher the wave length the worse is its effect. As the trans-Atlantic transmission is made upon a wave length of 4,000 metres or more "static" has a most disturbing influence.

Just Apply This Paste and the Hairs Will Vanish

(Boudoir Secrets)

The judicious use of delatone paste insures any woman a clear, hairless skin. To prepare the paste, mix a little of the powdered delatone with some water, then apply to the objectionable hairs for 2 or 3 minutes. When the paste is removed, and the skin washed, every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain attends the use of the delatone and it will not mar the most sensitive skin, but to insure results, see that you get real delajone.

CITIZENS VOTE ON A $50,000 CIVIC BUILDING

July 6th was selected by the Council last night as the day on which the citizens will be called upon to vote on a by-law to authorize the purchase of land as a site and to erect an electrical sub-station, waterworks office and storehouse. The by-law was introduced by Ald. Stratton.

World-Wide Popularity of Tea.

"In the tea trade there is much talk of enormous increases in the drinking of tea everywhere since the war began. Russia, already a large consumer of tea, is taking more and more to the beverage, now that vodka is banned. In France, tea is beginning to threaten the supremacy of coffee. The greater demand means higher prices in our households, especially as there is said to be no corresponding increase in the supply. Dealers are naturally uneasy as to the position."—London, Eng., "Times," 26th April.

British and French Lines Are Pushed Forward 500 Yards at the Dardanelles

LONDON, June 7.—The Official Press Bureau Saturday night issued the following text of a report on the latest Dardanelles operations, received from Cairo Saturday, which operations resulted in the Allies advancing 500 yards on a front of nearly three miles, covering two lines of Turkish trenches.

"On the night of Thursday the Turks, having heavily bombarded a small fort at the front at the extreme right of the French position, which had just previously been captured by our allies, launched an infantry attack, which was repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy.

"At the same time the Turks set fire to the scrub in front of the left centre position occupied by a British division, and attacked at that point without success.

HEAVY FIRE FROM FLEET.

"On Friday morning Sir Ian Hamilton ordered a general attack on the Turkish trenches in the southern area of the Gallipoli Peninsula. This was preceded by a heavy bombardment from our guns, assisted by the battleships, cruisers and destroyers.

"At a given signal our troops rushed forward with the bayonet, and were immediately successful all along the line, except at one spot, where the heavy wire entanglements had not been destroyed by the bombardment.

"The Indian troops on our extreme left made a magnificent advance and captured two lines of trenches, but owing to the troops on their immediate right being hung up by the wire entanglement they were obliged to retire to their original line.

CAPTURE STRONG REDOUBT.

"The regular division made good progress on the left centre, capturing a strong redoubt and two lines of trenches beyond it, advancing about 500 yards from the original position.

"The Territorial division in the centre attacked brilliantly, advancing 600 yards and capturing three lines of trenches, but though they advanced and captured the enemy's rearmost trench and held it all day and half the ensuing night, they had to be ordered back in the morning to the second captured line, as both their flanks were exposed.

"The naval division on our right recaptured a redoubt and a formidable line of trenches in three tiers, 300 yards to their front, but they too had to be ordered back, owing to a heavy enfilading fire.

RETAKE LE HARICOTT.

"The French second division advanced with great gallantry and retook for the fourth time that deadly redoubt they call Le Haricott. But the Turks developed heavy counter-attacks through their prepared communication trenches, and under cover of an accurate shell-fire recaptured it.

"On the French extreme right the French captured a strong line of trenches, which, though heavily counter-attacked twice during the night, they still occupy.

CAPTURE 400 PRISONERS.

"We captured 400 prisoners, including ten officers. Among the prisoners were five Germans, the remains of a volunteer machine gun detachment from the Goeben. Their officer was killed and the machine gun was destroyed.

"During the night information was received that enemy reinforcements were advancing from the direction of Maidos toward Krithia. Thereupon Lieut.-Gen. Gird had arranged to attack the trenches in front of Quinn's Post. At 10 p.m. the attack was successfully carried out and the captured trenches were held throughout the night. The Turkish casualties were very heavy.

HOLD COMMUNICATION TRENCHES.

"At 6.30 a.m. the enemy counter-attacked heavily and by means of heavy bombs forced our men out of the most forward trench, though we still hold the communication trenches which we made during the night.

"As a result of the operations on June 3 and 4, we have advanced 500 yards on a front of nearly three miles, covering two lines of Turkish trenches. We are now consolidating our positions and strengthening our lines."

THE FRENCH REPORT.

Paris, June 7.—The Ministry of Marine yesterday gave out the following bulletin of operations in the Dardanelles up to June 6:

"On June 4 the allied troops made an attack on the whole of the enemy's front with the object of seizing certain points of his support. The British centre occupied two lines of Turkish trenches, penetrating to a depth of more than 400 yards. The first French division took the enemy's first line.

"During the whole of the operations the allied fleet gave the land forces effective support. The losses of the enemy were very heavy. Ten officers and several hundred soldiers were made prisoners, among the latter being six German sailors.

"Our artillery dominated that of the enemy throughout the fight.

"Two Turkish counter-attacks on the night of June 4-5 were easily repulsed."

A Little Story of a College Man

Y. M. C. A., PETERBOROUGH

A fortune of $100,000 he lost in no time—by various misadventures. As secretary for a famous man he travelled around the world, and knows his Paris and London as he does his home city. To-day he is fighting John Barleycorn. Every now and then he has to go to the hospital—"an alcoholic case", the doctors and nurses call it.

HE IS NOT profane—doesn't even use the word "damn." He is not vicious or degenerate. He lives a clean life. His thoughts are clean. His manners are polished. On Sundays he attends church and the whole trend of his mind is religious.

From one city he goes to another—a broken man,—broken in health, nerves, purpose—but not utterly broken. He is clinging to the faith he was reared in. He wants to be redeemed from the bondage of King Alcohol; and he honestly strives in his stronger periods to overcome his weakness.

This man is in his 30's—a "Y" man. To the Y. M. C. A. he has his letters sent. Here he lives at times. Here he seeks acquaintances and friends. Here he swims and exercises and bowls.

It is the "Y" that holds him back and up and, maybap, the "Y" will finally rescue him.

This man and his friends say "Thank God for the Y.M.C.A."

YOUR MONEY and the money of others like you, made and make the Y. M. C. A.—rear the buildings, equip them, maintain the institution. Isn't it good to know that your dollars, YOUR dollars—are being used in your stead, to rescue from evils of many kinds, young men who are homeless, and many lads and men to whom the Y. M. C. A. may supply what their own home may lack.

YOUR MONEY—give some of it for the upbuilding of men in physical, mental, spiritual manhood. Put some of your money into human life to make it sweeter, cleaner, stronger—in order that this world may be a better place for us all.

The canvass started to-day. It rests with you and other friends to show how successful it will prove. Receive the canvassers cordially, consider carefully---and in line with their arguments and pleadings—and then give liberally. It will be a mighty good investment.

DELIGHTFUL SUMMER DRINKS

Many Tempting Beverages From the Same Bottle

The ordinary Montserrat beverage is made with half a wine-glassful of Montserrat, some sugar, broken ice and a glassful of water. This is delightful and quenches the thirst.

Another Montserrat beverage can be made by using Soda Water instead of plain water. It gives a little more snap—Golfers like it.

Montserrat can also be used instead of lemons for flavouring frozen punches and ice creams.

FINANCIAL AID FOR THE FARMERS

OTTAWA, June 8.—Government aid to farmers in the west who have suffered the loss of crops last year is to be maintained until a crop is assured. This will be known definitely about the end of June, which is the deciding month. Up to the present about four millions have been spent.

All the reports received at Ottawa are favourable to a crop much in excess of last year, both in area and amount of production.

If, however, there should be failure in certain areas, Government action to cope with it will be considered in the light of the new conditions. On the crop showing at the end of this month western farmers will be able to secure financing from the banks till harvest time.

Mr. Burnham on Free Trade

Federal Member Says all Economic Theories Have Broken Down Under Stress of War

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Having read with interest many of your editorials on Liberalism, I would be grateful if you would allow me to reply to some of your statements, as it is high time that we should all realize the necessity of relinquishing theories that may have served their time, but certainly now have passed away. That Britain, unlike all other countries, clings to unprotected imports is not due to the central doctrine of old-time Liberalism, but to a form of expediency which would immediately disappear if she could raise what she is now forced to import. That all economic theories have broken down under the present stress of war only proves what has at last become plain, viz.: that economic and natural laws are totally different both in fact and in application. That was the reason why it became the fashion for distinguished political economists to call meetings of workers and explain to them that since the law of wages was like the law of gravitation, there was no good in kicking. Whatever wages were being paid were the only wages to be hoped for since they were natural "laws" and who would think of arguing about a "law" of Nature. The same things were said of rent. Rent was rent, and that was all there was about it. Water will find the level whether we like it or not, and so will rent. If these so-called discoveries had been like those underlying electricity, etc., there would now be no further trouble except to find employment. Time would do the rest. But lo! Some curious and fairly sensible people denied all this "natural law" talk as applied to wages, rent, etc., and maintained that wages, rent, etc., were social and moral things dependent like religion upon the reason and good heart of mankind more than upon some subtle mysterious underlying influence as in the case of Nature's laws. If the "natural law" people were right then workers' unions were useless, since it is useless to meet and protest against a natural law. It goes on just the same. But the workers did not believe this and formed unions. They said "We can influence wages by combination even if we can't change the laws of chemistry." This was the first great revolt against Liberalism, which is founded upon the theories of Adam Smith, Ricardo, Malthus, Mill, etc. The next thing in the programme was to find out if freedom of trade was another fake "natural law." France, Germany, Russia, United States, Japan, etc., found it out. So did Britain, but she had a monopoly of inventions and of the patent rights that "protected" them so she was not afraid of factory competiion. In a word, she was safe behind a paent-right wall of High Protection of her factories. England was to be the supply depot in manufactures of the world, and to make sure she prohibited manufacturing in Ireland! The next thing to be desired was cheap food, and therefore low wages. Foreign agriculture came in and British agriculture went out. But that did not matter. Cheap food and child labour, and a monopoly in manufactures! What else was needed? Low tariffs in other countries. With low tariffs in other countries the world would lie at England's feet, and it did until the other countries discovered how to "protect" themselves against the "high protection" of exclusive English patent rights, and low wages due to cheap food, and free trade in child labour. From that date the advantages enjoyed by industrial England were enjoyed also by the "other countries," and that is the whole story of Free Trade and Protection. The revolt against Liberalism in Labour parties, Socialist-Labour parties, Socialism, etc., Progressiveism, etc., etc., has now become rampant. When the money-barons and the beer-lords and the giant-employers cease to rule Britain she will throw off her old Liberalism with its remains of "natural law theories," that benefit the rich and would, as it did, consign Labour to its fate. It will become a new Liberalism. If not it will, like High Toryism, vanish into the limbo of unbaptized absurdities. We want no more theories to live up to. This idea of cutting up humanity to fit theories is dead except in the columns of a few Liberal journals. Humanity is the fact, and what are we going to do about it. Life, Home, Justice, Morality, fredom of worship, education constant employment, food-supply! These are the things we should give our time to and not theories of trade which mean freedom only in so far as they mean freedom to the selfish and the lucky to exact toll from the rest. The same observation applies to all theories. Protection is good only in so far as it serves a plain purpose.

To cling to it if it did not, would be no more sensible than to cling to Free Trade when the whole theory of its foundation has crumbled and passed away.

The doctrine that if every man were left free, that is if self-interest were left free, and trade were left free, and employment and child labour, etc., were left free, it would all settle itself into a state of happiness and prosperity, because it must do so, being a "natural law"—has died a "natural" death. What was the immediate result of the discovery of this doctrine in England? Masters and workmen began a fierce conflict because the masters thought they had nothing to do but consult their self-interest and, as the economists said, all would be well. Self-interest or absolute freedom from restrictions works well nowhere, not even in the case of natural laws. Self-interest was the motive of savage primeval man. The Liberal economists wanted to revive it as the foundation of a new gospel and a new civilization. But it tended immediately to drive the world back to primeval conditions, to destroy the whole delicate fabric of civilization built up out of the Christian virtues. To talk Liberalism to-day is to defy the protest of everything within us that says "love one another." All plans must be the subject of control. That is the one fact of the present day. The interest of all, not that of self has turned old Toryism and old Liberalism upside down and inside out. But to try to revive any theory of trade and industry because it is a "natural" and therefore inevitable law is to seek once more to bind democracy in the chains of fate. No theory should be preached as final—certainly least of all that founded on self-interest. The public interest should alone be the public guide. The theories that opposed each other till to-day are the "free and Unrestricted conditions of Liberalism" and "Control by the whole people of all in the public interest," of which Protective tariffs are only one small phase. The public interest as opposed to that merely by the individual is bound to triumph. Freedom has taken on a new meaning.

5 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS.

Mrs. Hattie Massey, Somerset, Ont., writes: "Three doctors diagnosed my trouble as psoriasis, and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and hand and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sign of a sore to be seen. I can highly praise this Ointment enough."

HOW THE COUNCIL BANISHED "THE KAISER"

Last night the Council ganished the "Kaiser." It was a gallant manoeuvre and a great victory. "The Kaiser" is the sobriquet some of the boys dubbed George, the little Athenian peanut vender. It was not for any Teutonic tendencies, for George doesn't know enough English to talk war. He can make change, can say "Good day," and a few words like that, but for the rest he talks Greek with his compatriots. As far as the citizens observed him he was as silent as the "Eye-Sore" of Pomander Walk.

It seems that "The Kaiser's" license as a peddler has expired. Chief Thompson refused to renew it, according to Mr. N. Douros, who appeared at the Council meeting as spokesman for his compatriot. The license required the little Athenian to keep moving and many complaints had reached the Chief that the peanut man anchored his outfit at various points along the main streets. Last fall, "The Kaiser" was hailed before Magistrate Dumble on a breach of his license, but the Magistrate let him go as the winter was near at hand, and he did not think the Greek would brave the weather. Probably Chief Thompson concluded that he had forfeited his right to a new license.

Hence "The Kaiser" appealed to the Council. Alderman Duffus said that merchants objected to George's failure to keep moving. If he would not abide by the restrictions of the license, cut it off.

Alderman Saunders—I can't see that he is doing much harm to the merchants.

Alderman Weir's conscience was easy—He doesn't come over to East City.

Alderman Saunders and Alderman Langford moved an amendment, that "The Kaiser" get his license again, in spite of Chief Thompson's decision.

Alderman Weir said that the onus rested with the police, who should arrest the man if he failed to keep the law.

In the balloting, the Council split even. For the amendment Aldermen Edgar, Saunders, Langford, Weir, and McIntyre; against Aldermen Stratton, Dobbin, Duffus, Green and Evans.

"No peanuts for me," exclaimed Mayor Buller, as he voted against the amendment. Bravos from the peanut merchants, whoever they are.

"The Kaiser's" next move is to get rid of fifteen sacks of peanuts representing his stock on hand, and to forget the hope of bringing his wife and family out from Greece.

PRINCESS PATS ARE NEARLY ALL WIPED OUT

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, June 8.—The following letter was received from Pte. James Ward, one of the survivors of the Princess Pats, telling of the fate of that heroic regiment. Pte. Ward was wounded on February 2, and returned to the trenches April 29.

"The poor old Princess Pats are nearly wiped out. The Battalion at present is about 250 strong."

On May 8th the square heads bombarded us, starting about 4.30 in the morning, and they gave us thousands of shells of all kinds. I tell you it was just one continual roar and explosion. After about six hours of this, every moment of which I believed to be my last, their infantry attacked, and we got in our own. But the attack was a fake, and the shells came over again faster than ever and continued until dark.

"We had several regiments up to reinforce, and we cheered them. They carried 500 rounds of ammunition each, and we needed some of it.

"There were many close calls. One man had two bullets through his cap and one in his bullet pouch. I had two bayonets shot and broken off, and my rifle smashed with a lump of shell.

"The G.O.C. of this division says we are the "stone wall" brigade, and Sir John French gave us lots of praise. But I am sorry to say the poor old P.P.'s lost very heavily. I believe we went in 700 strong and came out about 150. We had three officers left.

"You sought to see the poor old city of—, well, well! If you'd like a few automobiles or pianos, just say the word. The Germans haven't left a roof or wall intact."

THE WORLD OF SPORT

First Prize Fight 188 Years Ago Began With Broadswords and Ended With Cudgels

It will be 188 years to-morrow since the first modern prize fight for the championship was fought. This historic fistic contest was staged at James Figg's amphitheatre in Oxford Road, London, and Figg, the first champion of England, had as his opponent Ned Sutton, a Gravesend pipemaker, who had made a great reputation as a fighter with broad sword, quarterstaff and fists. James Figg's professional card, designed by the great artist Hogarth, announced that he was "Master of Ye Noble Science of Defence." For many years he had been teaching boxing and fencing to the young bloods of the nobility. The Earl of Peterborough, famed as a soldier, was his patron, and built for him an amphitheatre capable of holding some 1,300 people. It was here that Figg's celebrated battle with Sutton was staged.

It was not alone a pugilistic battle for fistic contests were just coming into vogue and were not yet popular. To begin with the combatants were to engage in back sword bouts until one or the other had demonstrated his superiority. The fistic contest was to follow, and after that, if both were able, they were to engage in a bout with the cudgels.

A representative crowd filled the amphitheatre on June 6, 1727. Among those present were Dean Swift and Pope, the great authors; Colly Cibber, Kitty Clive, and other celebrities of the stage, and Horace Walpole, the Prime Minister, with other eminent statesmen. There were almost as many ladies as men.

The broadsword exercises between Figg and Sutton lasted nearly an hour before Figg slashed his opponent on the shoulder, and thus won the honours in the first event on the programme. After resting half an hour, the men re-appeared, and the boxing bout commenced. There were no rules to govern the game in those days, and from the first it was a trial of brute strength although Figg used some science in evading the wild rushes of Sutton. After eight minutes of sparring Sutton rushed in, dodging a blow, and grasped Figg about the waist, carrying him to where the umpires sat. This roused the champion's ire, and in a few minutes he had retaliated by stretching Sutton on his back, using wrestling tactics. After a few minutes of futile hitting, Figg again closed and threw Sutton. The latter soon turned the tables, driving blow after blow to the champion's face. Figg was knocked down, and, after resting 15 minutes, was permitted to resume. In the interval the men swilled much port wine. After a few minutes more Figg threw Sutton, and, when he got up, knocked him down with a blow to the chest. The champion then sprang upon the prostrate body of his foe, shouting, "Is it enough?" Sutton admitted that he had had a sufficiency, and the first fistic championship battle was at an end. Ned Sutton was badly bruised, and covered with blood, but the champion also bore many marks of combat. After a rest, however, both men announced their willingness to proceed with the cudgelling match. For some little time they lambasted each other, when Figg landed a blow with his cudgel which broke one of Sutton's legs at the knee.

While this first prize fight was a brutal affair, compared with modern ring battles, it was considered a mild sort of entertainment compared with the cudgelling and broadsword bouts which were then in vogue. Before condemning early pugilism, it should be kept in mind that the art of the bruiser supplanted so-called sports which were much more dangerous to the combatants. Boxing, even in its dubious infancy, was thus a humane triumph over the prevailing brutal instincts.

Care of Auto Tires

As every auto owner knows the principal item in the cost of the upkeep of a motor car is not the gasoline or even the engine repairs, both of the above being insignificant when compared with the expense due to the necessity of constantly having to purchase new tires, partly due to ordinary wear and tear, and partly due to accidents, such as running over sharp objects or striking loose, round stones in the road the latter cause a break where the tire bends sharply, injuring one or more of the inner layers of canvas. This leaves no impression at the time on the thread, but the tire is weakened at that particular spot and eventually a blow-out is the result.

As a rule the owner either throws the tire away or takes it to a local garage and has a patch stuck on the inside which, after a few days, is forced by the air pressure of the inner tube against the weak spot in the cover until a sharp crease is formed and another blow-out is the result, and until quite recently the only other alternative was to ship the tire to the manufacurer and wait for days and sometimes weeks, for its return.

These unsatisfactory conditions have at last been changed and the work of rebuilding a new section in an old tire is now being done in the city by a local man.

Mr. H. T. Millard has installed in his well-known and up-to-date repair shop, 225 Hunter Street, a large steam vulcanizer of the very latest type which will cure a fifteen-inch section perfectly in one heat in all often discarded on account of a cut, mobile tires, and at the same time repair four to six automobile tubes.

This work, as Mr. Millard explained to our representative, will mean a great saving to auto owners, as tires otherwise almost as good as new, are often discrded on account of a cut, or blow-out, which could be satisfactorily repaired by the new process at an expense of from five to ten per cent. of the cost of a new tire.

In order to be able to properly do this work it was found necessary to secure space by leasing the adjoining store.

Agencies have been secured for all the leading makes of auto tires and all sizes are carried in stock.

The Harley-Davidson Motor Cycle Co. of Milwaukee have shown their confidence in this enterprising firm by placing with them the sole agency for their machines, which are thoroughly up to date, and have many new and exclusive features not found in other makes and anyone intending to purchase a motor cycle this season should first see The Harley-Davidson now on exhibition at Millard's store.

OPENING OF THE JUNE SITTINGS OF COUNTY COURT

His Honour Judge Huycke's Address to the Grand Jury---One Case Was Settled Out of Court---Two Jurors Relieved

The June sittings of the General Sessions and County Court opened this afternoon at one o'clock, with His Honour Judge Huycke presiding. The criminal list is represented by two cases, and the civil list by six. One of these, concerning Edward Greer versus Albert Henry McIntyre, was settled out of Court. It constituted an action to recover the sum of $144 alleged to be wages due plaintiff in connection with a contract under which he was hired to defendant for five months, at thirty dollars a month. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. D. W. Dumble, of Dumble and Johnston, for the defendant.

The Grand Jury.

Following is the Grand Jury: Anthony Taylor, 312 Frederick avenue; James Blewett, Smith; James Campbell, Chandos; Richard Ennis, Asphodel; James Guiry, Ennismore; Samuel Ivey, Norwood; Arthur C. Mitchell, 78 Hunter street; C. H. Pennefather, 538 Homewood avenue; Ryerson Ritchie, 600 Stewart street; J. C. Shook, 176 McDonnel street; J. C. Smith, 587 Walton street; R. B. Rogers, East City, and R. J. Soden, 344 Rubidge street. The latter was selected as foreman.

Were Relieved.

Mr. E. G. Patterson, Superintendent of the Canadian General Electric Company, and Mr. Hugh McWha, of the B. F. Ackerman an Sons, asked to be relieved from duty as jurors. They explained that they were concerned in the manufacture of munitions of war. In granting the request His Honour Judge Huycke said that it was only in consideration of the serious situation upon which the request was based, that he would consider releasing the two men from such an important duty as represented by the respective juries of the court. This war, he said, constituted a gigantic struggle between despotism and democracy. The effects of the war were particularly manifest in Peterborough in that a number of homes were represented in the casualty list. People were not apt to regard the present situation as they should. It might also be said that the British Empire was somewhat indifferent to the seriousness of the situation. It seemed as though they were fighting with one hand because the other hand was unprepared. His Honour was not in sympathy with the adoption of what he characterized as one of the most silliest of slogans, namely, "business as usual" — "There cannot be business as usual, he said, while practically the whole world is at war."

In referring to the duties reposed in the Grand Jury, is Honour said they were of a two-fold character. The Grand Jury not only represented the people, but the Crown as well. When a man was put upon his trial it was the duty of the Grand Jury to investigate the charge and determine whether or not the evidence was sufficient to warrant the trial proceeding. He instructed them to investigate all public institutions that were receiving public monies, and also inspect them from a humanitarian standpoint, and see whether or not the inmates are receiving proper consideration.

Waggon Broke Down.

The first case called was that of Albert P. Hardman versus David Wilson, both residents of Otonabee, who are concerned in an action in which plaintiff seeks to recover $1,000 and costs for permanent injuries said to have been received as a result of defendant's milk waggon being in a dangerous condition. Plaintiff was employed by defendant as a milk driver.

Mr. G. N. Gordon is appearing for the plaintiff, while defendant is represented by the firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry.

Defendant Paid Bill.

Plaintiff was the first witness called. To Mr. Gordon, he said that he was employed by Wilson at the rate of one dollar a day. His duties consisted of driving a milk waggon and helping on the farm. He asserted that the waggon was in a dangerous condition, and that as a result of injuries received, when the vehicle broke down, he was unable to earn maximum wages. The accident which brought about the injuries in question, occurred one day while witness was on his way to the Cedardale Cheese factory. He was confined in the hospital for some time. Dr. Wilson paid his hospital bills.

To Mr. Kerr witness gave his age as twenty-one past. He claimed to have immigrated to this country when fourteen years of age, and to have resided in the country for about nine years. This left a discrepancy in his statement regarding his age, which witness was unable to explain. He gave evidence as to a disability, which he said effected his neck.

The case is proceeding.

How Driver John Hanton Was Injured

In a letter received by a local friend from Driver Jack Hanton of Peterborough, recently reported wounded, the artilleryman tells how he was injured. His letter is dated May 22 and is as follows:

Just a line to let you know that I am in hospital owing to being wounded two weeks ago. I may say I was wounded in a very dangerous place but I am progressing well and will soon be back in action again. It was a big Jack Johnson that burst next to our waggon. You see we were taking up ammunition to our guns. Just as we were unloaded and ready to beat it, as there was terrible artillery fire and a big bombardment going on and the big J. J.'s pouring around us, I was pitched off my horse by the concussion of the bursting shell and I really thought it was all up with us. I was wounded by a piece of the shell and the horse in front of me got a nasty wound and had to be shot. It was a miracle how we escaped. I have been in hospital nearly two weeks now and I hope to be better soon. I could tell you a lot, but I feel tired. However I may say our brave Canadians put up a great fight. Our guns were in the same battle and I may tell you we are recognized as a great battery. The colonel thinks a lot of our shooting. We have lost two men killed and 13 wounded, but we are lucky considering the terrible heavy fire we have all been in.

Driver Hanton is in hospital at Rouen, France.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY MEET AT KINGSTON

Church Union Discussed—Finances in Good Condition Despite the War

KINGSTON, June 7.—The Presbyterian General Assembly entered upon its sixth day with the resumption of the debate on Church union, and it was thought that the question would have been disposed of by the end of the afternoon sederunt, but owing to the absence of the leader of the anti-unionists, Rev. D. D. McLeod, who was to continue the debate in the afternoon the discussion was deferred till to-morrow morning. The speech of Rev. Dr. Clark, convener of the Committee on Union, made a deep impression upon the Assembly, and members who had otherwise been loathing expressed themselves in warm terms of appreciation, one minister declaring that it was the most persuasive address he had ever heard on Church union.

The Budget and general matters of finance occupied the attention of the Assembly for a portion of the afternoon and most of the evening. Rev. Robert Laird, secretary of the Finance Board, made an earnest appeal in the evening for the Church to arouse itself for "God's emergency."

CHURCH UNION REPORT RESUMED.

Resuming his presentation of the report of the Committee on Union, Rev. Dr. W. J. Clark said that the committee had done its best to carry out the duty imposed upon it. He wanted to make it very clear that the leaders of organic union were not responsible for the amendment in support of union, but that it was the decision of the Assembly. He was not in the secrets of those opposed to Church union, but he would state that the whole policy was one of obstruction to the work of the committee. They had taken no part in that work, but had held secret meetings at which they prepared statements for the purpose of hindering the work of the committee.

LAYMEN'S MOVEMENT.

W. A. Charlton, M.P., Toronto, moved the adoption of the report of the Laymen's Movement Committee, submitted by Rev. R. M. Hamilton. The report was agreed to.

The committee suggested that the Board of Finance and the Laymen's Missionary Movement be drawn closer together. The work of the two departments is so closely identified that organization of committees throughout the Church for the two departments should be united. Although the movement had not solved the problem of raising the budget, the report claimed that it was not the fault of the methods, but was due to the fact that many congregations were not using them.

Prof. Baird, Winnipeg, intimated that the General Assembly at Winnipeg next year will be held in Westminster Church of that city.

NEW AWAKENING TO RESPONSIBILITY.

Rev. Robert Laird, secretary of the Finance Board, said there were signs of a new awakening to a deeper responsibility. They had during the last year reached within nine thousand dollars of the high-water mark of two years ago. The one thing above others, he said, that encourages the Board of Finance is the way in which the young people are contributing to the funds of the Church. At the same time there are facts which are serious; the work of home and foreign missions is halted for lack of the means to carry it on. Fully half of the people have not a real vision of the work the Church is doing. In 1914 the standard of giving was $3.55 per communicant. There could be no such thing as a selfish Christian Church, they must believe in a Christianity that spreads.

FIVE HUNDRED DIE EACH DAY

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 9.—The streets of Mexico City are filled with paupers begging for food, and the death rate is averaging 500 a day, many of them children, who die from hunger, it was said in a letter received by a relative here from S. Jamison Swarman, for 18 years a merchant in the capital. The letter says:

"While our residents are dying with hunger, the soldiers of Zapata are robbing, stealing, killing and destroying. President Rouge Gonzales Garza is in charge of the situation, but he is unable to office any relief. He already has confiscated all foodstuffs in the stores, private residences and restaurants for distribution among the poor and middle classes. He was enabled to give each family enough rations to last them through 72 hours if they practiced economy.

Babies Die by Hundreds.

"All day the streets are filled with paupers begging for a bite to eat. With the foodstuffs shortage the number of paupers was multiplied by thousands. Most of the street beggars are women with babies in arms.

"At night naked children go to the doorsteps of the richer Mexicans to plead for food, and when morning comes their little bodies are stiff. Ambulances are removing their bodies by hundreds every day. It is estimated that the death rate is 500 persons a day."

To Improve Expression As Well As Complexion

No face is really beautiful that lacks expression. Do you realize that continual use of powders and creams tends to spoil pliancy of skin and elasticity of expression? Why not quit cosmetics, use something better, which won't clog the pores or make the skin dry, pasty or oily? Ordinary mercolised wax acts quite differently from any cosmetic. It wonderfully improves any complexion, giving it life and expression. By gradually, harmlessly peeling off the thin veil of surface skin, it brings to view a pure, soft, spotless complexion, delicately beautiful and youthful. Every druggist has this wax; it is seldom more than an ounce is needed. It is spread on nightly like cold cream and washed off mornings. In a week or two the transformation is complete.

Wrinkles do not of course enhance the expression. Neither do the pasty things many use to eradicate them. A treatment free from all objection is made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ¾ pint witch hazel; use as a wash lotion. This soon removes even the most obstinate wrinkles.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S ATTITUDE WILL NOT WAVER

UNITED STATES NOTE TO GERMANY MAY MEAN WAR

President Stands Firm On Policy of "No Surrender" of American Rights

No Matter What the Cost He is Prepared to Emphasize the Doctrine of Protection For Americans--Bryan's Position Found to be Irreconcilable.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Facing the greatest crisis in recent American history, President Wilson stood firm to-day on a policy of "no surrender" of American rights.

No matter what the cost, he was prepared to emphasize the doctrine of protection for Americans, wherever they may go. Secretary Bryan's resignation from the Cabinet has solidified the administration. The note to Germany was being put in State Departmental code. It was to go on cables before nightfall. Affixed to it was the name of Robert Lansing, acting secretary, who becomes secretary. In fact the moment the note starts on its way the Bryan resignation becomes effective.

Official Washington was still dazed to-day over the Cabinet crisis. It had been hoped to the very last that some way would be found whereby Bryan could retain his post, thus emphasizing to the world that whatever the administration's policy, it had the united support of all factions in the nation. The hope was vain. Bryan's position was found to be irreconcilable, and the President finally decided that he would have to allow him to quit. It was feared that his retirement would have had effect on the German position, but the President and the two men most in his confidence at present, Secretaries Garrison and Lane, argued that delay would merely make the crisis more acute. In allowing Bryan to step down and out, the administration was hopeful that Germany would be impressed with the seriousness of America's determination to insist that her rights under International law be scrupulously observed. Bryan himself was said to be hopeful that this would be the thing that would work out.

Turkish Empire Near End Both in Europe and Asia

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 9.—The end of the Turkish Empire both in Europe and Asia is in sight, according to despatches which have reached here from the Near East. Mr. Winston Spencer Churchill's statement in his speech to his constituents at Dundee Saturday that the allied forces on the Dardanelles are within a few miles of victory confirms these reports.

It is evident that matters are moving a little more quickly on the Gallipoli Peninsula, where a despatch from Mitylene states that a general offensive against the Turkish positions was begun on Monday. The Anglo-French troops are fighting for positions which will give them command of the straits. Little news has been allowed to leak through about these operations, which have been necessarily slow owing to the nature of the country and the fact that the first troops landed by the Allies had to be supplied with the necessary artillery and reinforcements to enable them to attack the Turks, who occupied very strong positions and who have been delivering repeated attacks on the British and French lines.

Nothing official has been received from either side for several days, but despatches from Athens state that the Allies have repulsed all the attacks, the last of which, against the Australians and New Zealanders on Monday, resulted in very heavy Turkish losses.

A successful ending to these operations would be joyfully received here, as, in addition to the heavy losses by the land forces, the war ships which are supporting them are in continual danger from German submarines.

One of these, which has been operating around the Dardanelles, has just arrived at Constantinople, according to a despatch from the Turkish capital to the Berlin Lokalanzeiger, repeated here. The despatch says the submarine flew the Turkish flag and its commander wore a fez. It received a great ovation on its arrival.

In addition to her troubles on the Dardanelles Turkey is reported to be near the end of her resources in the Caucasus, where the Russians are making steady progress. The Turks may also have to meet an Italian landing in Asia Minor.

Found German Asleep in a Captured Trench

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, June 9.—A Cobourg officer of the 10th Battalion, who was wounded at Festubert, says:

"On the evening of May 20 we had orders to attack, but through some mistake attacked the wrong redoubt. Finding nothing to do we went to our original position. On the 21st we attacked the right redoubt with a whole division of grenade throwers, supported by companies of the 10th Battalion, and succeeded in driving the Germans back 300 yards. The next morning we found a German asleep in one of the captured trenches. He promptly surrendered. Everything was quiet till 5.30, when the Germans bombarded us. Our casualties were very heavy. My company lost every officer killed except myself. One platoon was wiped clean out.

"Again at 10.30 the Germans came quite close in their shirtsleeves, and bombarded us. We trained the machine guns on them. The Germans retired and then bolted, but they sniped us all day. They shelled our communicating trench, and to prevent our being cut off I had to get my men back behind the trench every minute a shell fell. We were not sorry to be relieved. At night I was hit in the spine and knew nothing more until I awoke in the hospital."

Girl as Sleuth Frees Father From Prison

AKRON, O., June 8.—Working for three days against the police who were holding her father, Michael Lurie, forty-one, on charge of receiving stolen property, Miss Dolly Lurie, twenty, stenographer, succeeded in not only proving his innocence, but in capturing the real culprits.

The girl detective acquired her investigating skill from reading "Sherlock Holmes" and other good detective stories, she says.

Lurie is a dealer in metal and rubber. In response to a call he drove to the home of George Windsor and purchased a quantity of rubber tires and inner tubes from two men there who appeared to be working around the place.

Later Windsor notified the police his barn had been robbed and the tires stolen. Lurie was arrested and taken to police station. His daughter accompanied him and remained all night at headquarters working on the case.

The next morning she obtained leave of absence from her employer and started a personal investigation. She ran down clews and obtained evidence which satisfied Police Judge Vaughan of the innocence of her father. Windsor refused to prosecute the men captured.

CONSTIPATIENTS
Read This—

It must be remembered that the bowels should move freely once a day to ensure perfect health. When such is not the case the poisonous waste material is absorbed into the system, thus producing a self blood poisoning.

The causes of Constipation are many and varied. Among the more common may be mentioned poor stomach digestion, a deficiency of bile in the intestines, a lack of secretion in the bowels, and a want of the natural muscular contraction of the intestines from above downward.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 60c, stimulates and restores the stomach digestion, increases the flow of bile into the intestine, causes a flow from the intestinal glands, and restores the natural downward action of the intestines, rendering it easy to secure a free action of the bowels, which is one of the most important requisites to health.

How London Newspapers View the Resignation of Secretary Bryan

An Indication That President Wilson's Rejoinder to Germany is So Firmly Phrased That War Between United States and Germany May Result.

Examiner Special:

LONDON, June 9.—London newspapers to-day interpreted Secretary of State Bryan's resignation as an indication that President Wilson's rejoinder to Germany is so firmly phrased that war between the United States and Germany may result. The morning papers gave prominent display to the news from Washington, though it arrived too late for editorial comment.

The early editions of the evening papers published the correspondence between Secretary Bryan and President Wilson in full. They emphasized the bearing Bryan's resignation has on the character of the rejoinder about to be sent to Berlin. "In previous notes to Germany, America has spoken firmly and plainly, though not in an unfriendly manner," said the Evening Star. "These notes had Bryan's approval, so the Secretary of State's present action indicates that the latest note about to be despatched to Berlin is of an entirely different tone. Bryan himself does not conceal the opinion that it may lead to war."

Berlin to Train Crippled Soldiers to Earn Living

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, June 9.— Following in the wake of other municipalities and States, Berlin now is taking energetic steps to care for and train to civil usefulness its crippled soldiers. It is proposed to prevent at all cost the misfortune of having these men become dependent charges.

At a recent meeting of that body, which most nearly corresponds to the City Council of an American municipality, Mayor von Wermuth, Berlin's Oberburgermeister, presented a scheme which includes the establishment of a fund of $25,000 and a council or committee on which numerous civic and philanthropic organizations shall be presented to carry out the details of training the men.

At the head of the organization there is to be a deputy of the city government, assisted by a counsellor and a committee. This committee shall be composed of representatives of the organizations that in the ordinary course of events bear the expense of caring for the injured—the Berlin as well as the imperial insurance companies in which a majority of the soldiers are insured, the Red Cross, the military medical administration, and the central labour bureau.

The counsellor shall be assisted by representatives of the mayor, the city council, a surgeon, an orthopedist, representative of the police president of Berlin, the Women's Association of the Fatherland, the National Association of Woman's Aid, and several labour organizations and trade and technical bodies. Also the German Association of Workingmen and the Berlin Council of Business Men will be asked to have a representative each.

Arrangements already have been made to transfer invalids from hospitals in other parts of Germany, whose actual bona fide homes are in Greater Berlin, to a hospital provided by the military administration. Here they will be able to get unsurpassed medical attention preparatory to the training for some calling.

A most important part in the arrangements now under way will be played by the Central Labour Intelligence Bureau, which will find positions for men. This organization already is at work preparing the field.

Before presenting the project to the City Council Mayor von Wermuth assured himself of the support of labour organizations and trade unions, as well as the financial aid of the government insurance bodies.

Even before the men leave the hospital the question of what trade they will take up will be considered. In charge of this will be experts who will pass uniformly on all cases. The scientific and advanced schools of Berlin will be utilized to their fullest extent, as well as those institutions conducted by the insurance companies.

In urging the necessity for some such step as this on the part of Berlin, Mayor von Wermuth declared:

"Those injured in the war are coming to us in steadily growing numbers from the hospitals. They need immediate aid in order, as quickly as possible, to take up callings and relations which will preserve their strength and ability. Those injured will not be thrown upon public institutions for the care of the poor. They must be spared the oppressing feeling that in the fulfilment of their highest patriotic duty they have become worthless members of human society."

Resignation of Bryan Takes Effect To-day

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Bryan's resignation was accomplished with good feeling toward the President, though the reason was difference of opinion over the note to Germany.

Bryan favoured note which would not give rise to grave complications, resigning rather than embarrass the President by opposition. The resignation will take effect Wednesday.

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

"He'll sleep through two sun-ups," sez Josiah to me. "You just go along and I'll take care of him, and his dog and his mule, too."

When Isaac got back to the ranch house he was a made-over man if ever the' was one. His skin was soft and smooth, and not a wrinkle in it, his eyes were bright and he actually picked up his feet when he walked. He was full of brag, too, about the way the old hermit had fed him on meat-juice, herbs, and dried berries. He was so full of his own wonders that it was two days before he remembered to tell me that Josiah had some word for me.

As usual, I found the old hermit sittin' at the door of his cabin smokin' the red pipe, and lookin' at sights which must have happened fifty years before. I began to talk about how improved Isaac was, and after a time mentioned that he had just give me the message.

Josiah smoked peaceful for a few minutes, and then said: "Big Jeff Johnson has a ranch about thirty miles north of the Canadian on Wolf Crick, and Tom Smith's there."

"Is he a prisoner?" sez I.

"Nope," sez Johiah, "he's workin' there with four or five other men, though sometimes there's more and sometimes less."

I asked all I could think up about the lay of the land and figgered it would be about fifteen or twenty miles a little north of east from Bradin's ranch, and about thirty miles west of the Supply stage road. The ranch house stood in a bend of the crick with timber all around it and high, broken ground around this. The hermit would answer purty free about the scenery, but I couldn't get him to talk much about the people. "Big Jeff is up there now," sez he, "and Big Jeff'll stand a heap o' watchin'"; but that's about all I could get him to tell about the kind of an outfit it was.

CHAPTER XVI.

BIG JEFF'S GUEST.

I wanted to take Phil McLaughlin along with me, for the very same reason that I wanted to leave him behind—'cause he was to be depended on every minute. I had been boostin' Phil into a lot o' my work lately, and as there were several things I wanted done just so, I finally made up my mind to leape him on the job and go alone. Next mornin' I started before dawn, ridin' the pinto which I had named Clover-blossom and had chose out to be my favorite mount. We shuffled along at an easy gait and reached Bradin's a little before noon.

Bradin was tickled over the way the men up his way had responded to organizin' and it was plain that what he was itchin' for was a chance to get into action. He didn't know much about the ranch on Wolf Crick, except 'at the outfits were all the time changin', and that they never got friendly. I told him it would pay him to keep that ranch in mind, and then after dinner I borrowed a hoss from him and started on, leavin' the pinto in his corral to rest up in case I was in a hurry on my way back.

Bradin wanted to go with me, but I didn't see how I was goin' to explain to him about Tom Smith, and truth to tell, I wasn't quite sure about Tom Smith, myself. It seemed plain to me that he was either an outlaw or a law officer; but every time I thought of him, a picture of that gel on the Dodge Stage road came back to me, and I couldn't help feelin' that he was her brother and that it was up to me to keep track of him partly on her account. One minute I'd think I saw through his game, and the next some other idee would pop up to knock my theory flatter 'n a pancake.

I reckon it was about three when I reached the high ground above Wolf Crick and I picked out the best spot and took a look around. I didn't like the look of the country up there, and I didn't feel a mite comfortable—somethin' seemed hangin' over me all the time, and I couldn't shake it off. A flock of buzzards were hoverin' above the north side of the crick and I gave a shudder as the sight of Tom Smith's upturned face flashed on to my imagination.

I couldn't see the buildin's from where I was, but I could see a buckboard dustin' in from the east, and farther off, I could see a bunch o' riders lazin' in from the north-west, so I rode into the timber a ways, hobbled my pony, and scouted in towards the house. It suddenly struck me that if Big Jeff was there, old Nick, his mastiff, would also be along and servin' on the welcomin' committee.

Now, the best excuse I had been able to frame up was that I was out pirutin' around in search of young stock and had been thrown off and wanted to borrow a hoss to ride back. This was a rough enough article of a lie to try to trip up even a human with, and I didn't yearn to test it out on a mastiff dog: but when I recollected how long old Nick had been in the saloon business, I saw 'at the chances were 'at he wouldn't give tongue unless he was unusual well trained.

When I passed the corral I saw eight or ten hosses in it and one had a saddle on. It was a good-lookin' hoss, too, and I didn't think the one I had borrowed from Bradin would stand much show again' him. The shack was a rough affair when I finally did reach it, and in the doorway sat Big Jeff wearin' a red silk handkerchief around his neck and lookin' spruced up altogether. He had a silly leer in his eyes and was talkin' to Tom Smith who sat on a bench near him. I crept up close enough to hear what they had to say.

"What I can't see," sez Big Jeff, "is why you was willin' to take so many chances tiein' into Panther the way you did, and yet now you're squeamish about every little thing. I've took to ya, boy, and I'll boost ya right along, if only ya show a leetle mite more grit."

"I ain't right in my mind when I'm drinkin'," sez Tom Smith, "that's the reason I tied into Panther."

"And you say you never did know him?"

"I saw him once or twice when I was a kid up in Kansas, and I'd heard some say that he was all bluff, so when the drink was in me, I was just fool enough to try him out. I told ya when I asked for a job that I had got into a little trouble through drink once before, and that all I asked was for you to sight me to some out of the way place where I could work free from temptation."

"He, he, he," laughed Big Jeff, about the way a coyote would. "You certainly did well in askin' me to shield you from temptation. Now, listen, boy, the only way to get a start in a new country is just to cut in and grab what you want and then hang on to it. You're quick as a flash when you're drinkin', and your sober squeamishness'll all wear off after you've been hounded a while.

"Law officers don't care whether you're guilty or not, what they want to do is to get as many hung as possible. That's the way they get their reputation. All the boys here started out tryin' to be honest, but after they'd been handled a time or two they saw it wasn't any use, the same as I did: and now they're makin' 'em a little stake apiece so they can go back home and put on a little style. You'll have to come to it sooner or later.

"Now, that you've been here with the boys a spell, they wouldn't be easy in their minds to have you leave unless they had something on you to keep you from squealin': so my advice to you as a friend is to join in with 'em on some little prank. Take a bottle along and sneak yourself a little drink when the time comes. Then, play her wide open, and you'll win yourself friends who'll stick to ya no matter what happens."

"I don't believe I've got nerve enough," sez Tom Smith, after studyin' a while.

"What did you come to me for, anyhow?" sez Big Jeff, usin' a harsher tone.

"I came for a drink, that was all."

"Yas, an' ya got it, too. Your friends over at the Lion Head tied ya on a bed like a baby in convulsions; but I gave ya a drink, and I gave ya a job, and I gave ya the best advice I knew. We haven't crowded ya none since you've been here; but you've already seen things we wouldn't want shouted around, and my advice to you is to make up your mind right now. I'm expectin' a lady friend out here this afternoon, and I want to warn you that if you think your squeamishness 'll be apt to cloud up your judgment, you'd better keep off to yourself 'til I get her tamed."

"Yep," sez Bib Jeff, his ugly leer sloppin' out over his face again. "Ya see, she never has seen me, and sometimes this scar on my face sets 'em again' me at the start; but that only makes it the more fun to tame 'em. You've got soft-spoken ways about ya, and if you behave yourself right and will swear to be square with me, I'll keep on payin' you wages just to look after her when I have to go back. Now, you'll either have to do this, or else throw in with the boys and get yourself a reputation. After the way you handled Panther, I counted big on ya; but you've been a disappointment ever since. The boys don't think you're good-natured, if that's what you've been playin' for. They think you're a downright coward, and hanged if I ain't beginnin' to suspicion it myself."

"To tell you the truth," sez Tom Smith, with his eyes on the ground, "my nerve never does stand much unless I've had at least one drink"

"Well, I'll give you a drink any time I think you need it," sez Big Jeff, "and if you'll just let me manage you, I'll fix your nerve so it'll stand any kind of a strain you want to put on it. I'm your friend, boy, but you'll have to do as I tell ya."

Just then came the rattle of a wheel down the gully, and Big Jeff put his finger on his lips and winked at Tom Smith. That wink was an insult to the whole human race; but Tom Smith winked back, and made me more doubtful of him than ever. For a minute or so everything was quiet, and I fixed myself so as to be ready for about everything. There was only one room to the shack in which Big Jeff was sittin', but it was a large one. The cook house and mess hall stood to the north of it, and the bunk-shack some distance away in the direction of the corral. I was just across the road in a clump, not in front of the door, but to the left of it. Tom Smith had pulled his hat over his eyes and he sure did look as though he nerve needed bracin'.

And the next minute, my own nerve needed bracin', for a buckboard bumped by hitched to a pair o' mustangs so beat-out they could hardly wobble, and the driver was the same old, ragged-bearded cuss we had seen on the Dodge trail. Beside him sat the same girl.

An amazing amount of material goes to the making of a 32,000-ton battleship. Into the hull alone enter some 9,809 tons of steel and iron, an amount more than equal to the whole of the material from keel to fighting tops in many of the pre-Dreadnought war vessels. Of this amount of material, over 6,000 tons is steel plating, 2,854 tons is for shapes, channelling, and angle pieces; the weight of the rivets used exceeds 530 tons, these rivets ranging in diameter from 3-8 inches to 1 1-2 inches, and there are over 400 tons of specially-shaped steel castings, ranging in weight from two to eighteen tons each. These figures include nothing for gun mounting or special armoring, but are for the mere construction of the bare hull alone.

Halley's Comet.

Halley's comet has an enviable history, but its chief claim to distinction rests in the fact that it was the first periodic comet whose return was predicted. Edmund Halley, an English astronomer, observed its behavior in 1682 and made calculations which led him to conclude that it was the same comet which had been seen and noted several times before. He figured it would come back in seventy-five or seventy-six years, and, although he did not live to see the event, the comet did return according to schedule. Consequently it is called Halley's comet.

SUFFERED FROM BILIOUS HEADACHE.

At Times Thought She Would Go Mad.

Headaches are one of the most aggravating troubles a person can have. They are many and varying; but when the headache starts you may be sure that there is some other chief cause of this most painful difficulty. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but the presence of the headache clearly shows that there is some other baneful disease which is liable to assert itself unless the cause of the headache is removed. Get rid of the headache and thus perhaps save yourself many years of trial and suffering.

Burdock Blood Bitters has, for the past forty years, been curing all kinds of headaches, and has also proved itself to be a remedy that cures where all others fail. It does this by removing the cause of the trouble.

Miss Mary A. Roberts, Hampton, N.B., writes: "For about two years I have suffered from bilious headache. At times I thought I would really go mad. Not long ago a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters which I did, and after taking three bottles I have never been troubled with any kind of a headache. I think that B.B.B. is one of the wonders of the world. I can safely recommend it to all who suffer from bilious headache."

Burdock Blood Bitters is the oldest and the best known blood medicine on the market to-day, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

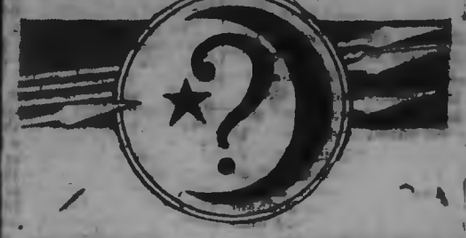
GERMANY IN TURKEY

How Did The Teuton Get There

Why Did The Turk Enter The War



MEHMED RECHAD KHAN, V. EMPEROR OF OTTOMANS AND KHALIF OF MUSSULMANS.

By J. J. Bosdan.

(Formerly a Member of the Executive Committee of the Late Young Turkey Society of Asia Minor and Propagandist for India, Persia and Egypt. A Native of Adana, Asia Minor, of Greek Extraction.)

THE annual interest charged on part of the Ottoman government's national indebtedness, the part covered by loans, amounts to about one-third of its actual revenue.

All in all, before she entered the war, Turkey's net revenue was equal to one-seventh of the interest due on her total indebtedness.

After the Balkan War, bound as she was in international shackles, Turkey added links to her chains, until she had mortgaged every available harbor, river, forest and mine to European bankers. And now, without money, men or prestige, here she is again shackled to allies who cannot help her; isolated, fighting three first class Powers, who are striking her from both flanks, rear and front.

We will be certainly defeated, and immediately afterward we will start all over again, "doing business at the same old stand;" whatever is left of our "integrity" will be "guaranteed" jointly by our combined enemies and friends, and we will continue paying interest on our national debts; for we are a hopeless case.

Had we been any other nation or people we would have been annihilated two hundred years ago, but we are Ottomans, and being Ottomans we have a charm all our own. This charm is our debt to all nations.

But that was not all. Enver's sojourn in Berlin had its evil effect. Within two months after the proclamation of the new Ottoman Constitution many feuds and frictions arose in the ranks of the party itself; these feuds were those of the liberal and nationalist Young Turks. The liberal Young Turks attempted to commit the empire to a "liberal policy," and demanded the recognition of the equality of all elements throughout the empire in the eyes of the constitution, while the nationalists insisted on adopting a policy of nationalism, which they named "the Committee of Union and Progress." They demanded that all elements unite for the progress of Turkish nationalism. This "Union and Progress" is the equivalent of the "German Kultur," and was backed up by the newly converted "Turkish Junkery."

Thereupon the liberal element within the Young Turkey party, having already been disgusted with the behavior of the nationalist clique, which was playing the part of the power behind the throne, formed a secret parliamentary coalition with the conservative Old Turks and formulated a programme for a permanent future policy. This scheme was to permit such numerically predominant Christian sectors of Turkey's Macedonian possessions to unite with such Balkan kingdoms as they chose; to recognise the independence of the Albanians, and, having thus eliminated the eternal cause of discord in the Balkans, to form an entente with the newly created Albania, and then with Montenegro, Serbia, Bulgaria and Greece; and, after having assured the security and the integrity of the Ottoman empire, to adopt a stern foreign policy. In the meantime, serious and swift internal reforms were to be undertaken.

This would have prevented the Balkan war and perhaps the present European conflagration. The programme was submitted to Sultan Hamid and, after one week's deliberation, was approved in its entirety. Early in January, 1909, however, the German Ambassador got wind of these negotiations between the coalition and the Sultan. The nationalists immediately busied themselves with calumnies against the Christian members of the Parliament. They incited the Moslem elements in the remote regions of the empire against their Christian countrymen. Meanwhile they arrested the liberal members of the Young Turkey party, denouncing them as plotters of a reactionary counter revolution against the constitutional régime. Finally, in March, 1909, the nationalists succeeded in staging a counter revolution in order to create a "pretence" to overthrow Abd-Ul-Hamid and put an end to the coalition's Balkan programme. The memorable Adana massacre was to be carried through first, and the counter revolution afterward. The object was to connect Abd-Ul-Hamid with massacre, but something went wrong and the plan was disarranged. Nevertheless, the perpetrators were not to be foiled. They carried the devilish programme through.

Enver Bey returned from Berlin and once more figured in the limelight beside Mahmoud Shefket Pacha, when the latter made his triumphal march to Constantinople, suppressed the so called counter revolution with an iron hand, deposed Abd-Ul-Hamid and put the present weak Sultan on the Ottoman throne. It was after this second revolution that the Old Turks, as well as the liberal Young Turks, were hanged or sent out to Anatolian provinces to build roads. When, dispensing with the liberal Young Turks on one pretext or another, the "Committee of Union and Progress" (the Turkish Kultur), took full charge of the newer régime and controlled the foreign and the domestic policies of the empire. This newer revolution having cost more than $15,000,000, the new régime was already under pecuniary obligations to the German financiers, who, representing themselves as German and Austrian Jews, had generously financed this second revolution.

So far as German interests were concerned, this sum was well spent. Germany did not wish to have the Ottoman empire absolutely independent in her dealings with the European Powers. Furthermore, the elimination of the Macedonian question from the Turkish national politics would upset the Pan-Germanic dream, "from Berlin to Bagdad," forever. She had hitherto solidified herself as the patron of the Turk.

This counter revolution and the consequent establishment of a newer and more efficient despotism under a new name in the capital of the Turk had amazed the political students of the world. The fragmentary cable despatches never explained the peculiar workings of the Near Eastern politics. The energetic protests of the liberal Turks, as well as the serious warnings of the Christian population of Turkey, were drowned in the well intentioned but misdirected praise of the Western world. The West did not and was not in a position to understand that the "Committee of Union and Progress" was a Turkish term for German Kultur and Prussian Junkery.

During the Balkan war Enver was away at Tripolitana, but during the sessions of the first Balkan conference in London, in 1913, having already arrived in Constantinople, he directed his every energy to preventing the cession of the besieged city of Adrianople to the Bulgars. Finally, when the Turkish government made up its mind to accept the proposal of the Ambassadorial conference in London, Enver headed a mob and appeared at the Ministry of War, protesting against the conclusion of the peace terms with the cession of Adrianople to Bulgaria. During the tumult Nazim Pacha, Commander-in-Chief, was shot, no doubt by Enver himself. Enver's own version was that he was shot at by some one who was standing behind Nazim Pacha; thereupon he drew his revolver and aimed at his assailant and shot Nazim by mistake.

This assassination took place on January 24, 1913, and simultaneously Kiamil Pacha and his Ministry were kicked out and Shefket Pacha, the ardent nationalist and the leader of the Junkery, became the Grand Vizier and Minister of War. The new régime finally accepted the original Ambassadorial proposal in its entirety. This transaction had a tendency to discredit them in the eyes of the Moslem Turks, but soon afterward, when the Balkan League broke up, Enver recaptured Adrianople, and the prodigiously ignorant Anatolian Turk accepted this as a reconquest of the lost province under the Enver régime.

Previously, Mahmoud Shefket Pacha, the Grand Vizier and the Minister of War, having been removed by assassination, Enver had become a Pacha, and was promoted to the Ministry of War, under Prince Said Hallim, the new Grand Vizier and Minister of Foreign Affairs, and at the outbreak of the European war, early last August, this was the standing of the Turkish Ministry.

Abd-Ul-Hamid's feeble tyranny in the past had already driven Turkey into such dire straits that even his successor to the throne was powerless in his struggles against the powerful foreign influences who ruled supreme in Constantinople.

We reason like this:—The nations we are fighting own us body and soul. If they defeat us, which they certainly will, they will take what belongs to them; on the other hand, if the Teutons defeat the Allies we will repudiate our international indebtedness. So, whichever way the fortune of war turns, we will not receive anything, and yet we cannot lose, for we have nothing to lose.

And again, Turkey was preparing to fight Greece anyhow. The European crisis which broke out toward the end of July, 1914, had obscured the acute tension between her and Greece. British naval missions were busy reorganizing the fleets of the two prospective belligerents.

This war between Turkey and Greece would have been declared last summer had it not been for the timely purchase of the two American cruisers which made the Greek fleet in the Aegean Sea superior to that of Turkey.

Meanwhile two dreadnoughts were being built for Turkey in the British shipyards. The funds for these dreadnoughts were raised through popular subscription, and when, upon the outbreak of the European war, Great Britain detained these ships, the Turk's anger knew no bounds. It was the straw which broke the camel's back.

The German party took advantage of the situation created by Great Britain's naval exigency. No promise on the part of the Western Allies "to safeguard Turkey's integrity against any and all unforeseen enemies" could satisfy her.

This predominating German influence in Turkey dates back to the Kaiser's visit to Constantinople on his way to Palestine, for it was to Asia Minor that Germany had turned her longing eyes.

In the days of Abd-Ul-Hamid, when the palace clique ruled supreme at Yildiz, the highest bidder obtained political and commercial ascendency in the empire. Beginning in this simple city, it went through various stages of evolution until Prussia had availed herself of every opportunity in strengthening her hold over every governmental function of the empire. The Prussian exercised control over the Turk's civil government, taught him how to drill, sold him Krupp guns, ran his railroads, owned his copper and silver mines, built his schools, acquainted him with the German Kultur, and finally dominated his diplomacy, until he could lay claim not even to his own soul. Even the Turk's last asset, his religion, was utilized for military purposes to assist the central empires.

This was the condition of affairs during the Hamidian régime that had contributed to intensify the Young Turkey spirit in Turkey.

With the overthrow of the Hamidian régime in 1908 and the advent to power of the Young Turks, the progress of the German influence in Turkey came to a stand-still; but this was only temporary.

Baron Marschall von Bieberstein, Germany's able diplomatist, soon gained the confidence of the new régime. He represented to the Young Turkey leaders that no matter what régime might come to power the Ottoman foreign diplomacy must remain exactly the same. Baron von Bieberstein argued that whatever the defects of the Hamidian régime might have been it had a wholesome regard for the safety and the integrity of the Ottoman empire. This meant the unrevised continuation of the old Hamidian foreign policy. The civilian members of the Young Turkey party, who were numerically predominant, opposed, while the military members of the new régime supported Baron Bieberstein's programme, and from that time on the German party, the national militarist, called themselves "the Committee of Union and Progress," while the anti-German element went under the name of "the Liberal Young Turkey party." Within the first two months after the overthrow of the Hamidian régime more than sixteen hundred opponents of "the Committee of Union and Progress" were exiled from Constantinople, while sixty-eight members of "the Liberal Young Turkey party" were hanged.

The career of "the Committee of Union and Progress" can be better understood if we make a short survey of the checkered history of this "twentieth century wonder."

After the horrible Macedonian massacres in 1903, the Emperors of Russia and Austria met at Mursteg at a shooting box of Francis Joseph, and upon the suggestion of the Russian Emperor a programme for reform in Macedonia was devised. Subsequently this scheme came to be known as the "Mursteg programme."

Under this programme the Macedonian provinces of the Turk were divided into racial delimitations, and certain measures of reforms were undertaken by the gendarmeries of Austria, Great Britain, France, Italy and Russia. In order to once more demonstrate his friendship to his old friend, Abd-Ul-Hamid, the German Kaiser withheld from participating in this scheme.

And still later, when King Edward and the Tsar met at a conference at Reval, in June, 1908, and decided upon the necessity of a firmer and more drastic reform scheme in Macedonia, the Young Turks, fearing for the integrity of their country, in sheer desperation struck their decisive blow the following July.

The much advertised Enver Bey made his first dramatic appearance in the revolution of July, 1908. He is a product of the Constantinople Military Academy, and until he took up his post as the Turkish Military Attaché at Berlin he had never been in Western Europe. He spoke French as his native tongue. Later he learned English and German.

When the Young Turks formed a secret branch committee at Salonica, in 1905, Enver was a major, attached to the staff of Hilmi Pacha, the Inspector General of Macedonia. He joined this Salonica committee immediately after its formation.

For three years the missionaries of the various secret branches of this committee directed their entire energies to winning over the army, for they realized that the constitution could not be wrung from Abd-Ul-Hamid without the army, and force must be used. The civilian members of the committee doubted the wisdom and stability of a revolutionary victory over the old régime by the military. They feared that after the overthrow of the old régime the new régime would be at the mercy of the army. Enver Bey and other military members of the committee, on the other hand, maintained that after the overthrow of the old régime the new régime would be handed over to the civilians.

Following the successful revolt of the Young Turkey element, Hilmi Pacha proclaimed the Ottoman constitution, in the name of Sultan Abd-Ul-Hamid, from the steps of the Provincial Capitol at Salonica, on July 24, 1908.

Ahmed Reza Bey, who had spent many years in Paris as a refugee and publisher of revolutionary literature, returned to Constantinople and became the President of the first Turkish Parliament. But from the first day of the Young Turkey party's advent to power it adopted a nationalistic policy based upon "Turco-Mohammedanism"—that is, it asserted that, the Turk, being numerically predominant, the empire's affairs must be conducted with due consideration to the Turkish nationalistic aspirations, and Mohammedanism must be recognised as the official State religion, while other religions must be recognised by the new Turkish constitution as foreign religions, "chartered and privileged."

The 3,000,000 Turkish Christians resident throughout the empire considered this as an indirect disfranchisement of the non-Moslem elements, who are intellectually and economically superior to the numerically predominant Moslem Turk. While thirty-three per cent of the population of the empire is Christian of various denominations, under the Young Turkey party's management of the first election proceedings the Christian elements were unable to elect more than six per cent of the Parliament's membership.

The old Hamidian cunning diplomacy, setting one European Power against the other as the exigencies required, was not effective under all circumstances. My country had accepted Germany as its protector in our past dealings with other European Powers, and now Germany was in dire need of Turkey's forces in her war against Europe. Turkey had to fulfil its obligations to that Power. But this was only a formal argument for Turkey entering the fray on the side of the Teutonic allies; the whole truth is that it had nothing to say regarding the matter. Turkey was already being ruled by the Germans.

When at last the great conflagration broke out the Turkish nationalism became a virtue, while the German gold made patriots out of the ill-paid Junkery. Expressions such as "the redemption of the lost provinces" and "war for the fatherland" became Ottoman slogans. Finally the Western Allies became convinced that Turkish neutrality was not likely to endure very long.

Turkish mobilization had already begun, but Germany was bound to hasten the crisis. On August 10, 1914, the two German war ships Goeben and Breslau arrived at the Dardanelles, and the very next day they became Turkish. On August 14 Admiral Limpus and all the officers of the British Naval Mission were replaced by the Germans and the mobilization of the Ottoman land and sea forces continued under German auspices. Every train from the west brought hundreds of German military and naval officers, until the entire province of Constantinople and its surrounding sectors had become a German camp. The civilian Moslem population of the capital seemed paralyzed with this peculiar invasion of their country. The martial law which had been in existence since the advent of the Young Turks to power was relentlessly used in suppressing opinions contrary to the policies of the régime in power. During these critical days hundreds of anti-German military officers were shot as traitors.

The ill-paid soldiery, hopelessly ignorant of the significance of the German military incursions into our country, regarded the foreigners as the benefactors of the Turks. The German controlled régime disarmed all the Christian soldiers in the army and put them to work as common laborers, building fortifications and military roads. Those who had the courage to raise their voices condemning the policies of the military régime were dealt with in such a fashion that they were never heard from again. But there were other methods, more effective means, to silence opposition.

Suddenly an army of Moslem softas (clergymen) were imported and, backed up by all the Turkish newspapers, these Mohammedan zealots began an energetic campaign in the city. The newspapers published reports of the "horrible crimes" committed by the Western Allies against their Moslem subjects in Africa, Egypt, India and elsewhere. These reports were sent broadcast throughout the Anatolian provinces. The Moslem softas incited the Turks to take up arms in defence of these suffering Moslems.

By the middle of September there were about 12,000 German soldiers and sailors in Constantinople. On October 25 $30,000,000 in gold bullion was imported into Constantinople, consigned to the German Ambassador and delivered at the Deutsche Bank. This act of Germany turned the scale.

On October 29 three Turkish torpedo boats raided Odessa Harbor, sinking a Russian guard ship and damaging a French steamship and killing several Russian civilians. Theodosia was also bombarded.

It is also true that neither the Sultan nor the majority members of the Cabinet had knowledge of these attacks.

No, this war is not the Turk's war. But yet, he had committed himself to this suicidal policy, since he had allowed the unrestricted importation of the German civilization to his shores.

Turkey's Anatolian hordes are fighting the Western Allies under the delusion that they are at war for their Moslem faith. But the Turks are beginning to realize that they have been tricked to do their present allies' fighting for them. There is an ugly feeling in Constantinople, but Turks are slow in everything—slow in starting and slow in stopping.

SOAP IS BAD FOR THE HAIR

Soap should be used very sparingly, if at all, if you want to keep your hair looking at its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), it's cheaper and better than soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

LONGEST DITCH IN THE WORLD

The next time you read your newspapers, observes the Christian Herald, glance again at the map of the west front. Follow the line that begins on the Channel above Calais, turning southeast above Ypres and ending in the passes of the Vosges in Alsace; then think of it in this way: On the dunes you can enter a ditch that has been dug across Europe from the English Channel to Mulhausen. You can walk about three hundred miles under ground, eat three meals a day, and sleep on officers' cots without once having to expose yourself in the open.

You will realize as you see second, third, and fourth trenches parallel, and connecting by labyrinthine passages, the labors of executives would dig a dozen subways. The Catskill Aqueduct, the Chicago subway, the irrigated desert lands of our West seem inadequate for comparison. Not from the standpoint of engineering skill—more than that. You think of this ditch in terms of the Panama Canal and the Great Wall of China. It is a work of heroic proportions, for it has been dug under constant fire, and it is only a detail of this war.

KIDNEY DISEASE CURED SWORN STATEMENT

Of Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Who Gratefully Gives All Credit to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

It is one thing to make big claims for a medicine and quite another thing to produce irrefutable evidence that it actually cures in serious cases.

We prefer to let the cured ones speak for themselves, and that is why you find in almost every newspaper the report of someone who has been cured by the use of Dr. Chase's medicines. To-day we present the sworn statement of Mr. Wesley Maxwell. When a man goes to this trouble in expressing his gratitude there can be no question of the benefit he has received. Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I must tell you that before I started using them I could only make water with the greatest difficulty, and had many severe pains in the back. I am completely cured now by the use of these pills. Before that I used a lot of doctors' medicine without any benefit that I could see. I am thankful for being cured, and can recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills very highly."

SWORN STATEMENT.

"This is to certify that I, Wesley Maxwell, of the Township of Caledon, was cured of kidney trouble by taking Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

"Wesley Maxwell."

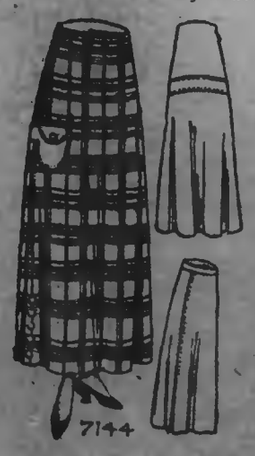
This statement is also endorsed by the Rev. Geo. W. Robinson, who is Mr. Maxwell's pastor.

This cure will interest a great many people who are suffering as Mr. Maxwell was with kidney and urinary troubles. It will only cost you a quarter to buy a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and put this medicine to the test. We are sure that you will be thankful to the writer for describing his cure to you. For sale at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

TWO-PIECE CIRCULAR SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.



The novel feature of this skirt is the pockets, which are not separate pieces, but cut in one, with a strap section connecting. The strap part forms a trimming band in the back. If desired the skirt may be made plain, as in the small front view. There are only two gores in the skirt, with a seam at each side and the placket at the left. A small plait is formed at the lower part of the seam, which is trimmed with a row of buttons in the main view. The top may be attached to an inside belt, in high waisted effect, or cut off 1½ inches and finished with a band.

Wool mixtures and suitings are appropriate, or for a wash skirt, linen, cotton corduroy, cotton gabardine, rep and crash. For medium size, three yards of 36-inch material would be needed. The pattern, No. 7144, can be obtained in six sizes, from 22 to 32 inches waist measure. Price, 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

The Brooding of Chickens

By Leslie E. Card

ARTIFICIAL incubation is usually followed by artificial brooding and it is just as important that chicks be well brooded as that they are well hatched. A successful brooder must furnish a clean, warm, well ventilated hover to which the chicks may have access at all times. The hover should be partially darkened if best results are to be secured. In addition to this there must be a well ventilated exercising pen and an outdoor run for pleasant weather.

Before putting the chicks in the brooder it should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected. The floor should be covered with a thin layer of clean fine sand and over this a fine cut litter or chaff. The brooder should be heated up a day or two before the chicks are to be put in so that it may be thoroughly dry and warm.

Avoid Drafts in Transferring

In transferring the chicks from the incubator to the brooder it is important that they be protected from cold and drafts; the transfer should, therefore, be made as quickly as possible. If they are to be carried any great distance they should be placed in a basket which can be covered with soft cotton cloth. This matter is important as chilling at this time is likely to result in bowel trouble and consequent loss of chicks.

The brooder should be started at a temperature of 98 to 100 degrees F. This temperature can gradually be reduced until during the fourth week it is about 85 degrees F. Temperature readings should be taken with the bulb of the thermometer two inches from the floor. It is much better to have the hover too warm than too cold for the chick can easily remedy the trouble by getting away from the heat. Extreme variations in temperature should be carefully avoided as they are responsible for much of the mortality, especially during the first two weeks.

Sour Milk First Feed

On removing from the incubator take each chick individually and dip its beak in sour milk in order to make sure that milk is the first food taken into its system. For the first three or four days sour milk should be the only drink the chicks receive. After that time clean fresh water should be freely supplied to them. We have had reports of excellent results where chicks four weeks old had had nothing to drink but sour milk. In such a case the chicks will naturally drink more milk than if they had water and consequently will make more rapid growth.

Sour milk should be kept before the chicks all the time at least until they are six weeks old and preferably until they reach maturity. Milk is an important factor in increasing growth and vitality of the chicks and in reducing mortality from general causes. Sweet milk gives just as good results but is somewhat more trouble to feed as during warm weather it will turn distinctly sour within two hours after feeding, and it does not seem desirable to feed sweet milk one time and sour the next. The sour milk should be fed in a thickened condition but before the curd has separated from the whey. This is chiefly because the chicks like it better in this condition and will consume more of it.

Grain Mixtures

Feed sparingly the first day after taken from the incubator on equal parts of grit, charcoal and chick feed. From the second day on, mix 10 per cent grit and five per cent charcoal with the grain mixture and feed three times daily, always keeping the chicks hungry for more. The chick feed should be scattered in the litter to induce the chicks to take exercise. Any reliable brand of chick feed will give good results if properly fed but where large flocks are kept it is cheaper and more satisfactory to mix grain at home. The following ration has given good results:

DRY MASH

Wheat Bran	20 lbs.
Corn Meal	10 "
Sifted Ground Oats	10 "
Low Grade Flour	10 "
Beef or Fish Scrap	10 "

CHICK FEED

Cracked Wheat	15 lbs.
Cracked Corn (fine)	15 "
Pinhead Oats	10 "
Broken Rice	5 "
Chick Grit	5 "
Charcoal (fine)	5 "

Dry mash should be kept before the chickens at all times after the first week. The composition may vary considerably and still give good results.

Green food such as sprouted oats, mangels, or lawn clippings should be fed regularly.

It is better to underfeed than to overfeed during the first three weeks.

Meeting of Smith Council

Grant to Lakefield Fair—Court of Revision Held

Members of the Municipal Council of the Township of Smith met in the County Council Chamber, Peterborough, on Friday, May 28th, at 10 o'clock. All the members were present with Reeve McKee in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. Messrs. Knox and Trennum petitioned the Council for a grant in aid of the Lakefield Agricultural Society. Reeve McKee replied that the Council were in sympathy with the request, but on account of the large outlay in keeping the winter roads opened, which amounted to over $460, it was impossible to give the usual amount.

Moved by Councillor Nichols, seconded by Councillor Northey that $25 be granted.—Carried.

Mr. Soden addressed the Council, and said that he had used every effort to secure the usual road grant from the government. He had made several trips to Toronto to consult the Minister of Public Works, but on account of the money stringency was unable to do anything. He, however succeeded in securing a promise that a grant under by-law would be made next year.

Mr. McKee, on behalf of the Township, thanked Mr. Soden for his kindly interest.

Moved by Deputy Reeve Jobe, seconded by Councillor Nichols, that the Treasurer be instructed to pay the following accounts:

C. O. Northey, postage and stationary, $10.

Percy Edmison, work on winter road, $13.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned to meet as a Court of Revision of the Assessment Roll. After taking the necessary oaths, the members took their seats, with Reeve McKee in the chair. The Clerk reported three appeals, as follows:

Garris Graham, assessed too high.

J. C. McConkey, assessed too high.

After considerable discussion it was decided to again adjourn the Court until Saturday, June 5th, at 2 o'clock, at which meeting it was decided, by motion, to make the following deductions:

Garrin Graham, $10.

R. Adams, $300, from buildings.

J. C. McConkey, $800 from land.

The Court then adjourned.

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Cured Both Stomach Trouble and Headaches

PALMERSTON, ONT., JUNE 20th, 1913.

"I really believe that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives". Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctor's bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old Stomach Trouble and distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Sometime ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives" and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use.

Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked the reason. I replied, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives". He said, "Well, if Fruit-a-tives are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can".

Mrs. H. S. WILLIAMS.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box. 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Income From Ten Cows

By J. Frank Smith

Ten profitable cows on a farm will yield an average monthly income of from $80 to $100 in cash for the cream, besides the skim milk that is the best of feed for the calves, pigs, and chickens, all of the latter being good money makers when properly handled. The income from a dairy herd depends on the number and quality of the cows.

The cows will bring in a steady monthly income all the year, and they are dependable every year.

The cows will bring in the regular monthly cheque, whether it is dry or cold or warm or wet.

The cows will call for soil building crops and they will also help to fertilize the land. A cow is said to be worth $10 per year to a farm as a soil builder. After ten years of dairy farming the lands would be worth $10 to $20 more per acre.

Dairy farming is an economical business, as it does not require very much capital nor a very large force of men or teams to conduct it.

The market for dairy products is always steady and sure and getting better yearly, and cows call for silos, by the use of which the farmer is assured of plenty of good cow feed and a crop failure is unknown.

Good dairy cows are coming in great demand and bring good prices, and a heifer calf from a good milch cow is worth from $25 to $50 when it is 10 days old. The increase of the herd is a constant source of income.

Doctor Said She Had Bright's Disease.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED HER.

Bright's disease is a term applied to one of the most serious of all diseases of the kidneys, the symptoms of which are often of a severe character.

Severe pains in the back appear at first and are followed by disturbances of the urinary organs which show that the urine contains a large amount of albumen. Dropsy is also another forerunner of the dreaded Bright's disease. On the first sign of any kidney trouble you should at once put the kidneys right by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. The pill that cures kidney troubles only.

Mrs. C. A. Heistand, Mooswa, Alta., writes: "Last May I was taken down sick. The doctor told me I had Bright's disease. My kidneys got so bad I could not rest day or night. The doctor's medicine did not give me any relief. I used four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they put me in good shape again."

Doan's Kidney Pills are the original kidney pill, so when you ask for "Doan's" do not accept any others with similar names.

Price, 50c per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FRENCH BEGIN NEW ATTACK ON ENEMY

FRENCH START A NEW OFFENSIVE AGAINST THE FOE AT ST. MIHIEL

TWO LINES OF TRENCHES ARE TAKEN

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, 9.—The French troops have swept forward a 100 yards along a 350 yard front in a new offensive against the German wedge on St. Mihiel. Despatches to the war office this afternoon said the battle in Lepretre forest is continuing, the French smashing hard at the weak spots in the enemy's lines. By one rush on the edge of the woods two lines of the German trenches were carried, and at certain points small bodies of the French troops took portions of the enemy's third line of trenches. Fifty Germans have been made prisoners in Lepretre. For the first time in several days, the war office despatches to-day had little to say of the fighting north of Arras. Unofficial despatches reported that while a heavy bombardment continues on both sides, there has been a lull in the infantry clashes in the last twelve hours.

BERLIN, via wireless, June 9.—The Austro-Germans in south east Galicia have recaptured Stanislau. An official statement from the war office this afternoon also reported successes in the operations near the Baltic where the German troops have occupied Kubyli on the Windau River.

LONDON, June 9.—The British steamer Lady Salisbury, was torpedoed according to an announcement here to-day. The Lady Salisbury was a steel screw steamer of 1446 tons, owned by the Gresham Steamship Shipping Company.

DIRIGIBLE FALLS INTO SEA

ROME, June 9.—An Italian dirigible returning from a bombardment of Fiume, fell into the Adriatic off the Dalmatian coast. The crew was captured by the Austrians.

GERMANS WERE ENTRAPPED

PETROGRAD, June 9.—In their eagerness to reach Lemberg by a sudden dash, the Austro-Germans have fallen into traps cleverly set by the Russian commanders, and have suffered heavy losses. An official statement from the war office today mentioned one such incident, the Rusians taking two thousand prisoners and a large quantity of ammunition.

OTTAWA, June 9.—The Canadian casualty list according to the statement issued at noon to-day now totals 8094, of whom 1225 were killed, 5298 wounded, and 1571 are missing.

WASHINGTON, June 9—Secretary of State Bryan was at his desk as usual by 10 a.m., today, presumably for the last time as premier of the cabinet. The retiring premier plainly showed the effects of the strain he has been under. His face was worn, haggard, deeply lined and very pale.

BRYAN'S STATEMENT

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Secretary Bryan issued the following statement this afternoon: "My reason for resigning is clearly said in my letter of resignation, namely, that I may employ as a citizen the means which the president does not feel at liberty to employ. I honour him for doing what he believes to be right and I am sure that he desires—as I do—a peaceful solution of the problem which has been created by the action of the submarines. Two of the points upon which we differ are, first, as to the suggestion of investigation by an international commission, and second, as to warning Americans against travelling on belligerent vessels or with cargoes of munition. I believe that this nation should frankly state to Germany that we are willing to apply in this case the principle to which we were bound by treaties to apply to disputes between the United States and the thirty countries with which we have made treaties, providing for the investigation of all disputes of every character and nature."

GERMAN NOTE SIGNED

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Robert Lansing, Acting Secretary of State, signed the German note at 12.50 p.m. to-day. It was said it would be sent about two p.m.

GERMAN SUB. IS SUNK BY BRITISH CREW IS CAPTURED

Announcement Made in the House This Afternoon by First Lord of the Admiralty Balfour—Six Officers Taken

THE BRITISH CASUALTIES

LONDON, June 9.—A German submarine has been sunk by the British and six officers and all of her crew made prisoners. First Lord of the Admiralty Balfour made this announcement in the House of Commons this afternoon.

Including the submersible reported sunk to-day, nine German submarines have been officially, in statements issued by the Admiralty since the beginning of the war, reported destroyed.

BRITISH CASUALTIES.

LONDON, June 9.—Great Britain's casualties during the war up to May 31 total 258,859, Premier Asquith announced in the House of Commons.

The total was divided as follows: Officers killed 3327, wounded 6488, missing 1130. Other ranks: Killed 47,015 wounded 147,482, missing 53,747. Naval losses were included in this statement, but only the losses in Europe and the Mediterranean activities. The total losses, including naval and all campaigns where the British are engaged in various parts of the world, will, it is expected, reach three hundred thousand.

SYMPATHY FOR THE PEANUT MAN

Many People Cannot See Why His License Was Refused

There is considerable sympathy for George Leumpsies, the Greek peanut vendor, who has been refused a renewal of his license by the Council. George had become a familiar figure and a popular institution. His peanuts were always fresh, he always gave good measure, and his pop-corn was of the best. Moreover he is a quiet, inoffensive little fellow, content to let his wares speak for themselves, and many people are at a loss to see why his license was refused. Last year he paid $60 for the privilege of selling on the street. That meant 1,200 bags of peanuts had to be sold and, of course, he could do nothing on the street during the long winter months. This spring he used his slender capital to make some improvements on his travelling van. Now the Council's edict has put him out of business. George is handicapped in getting any employment anywhere. Not only on account of his lack of knowledge of the English language but also because of rheumatism. The Council might well reconsider the matter.

Police Court

An East City man, charged with vagrancy in police court this morning, was remanded for a week at the request of Chief Thompson. He was found beside a beer keg at a certain place in East City where a number of fellows congregated for a drunk. He has not been working and could not give a good account of himself.

Refused to Pay.

A man who went into a restaurant on George street last evening and had a meal for which he was charged the sum of sixty-five cents, and for which he refused to pay more than twenty-five cents, pleaded not guilty when accused in police court this morning of being disorderly near a public place.

The proprietor of the restaurant explained to the Magistrate that defendant had a T-bone steak, tomatoes and sliced cucumbers. The accused thought he had a veal cutlet, but there was further evidence from police officers to show that he was very drunk. He was fined $2.50 and costs.

JAMES GRISDALE ACQUITTED IN THE HIGH COURT

Crown Presented No Evidence and Jury Returned Verdict of "Not Guilty" Without Retiring

JUDGE HUYCKE'S REMARKS

James Grisdale was acquitted this morning in the High Court on a charge of having received stolen goods on Nov. 24th, 1914. The jury, without leaving their seats, returned a verdict of "not guilty" when the Crown declined to present evidence.

Mr. Hatton, Crown Attorney, said that the evidence of the case had been heard at the December session of the Court, at which the jury disagreed and the prisoner was not proved guilty. The principal evidence was that of Stanley Hartley, who had pleaded guilty to the theft.

"The case was traversed to this court. The Crown has been led to conclude that there might be another jury disagreement and rather than put the County to the expense of the trial and of bringing the young man, Hartley, here." Also the fact was considered that the goods were of trivial value, and that the accused has a large family dependent upon him, and is a hard-working man.

"Whether rightly or wrongly the Crown has decided not to offer any evidence at this trial."

Judge Huycke, in discharging Grisdale, said he was pleased to hear at the former trial evidence in favour of Mr. Grisdale. His past had been honest and industrious. He had a lot of good friends who had vouched for his honesty and industry. "I hope," His Honour concluded, "that this will not interefere with the good poinions they have held."

The jury was composed of R. W. Wilson, Jos. Reynolds, John Sadler, Wm. Shearer, Herb. Mowry, Leo. Shaughnessy, Henry McDonald, Wm Preston, A. Olin, D. M. Minnicola, Fred Board and J. Worboy.

KILLED ON HIS WAY BACK TO DRESSING STATION

Lance Corp. Hugh Wallis Tells How Pte. "Barker" Dean Was Killed—Had Been Slightly Wounded

THEN WAS HIT AGAIN

Mr. Warren Dean has received a letter from Lance Coroporal Hugh Wallis of the 16th Battalion, the same as that in which Pte. "Barker" Dean was serving. The letter gives some sadly interesting particulars of Pte. Dean's death. It was written on May 21st and states, in effect, that on the 15th the Canadian Highlanders made a successful attack on the enemy. In this fighting Pte. Dean was slightly wounded, and left the battle line to go to the dressing station in the rear. The day after the battle, when the Canadians went out to pick up the men that had been hit they found the body of Private Dean. It is evident that while he was on the way to have his wound dressed he was hit again by, perhaps a shell, as the air was filled with them at the time. He received a fatal blow this time, for there was evidence that he was killed instantly. The letter states that Pte. Dean was given a soldiers' burial, and his last resting place was marked by a cross. The letter was accompanied by a parcel containing the effects found on Pte. Dean's body—purse, match safe, etc. Lance Corporal Hugh Wallis is a brother of Lance-Corporal Harold Wallis, whose wounding was noted a few days ago.

MANUFACTURERS ARE IN SESSION AT TORONTO

TORONTO, June 9.—Three hundred members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association from all parts of Canada, gathered here to-day in annual session. President E. G. Henderson made a notable war-time speech emphasizing the fact that in the present crisis to all classes in Canada, duty to King and country should come first. He said that Premier Borden did well to abolish the patronage list, as national business should not be done on lines of political favour. Canada is now producing more and balancing up her finances.

CANADA TO RAISE 35,000 MORE TROOPS

New Force to be Composed of Twenty-Seven Infantry Regiments and Six Batteries of Artillery to Be Recruited in the Dominion.

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Examiner Special:

MONTREAL, June 8.—Major-General Hughes announced here to-night that an appeal would be immediately made to recruit nearly 35,000 more men to go to the firing line in France

This new force will be composed of 27 regiments of infantry and six batteries of artillery, to be recruited from all parts of Canada. With the formation of this new force the number of men raised for active service by Canada will total upwards of 150,000.

In the new contingent there will be four new Highland regiments, one recruited from Vancouver, Victoria, and Winnipeg, a second from Ontario and two Highland regiments from Quebec and the Maritime Provinces.

As far as Montreal is concerned, Lieut.-Col. Gascoigne's regiment, the 60th battalion, is comprised in the new contingent, while three new French-Canadian regiments from Quebec Province, including the 57th, under Lieut.-Col. Paquette, will be recruited.

Eight Ontario Battalions.

In the London division two new regiments will be recruited. In the Toronto division four new regiments will be raised. Two regiments will be allotted to Eastern Ontario, which comprises the districts from Kingston to Ottawa. Two regiments will be raised in the Maritime Provinces, the same number in Winnipeg, one regiment in Manitoba, two in Saskatchewan, two in British Columbia, and two in Alberta, making a grand total of 27 new regiments.

Six new batteries of artillery will be organized, according to the statement of the Minister of Militia, and will be allotted as follows: One to Eastern Ontario and Quebec; one to the London district; two to the Toronto and Hamilton district; one to the Maritime Provinces and one to the West. The above force, including auxiliary units, will amount to nearly 35,000 men, larger than even the first contingent.

Recruiting officers have been and are being appointed all over Canada, in organizing centres. These will act continuously from corps to corps and there will be no cessation to recruiting. Men will be enlisted for overseas service without being attached to any one unit in the meantime. During summer months the men will be sent to the various training camps every week, and will then be allotted to their respective corps.

General Hughes also announced that separation allowance for properly attested wives and next-to-kin will, for the future, be dealt with by the recruiting officers, who as soon as the recruit is medically and personally examined and attested for service, will have a separation allowance ticket made out and sent to the district paymaster, who will pay such separation allowance until the soldier is attached to an overseas unit. Then the Paymaster-General's Office, in Ottawa, will make the payment. The recruit will be required to furnish satisfactory proof that the woman named is really his wife, or mother, or next-of-kin.

Meantime, the Militia Department is giving every opportunity to officers desirous of attaching themselves to these corps, to send in their applications to the district or divisional officers for a course to further qualify them, whether holding previous qualifications or not for these corps; thus no officer will be in a position to state that he has been overlooked. In the meantime, temporary commissions in the Canadian militia will be granted to eligible men not already attached.

Recruiting, however, Gen. Hughes announced, will proceed at all points continuously, and recruits will be forwarded weekly to various camps formed into units. Every opportunity will thus be given for the selection of good officers.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9, 1915

BRYAN BOLTS.

Mr. Bryan, Secretary of State in the United States Cabinet, has resigned. The reason given in his letter of resignation is that it would be an injury to the cause "nearest to his heart"—the prevention of war—to remain in the Cabinet. He differed in toto with the form of President Wilson's reply to the German note. This reply has not yet been made public; but some idea of its bellicose and peremptory character may be gathered from the fact of Bryan refusing to be responsible, in connection with the sending of a reply to the German note that might, or would, cause a rupture of amicable relations between Germany and the United States. The responsible press of the latter country says Bryan has "done the one thing in his power likely to bring about war." We shall soon know what the reply that left Mr. Bryan free for the lecture platform, contains.

TRADE STILL BOOMING.

If Germany hopes to starve Britain by submarine destruction of her commerce, she has a long, long way to go. If we forget that every day Great Britain adds two ships to her merchant fleets, we can remember the immensity of Britain's trade, which so far in this war shows no signs of extinction, but a robust increase. The British Board of Trade report for May, shows imports into the British Isles of 358 millions of dollars. This is not a falling off—it is a great increase over the imports of May last year in the piping times of peace, when the imports were only 299 millions. We should expect a decline in exports, for nearly all the resources of industry are devoted to preparing our way or other, the munitions of war. Yet there is evidence that the export trade is improving, the exports for May being the greatest in any month since the war began. It is interesting to note, in view of the German policy of starvation, that the food products are among the most important items of import increase. Command of the sea is Britain's safeguard, and incidentally an instrument in promoting the welfare of the world.

LOOKING AHEAD.

The good husbandman looks forward from one season to the next—by, in this season, laying the plans for the next. If the Horticultural Societies exhibition of plants and flowers at the Industrial next autumn is to be the success it should be, and can be made, now is the time to prepare for it. Every member of the society should look forward from this moment in preparation for adding to the display of exhibits. Annuals that come into full bloom in September should be planted and fostered, with a view of becoming friendly rivals to other exhibits. One may think that his or her flowers will not win a prize. But one can't tell. It is only by comparison side by side that relative merit is decided. At any rate, if no prize is won, a better reward is gained, in the results of home beautification resulting from special care for the growth and beauty of our flowers. This is the main object after all. To be successful in growing flowers one must do it for the love of the beauty they yield. Every citizen acting under the impulse of this spirit, will, when the collective result is regarded, be a factor in the realisation, in the matter of flowers, of the city beautiful.

In this connection one can well realize what a beautiful city we could have if all worked together—if the city authorities would cooperate with the citizens and do their share on the streets, as citizens so largely do in their homes. If the city should provide curbs for the streets so that the maintenance of boulevards would be possible, we should have our streets correspond with the beauty of our private premises. If we were a little further advanced in civilization—had more of the vandal spirit abroad—we might have our boulevards, as obtains in some cities, a broad ribbon of continuous flowering bloom. This, however, is too much happiness to hope for; and in default of such ideal conditions, it is incumbent upon our citizens, to compensate for the frowsiness of the weed-grown streets in front of their premises, by making their home surroundings additionally beautiful. If we cannot have street and home harmony of beauty, we can at least have contrast.

BOUND, YET FREE.

Canada and the other dominions are proof of the fact that freedom begets unity and strength. Here we have the several self-governing dominions taking part in the war as automatically and naturally as the Mother Country itself. The reasons for this demonstration of unity are well expressed in a recent speech by Mr. Asquith. He said:

> The first is that we are now gathering in the hour of trial the fruits of a wise and far-sighted Imperial policy. We long ago abandoned the old-fashioned and outworn fallacy that colonial autonomy was inconsistent with or hostile to Imperial unity. Irritating and pedagogic interference in the local concerns of the Dominions from here is a thing of the past. But the best statesmanship both here and in the great self-governing communities overseas has for years past in regard to inter-Imperial relations been, not merely negative, it has been of a positive and a growingly constructive kind.

Canada had in a sense to show her teeth—make a bitter struggle to get responsible government. Seventy or eighty years ago the battle of responsible government was fought out, and Canada won against the prejudices and fear of the British statesmen of the day. The event has justified the concession. The granting of responsible government to Canada has been—not separation and coolness—but closer unity and oneness of aim and effort. The same boon granted to other colonial units has had a similar effect, the case of South Africa being among the most recent and notable. Thanks to the extension of self-government to the dominions, we have now a united Empire, a realization of the slogan of Dumas' Musketeers—"one for all and all for one." Thus we have had demonstrated that what we are fighting for to-day—fighting to retain, freedom in its widest sense—freedom for the individual, freedom for the state—is worth fighting for, and worth winning. The British Empire, in its mighty amplitude, is a political paradox—an evidence that judicious relaxation of bonds make the bonds closer. If the colonies that now constitute the dominions, the out works of Imperial power, had not been set free, they had not been so closely united to-day, with the central power and each other. Germany formed a mighty federation, by the bonds of force. But mighty as it is, it is falling to pieces because it lacks the cohesion of liberty, because the members are bound and not free. We are fighting to end the German national negation of all that constitutes human freedom, and consequently true human happiness and the true conditions of human progress.

U. S. AND WAR MUNITIONS.

The New York Commercial says: "Russia is losing ground along the eastern battle front because she has not enough ammunition for her field artillery. Modern tactics as pursued in this war call for the use of artillery and machine guns on a scale never before seen. Every foot of ground is showered with shells and shrapnel before an advance is made. In open country the army that lacks plenty of field guns and ammunition cannot make a stand against a well-equipped enemy. The comparatively small British army in the western field is said to have used more ammunition in one day than was consumed in the Boer war.

This adds enormously to the cost of the war. The millions of shells for field guns that are being used so prodigally cost from ten to twenty-five dollars apiece, and those fired from large siege and fortress guns cost hundreds of dollars apiece. The United States is becoming well equipped for such warfare. Our steel mills now turn out more products than the entire normal output of the mills of England, France and Germany. We have five steel centres which have a greater capacity than Essen. Our powder mills and ammunition factories are being enlarged to supply the demands of half of Europe, and they certainly could supply all that we ourselves could need.

We have learned much about modern warfare in the past ten months and we are becoming well equipped for it at the expense of others without adding a cent to our own taxes. We will be in less danger than ever when the new private works are completed and in full running order three or four months hence. We will also see a boom in shipbuilding. Many capitalists are contemplating the building of ships as a speculation. Our lack of ships is our weak point, and the whole outside world knows it even better than we do. We are indeed fortunate in that we are outside the war zone and are being strengthened at the expense of others."

What Britain Holds By Land and Sea

Britain's participation in the war by land means much more to the allies than the number of miles she is holding of the front would indicate. The various land fronts of the belligerents in the great war make a total mileage of 1,867 miles, of which the British army occupies a front of 31 miles. The Germans have the longest land front, of which part is opposed to the Russian and the remainder to the French, British and Belgian armies. The Russians, who come next to the Germans in point of mileage, maintain contact with the enemy of 1,056 miles, and are opposed to all three nations in combination against the allies.

Things to Consider.

In considering the 31 miles held by the British force, the nature of the country held and the character of the fighting must be considered. Along certain parts of the French line, as around Belfort and Epinal, strongly-fortified areas render the passage of the Germans almost impossible, and the task of the French is correspondingly easier. At other points as in the Vosges and the Argonne, French and German oppose on another only at certain strategic points, and in such places there is no connected fighting line, but only a discontinuous line of small detached bodies of troops struggling for points of vantage.

British Face Great Odds.

With the British force, however, this is not so. Every inch of the ground is held only by the severest attack and counter-attack. The ground is quite open and exposed, and is constantly swept by artillery and machine-gun fire. Also, a short time ago the German attempt to break the opposing line was made and repulsed along the British front at Ypres, and before that the British had held, in the face of overwhelming numbers, the positions along the Aisne, where the Germans were expecting to retrieve partly the rush back from Paris. So that it will readily be conceded that the holding of the British front is like the holding of a storm-beaten bastion which meets the full force of the gale.

The following table shows the extent of the land fighting lines of the warring powers:

Britain's Value on Sea.

The great value of Britain's participation in the war is more readily appreciated when the extent of the sea fronts defended by the allies are considered. The British fleets alone protect a sea frontier of over 30,000 miles. France, which comes next, has a total—with her colonies—of some 5,400 miles.

Keeps Open the Oceans.

In order properly to visualise the great part of the British Empire is playing in the present war, however, it is necessary to bear in mind that not only does the British navy protect our own sea frontiers, but it also keeps open the great ocean trade routes by which the ships of all the friendly and neutral nations can bring the supplies necessary for their well-being.

Have Small Sea Fronts.

Germany and Austria have relatively very small seafronts to protect—700 and 300 miles respectively. The Austrian sea front is, of course, confined to the Adriatic Sea, whilst the German colonies having, since the beginning of the war, been abandoned by the German naval authorities, the sea front to be protected is correspondingly reduced.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

AN ERRATIC HERMIT

But He Saved the Old Farm and Merry Wedding Bells Rang Out.

By GERTRUDE MARY SHERIDAN.

"Freezing weather in eight states, snow on the Pacific slope, and the equinoctial brewing in the West Indies," said William Mercer, putting down the evening paper and trying to give a cheerful aspect to the announcement.

"Yes, the frost will soon be on the pumpkin, neighbor," observed grim Henry Brown. "Hope you've looked out for your winter woodpile."

"The fuel question is the least of my troubles," answered Mercer. "I must say the cellar is pretty well stocked, too. It's the payment on the eighty acres that troubles me, and you know it. Let's get down to business. Old Sharp is hard as tacks. He's given me just thirty days to settle up, or lose the farm. Will you loan me the money I need?"

Brown squirmed in his chair. Then he arose to his feet. There was a covert, crafty gleam in his little beadlike eyes.

"See here, Mercer," he said, "you and I married sisters, and naturally we have sort of mutual interests. Relationship isn't business, though, and when you talk of my helping you out, I must remember that I have a family of my own to care for. I don't approve of some of your ways. Last winter you pretty near carried a poor family in the village. Then again you sent your daughter to a seminary. You can't afford these things, you know."

"I can always afford to be charitable and to try and give my children an education," declared Mercer, flushing up with suppressed indignation.

"Then pay the cost and don't grumble," advised Brown crustily. "As to the charity end of it, I don't believe in encouraging the lazy nor helping the shiftless. Why, just as I left home I heard my wife give sharp walking papers to a whining old fellow looking for shelter and a supper. There's no nonsense about us practical, thrifty people, I can tell you that. As to loaning you that money—well, I don't know."

"You must, or I shall lose everything," declared Mercer.

"What is it?" inquired Mercer eagerly.

"I don't propose to go into explanations, but your daughter, Ethel, and young Harry Lane have been going a good deal together."

"Yes," nodded Mercer, "what of it?"

"Just this. Some people say they are engaged and that they correspond. You ought to know that the daughter of a man as poor as you are is no match for the son of the richest man in the district. Break it up. Keep Ethel away at school, drift her out of this silly idea, and I'll loan you the money.'

It was Mercer who arose to his feet now. He did so with a look on his face that made his visitor cringe and wince.

"We're not the Lane sort, eh?" he said, his voice husky with emotion. "And I suppose you think you are. I understand you only too well, Henry Brown. You have plans for your own daughter in that direction, is that it? And you ask me to sell my child's happiness. No! I would as soon interfere between two angels. Go your way, I want nothing more to do with you."

"Will Mr. Brown let you have the money, husband?" she inquired anxiously.

"No. I demeaned myself asking for it."

"I am so sorry. Dear! Dear! Why does not Uncle Silas at least answer my letter. I wrote him how much we needed help. He has always sent sister and me a hundred dollars at Christmas, and I hoped my letter would move him."

"Don't worry, mother," said Mercer, with an effort to look cheerful. "We'll get along some way."

Uncle Silas was quite an institution

"We're Not of the Lane Sort, Eh?"

with his two nieces, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Mercer. They had never seen him, and he had forbidden all his kin to visit him. He was reputed wealthy, but an erratic hermit. He had not replied to the letter, and Mercer felt pretty well discouraged as he went out into the yard to close up the stable.

"Hello!" he exclaimed, as he came across a huddled figure sitting near the corn crib. "What's the trouble, stranger?"

"I was wondering if you'd give me a bite to eat and a bed in your hay loft," replied the stranger, a bent, decrepit looking old man. "I applied at the next farm house. They set the dog on me."

"That's them," muttered Mercer, a trifle bitterly. "Well, stranger, the owner of that farm is rich and I am poor, but I never yet turned a homeless person from my door, and I shan't begin now. You wait here a minute."

The kind hearted farmer went into the house, told his wife to fix up a bed in the attic, and went out into the yard again. To his surprise his late visitor was nowhere to be seen. Then he heard a groan. It proceeded from a root cellar he had been digging that day.

"Too bad," said Mercer, as he saw the old man lying across the loose timbers at the bottom of the pit. "I had no business leaving him to wander around unwarned."

The old man was carried into the house and a doctor was sent for. The tramp, if such he was, had injured his head and was unconscious. They placed him in the spare bedroom. The doctor arrived, did what he could for the patient, and said he was not seriously hurt.

"You've got a queer customer in there," the physician told Mercer, as he ended his visit to his patient the next morning.

"How is that?" inquired Mercer.

"He has insisted that I send Lawyer Jones and Mr. Brown to him."

"Why, I can't understand that," remarked Mercer.

"No more can I, but, whim or business, he is very persistent, and I'm going to humor him."

The lawyer arrived in company with Brown an hour later, both wondering and mystified. The patient insisted that Mercer also should come into the sick room.

"Why," exclaimed Brown, "it's the old tramp—"

"No more tramp than you," cried the sick man, "you crafty old sinner! I'm the uncle of your wife. I came down here to investigate. You bought the mortgage to crowd out your brother-in-law here, and this lawyer is pretending he owns it. Produce those notes. I'm going to pay them."

"You big, blundering noodle!" scolded Mrs. Brown two days later. "You've made a nice mess of your smart scheming, haven't you?"

It seemed so, indeed, for Uncle Silas had made Mrs. Mercer his heiress, the Mercer farm was saved, and merry wedding bells rang for pretty Ethel and her lover when the June roses began to bloom.

PAID DEBT TO PROVIDENCE

Congressman's Somewhat Peculiar Reason for His Attendance at Sunday Worship.

A certain member of congress who is an ardent Republican recently took up wheel riding as an exercise, and every Sunday morning hied him to Great Falls. He stuck to his trips for about a month, and then one bright Sabbath donned his frock coat and hat and headed for a fashionable member of congress, a Democrat, who expressed surprise at his sudden change of heart:

"I thought," said the second member, "that you always rode a wheel Sunday?"

"So do I," replied the first member "that's why I'm here."

"It's this way," replied the first: "Providence has enabled me to miss 15,000 gumblasted automobiles in the last month. I'm a good Republican, believing in compromise. Therefore, I visit church in the morning, square myself with Providence, and then go riding on my bicycle in the afternoon."

"It seems foolist," commented the second member.

"Of course it does to you," retorted the first, "You're a howling Democrat, and you'd rather get run over by an automobile than pay tariff to Providence."—Washington Star.

THE FORD AS A LIFE-SAVING CAR

HAMILTON, Ont., June 9.—"Saving lives," is the rather unique business by which S. D. Jarvis of this city, claims to make a good livelihood, and from all reports, business is prospering.

About fifteen miles out of Hamilton, Ont., rises Tansley Hill, twelve miles of terror for motorists. Tansley Hill is something more than a difficult climb. A journey up its steep sides is really fraught with considerable danger for the man who is not sure that his car can make the grade As a matter of fact there have been numerous accidents, especially during the season of 1913, several persons losing their lives when their heavy cars, unable to climb the ascent, backed down and over the embankments.

At the foot of Tansley Hill lives S. D. Jarvis. Up to May 18, 1914, he was wedded to the horse, owning a fine driver, which he used for all manner of work as well as pleasure. But on that date he bought a Ford car and from that day he has not only become an automobile enthusiast and abandoned his driver, but added materially to his income in a peculiar manner.

Jarvis, with his Ford, makes a business of hauling cars up Tansley Hill. Writing about his Ford, which he describes as a "labour-saving and profitable machine," Jarvis says:

"I have hauled every known make of a heavy car over the mountain, but have never seen a Ford stalled, except for lack of gasoline."

Opened Fire On a Crowd

BOSTON, June 7.—Charles E. Warren of Grant Street, Allston, walked into Green's restaurant, Centre Street, Newton Centre, at the noon hour when the restaurant was full of people, drew an automatic revolver from his pocket and opened fire.

Warren turned, ran into Centre Street, and fled. John Fay, a postman, chased him, caught him, and when Warren tried to shoot Fay Fay knocked the revolver from his hand. Over $6,000 Raised On First Day of The Y.M.C.A. Canvass

Splendid Success Scored by Workers Yesterday and Returns Were Roundly Cheered as They Were Made Last Evening---Committee Hard at Work To-day

Seven o'clock last evening found the workers on the Young Men's Christian Association campaign gathered to take stock of the day's work. Fifty to sixty came in. They hailed the sight of the luncheon table, for the labourer is indeed worthy of his hire. They had bustled about all day, and were ready for supper. In a little time that was disposed of. Good, as usual. For the hosts are good providers.

Then the returns. Asst. Galley had prepared a slate, propped it up against the wall and got ready to record the takings. As each team captain announced his score, the meeting cheered. All did not score alike. Many people were not in when the members of the teams called. Those will be seen again. The fact of a day out of town or an engagement at home will not prevail. The list of possibles must and will be canvassed. Else who would know how much would be missed. It will not be the largest subscriptions that will finally count. Those are invaluable and a great encouragement to the workers. But, and this is uppermost, if every man who is approached will do some thing the grand total will roll up. Not a doubt. And it is rolling.

Here is the report sheet. Conspicuous among the contributions were those of Mrs. Haslett, Mrs. Walsh, the Misses Dickson, for $1,000; Mrs. Hugh Waddell and Mrs. R. M. Waddell for $1,000 and Mr. T. F. Matthews for $500. These are generous amounts and will be heartily appreciated.

The Executive Committee have other prospective contributions in some considerable amount in hand, and are confident that they will be forthcoming. The whole total grouns up to a little over $6,000. It is said to be a long, long way to Tipperary. And friends, there is a considerable way to go to raise this $12,000. But it will be lifted.

Workers were invited to relate to the meeting incidents of the day's canvas. If refusals had been experienced, then it was a good thing to hear of these and formulate an argument to meet possible objections. Some one sits up at night to devise reasons and excuses for not supporting some public object. It is human nature. Others will not assert at sight. Have to be reasoned with. They will give, but the process of clenching the subscription takes just so long. Never mind the time, get the promise or pledge. Don't take the statement that you will have to take the will or the deed. Get the deed. Then the subscription is safe. Sure thing. The end justifies the means, so say the Germans. We all don't agree, but we may use such of the attributes of "kulture" as seem sound and applicable. Else we may get left.

To-day is a busy one. The workers are working under pleasanter weather conditions than at the Patriotic Fund rally, last December. Cars are in use. Bicycles and any old conveyance. So the ground is being covered rapidly. The teams fairly eat up the subscription cards, giving name, occupation and residence of the possible contributor. If fair success is had to-day the back of the load will have been broken, as it deserves to be. A strong and long pull will tell.

Twenty-five Recruits Are Asked For From the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons

The 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons have received instructions to recruit at once twenty-five men for the 8th Canadian mounted Rifles to replace the draft that has been chosen from that body to reinforce the Strathcona Horse at the front. Lt.-Col. Johnston will be at the Armouries from 9 to 11, 3 to 5, and 6:30 to 8 daily, for the purpose of taking on recruits. Although the only intimation was a note on The Examiner bulletin board, there were a number of applicants this morning. It is expected that there will also be recruiting here in a short time for artillerymen to fill up the rank of the 26th Battery, from which a reinforcing draft has been taken.

BELLEVILLE NOTES.

Special to The Examiner:

It would really seem that after weeks of uncertainty, rumours and disappointments, the 39th Battalion are upon the verge of bidding Belleville farewell.

Lt.-Col. Preston, commanding the Battalion, announced publicly on parade this morning that this was most probably our last week in the city.

The Minister of Militia is to publicly present the colours to the Regiment on Friday next, and as I have heard it whispered that cheap trains may be run for the occasion, it would afford the Peterborough boys much pleasure to see an influx of Peterborough citizens and friends.

The ceremony of presentation of colours is a very picturesque and impressive one, and I am sure few would consider the money wasted, and in the days to come, whatever befalls, they would look back upon their visit with pleasure.

Many are hoping that we may have yet one more brief leave, just to say farewell, but unless rumour once more upholds her reputation for being a lying jade, it is a pleasure and a pain that will have to be foregone by not a few, and we must linger long on sweet memories of when last we parted and said that last fond word, 'Goodbye.' "Are we downhearted?" Not by a long chalk.

Keenly anxious for the word to move we are ready to face the music, to share the toils, yes and the spoils of war, with those who have been lucky enough to forestal us in the race for the honour of defending the Empire and we only hope that when our turn arrives, we shall not be found wanting, and that we may each uphold the British tradition of tenacity and courage as dauntlessly as they.

For the best, it is "Kismet" and we should worry, eh?

IS CHARGED WITH ENTERING HOUSE ASSAULT INTENT

Alex Lillico a Decent Fellow Except That He Drinks Said Man Whose House He Entered

EVIDENCE ALL IN

Alexander Lillico appeared before Judge Huycke this morning in the General Sessions of the Peace, charged with having broken into the residence of Fred Collett, Brown street, at 3 a.m., April 15, 1915, with the intention of committing assault. Mrs. Collett was the principal witness.

She retold the story upon which the prisoner was committed to trial in the police court.

Mr. Collett was engaged on night work in the C.G.E. About 3 a.m. on April 15, 1915, she was awakened by sounds of someone trying to open the door. Witness was in bed with her two children. Lillico had visited the Collett home once on a Saturday evening remaining an hour or two. Lillico was also found intoxicated one night by Mr. Collett on the latter's verandah.

Witness told Mr. Gordon her chief complaint was that Lillico entered her house intoxicated when she was alone, and being of a nervous disposition, was greatly upset.

'I was awful'y upset," Mrs. Collett said. She had been nervous since they had lost their dog.

None of His Business.

She first heard some one at the back door and then heard steps on the front verandah. Witness said Lillico received nothing to drink the night of his visit. Witness said that when she had the money she purchased two bottles of stout every Saturday night. Mr. Collett drank next to nothing. At times they had a little ale together.

Witness told Mr. Gordon she did not think it was any of his business what she bought.

Married Before.

To Mr. Gordon witness said she was married four years ago in Toronto. She could not recall the minister's name, didnt know his denomination or his church. She signed her marriage license. Mrs. Collett said she had been previously married in Kensington, England.

To Mr. Hatton, witness said it was about a month before April 15th that Mr. Collett found Lillico drunk on their verandah. Her husband returned from work about 11 p.m. and found him. Witness had heard a knocking on the front door and the children had been greatly frightened that night.

Frederick Collett.

To Mr. Gordon witness said he was a moulder in the C.G.E. works. He now lived on Albert street. Witness knew Lillico by going to and from work with him. One Sunday night in the winter Lillico had come over from his boarding house. He said he was lonely. He remained an hour and a half. Witness knew Lillico two or three months. Mr. Collett told of having found the prisoner drunk on his verandah. Lillico asked him to have a drink or a cigar. Collett replied that he only wanted Lillico to keep away.

On the morning of April 15th, witness told Mr. Hatton, he returned from work and found doors open which he had locked. His wife's bedroom door was locked and barricaded. She was dressed up and much unnerved. Going downstairs witness found the pantry window open and dishes that had been on the sill had been placed outside.

Witness told Mr. Gordon he thought that Lillico must have been drunk when he came around. Prisoner was a decent fellow except that he drank.

"Do you think he would have gone into your house that night you were at work if he were sober?"

Judge Huycke objected to Mr. Gordon's question as to Collett's opinion of Lillico's intentions upon the entering the house.

"From what you know of Lillico do you think he would have broken into your house with the intent of assault or any improper act?" Mr. Gordon then asked.

He wouldn't have broken in unless he were drunk the witness replied.

Drunk at Dance.

P. C. Reid said he saw Lillico at 1.45 a.m. on April 15, the worse of liquor. It was at a dance of the Caledonian Club. Lillico asked several ladies for a dance. They refused him. He then left. Witness said he was surprised when he heard of the charge against Lillico.

A Precocious Boy.

Little Willie Collett aged 6, said he was in Form Part II at the King Edward school. He was unabashed by the big court and the audience, answering intelligently and very brightly. He corroborated his mother's evidence.

The hearing was adjourned at noon until 2 p.m.

Death of An Old Resident

Mrs. Mary Kelly Passed Away Yesterday Afternoon

Citizens heard with feelings of deep regret yesterday afternoon of the death of a highly respected and lifelong resident in the person of Mrs. Mary Farrell Kelly, relict of the late Thomas Kelly, which occurred at the family residence, 374 Downie street, about 2:30 o'clock.

The late Mrs. Kelly was born in Peterborough 63 years ago last January. Her maiden name was Mary Farrell Simons. Her husband, the late Thomas Kelly, who was well-known throughout the city and district, having been alderman in the city for a number of years, predeceased her nine years.

There are three sons and six daughters, Misses Mary, Sue, Estelle, and are Rev. Father P. J. Kelly, Parry Sound; Messrs. Thomas, Edmonton; and Egbert, at home; and the daughters, Misses Mary, Sut, Estelle, and Annie, at home; Miss Hilda, Montreal; and Mrs. R. Desmarteaux, Ottawa. One sister, Mrs. A. Dunn, city, and one brother, Mr. James Simons, also survive.

A Roman Catholic in religion, Mrs. Kelly always took an active part in the work at St. Peter' Cathedral. Last Tuesday she celebrated her 25th year as promoter of the Sacred Heart League of St. Peter's Cathedral. In every way, in her church relations, she showed her faith by her works, and her devotion to her religious duties, and the interest of the church.

Mrs. Kelly was a member of one of the oldest families of the city. From childhood she has watched its growth, and has contributed her large share to the development of a higher citizenship. Not only by the example and influence of a busy home life devoted to the training of a large family, who to-day give strength to, and do credit to our citizenship. In all her other relations as a good neighbour and good friend, she exercised the influences that have made the world within her sphere of activity, better from her presence in it. Requiescat in pace.

The funeral will take place at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning from the late residence to St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to St. Peter's cemetery for interment.

"Common Sense" Is Criticised

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—There were in your paper last evening two letters signed "Common Sense," to one of which, with your kind permission, I wish to reply. I refer to that one headed, Lord's Day Alliance Bombast.

On the pseudonym I make no comment—none being necessary.

"Common Sense" labours under a misapprehension. Rev. W. L. Armitage certainly preached in the interests of the Lord's Day Alliance work—that work being the procuring for and securing to the working man of one rest day in seven.

Your correspondent says: "Lots of people would be only too glad to even get seven days a week working to catch up some of their back rent or pay the grocer." Say, would it not be a very near-sighted policy for a man to work seven days per week for the sake of an extra day's pay when all history shows that very soon he would find himself working seven days for the wages of six? I refer "Common Sense" to English History prior to 1640, and Abbott's "Napoleon Bonaparte," vol. 1, chapter 16.

I know not whether it is merely a grammatical error in your correspondent's identifying himself with the grocers and landlords, or whether he is one of them. In the latter case I ask him to look at the matter from a common sense point of view—how would he like to keep his store (or office) open four nights per week from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m., one night to 9 p.m. and one to 11 p.m.? I think that before many months he would be glad to have one of these "Lord's Day Alliance fellows" come around talking (allow me to correct "Common Sense") not "idleness," but one day's rest out of seven.

Your worthy correspondent has omitted entirely the religious aspect of our rest day. As Rev. Armitage told us on Sunday, this day is observed in commemoration of (1) the completion of the creation of the earth; (2) the resurrection of Jesus Christ, and it points us forward in hope of his coming again. If "Common Sense" does not consider these things worth remembering he is worthy of being exhibited as a curiosity.

History repeats itself— "Common Sense" and those who think with him (if there be such) would drive away such really fine speakers as the gentleman who addressed the two churches on last Sabbath. Permit me, sir, to direct your correspondent's attention to English History of the year 1637, when William Prynne was brought up from his prison with his ears sewed on to be punished by the Star-Chamber for publishing a book against Sabbath-breaking. He was fined £5000, degraded from his profession, placed in the pillory, had his ears cut off, his cheeks and forehead branded, and was confined in a distant prison on a life sentence. He returned three later with trumpets sounding and torches burning and a thousand horse for his convoy. Baillie says, "Never here was such a like show.' History is repeating.

It is refreshing after reading your correspondent's letter to notice with what unblushing effrontery he admits (in the fourth line and in the last paragraph) that he did not hear Rev. Armitage. Is it twentieth century common sense to sit in judgment on a man whom one has not heard and whose teachings one does not comprehend? It seems to me such conduct were fitting to the days of Jefreys or of his parasite Wright—it even savours of the French Revolution.

Thanking you for your valuable space, I am, dear sir,

Yours truly,

HERON.

ATHENS, June 9.—The Anglo-French fleet has opened a heavy fire on the Turkish forts on the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles, while the expeditionary forces on the Gallipoli peninsula continue their attacks against the Ottoman positions. Mitylene despatches to-day reported that two of the allied aviators flew over Smyrna, Bournova, and Menjni, dropping bombs and causing much damage to the fortifications.

PARIS, June 9.—Some German troops have appeared along the Italian frontier for the first time, according to Geneva despatches to-day. The Italians in the Trentino district reported a clash with a German regiment.

NEW YORK, June 9.—The United States newspapers are practically unanimous in support of President Wilson in the present crisis.

Following are some of the references made to Retiring Secretary Bryan—"A Deserter," "Good Riddance," "Cheap Imitation," "Temporarily bereft of Reason," "Inefficient and inept," "Out of place in Office," "Lacked dignity, ability and fidelity," "A Misfit."

BERLIN, June 9.—The war office admitted this afternoon that the Germans have been forced to evacuate Neuville Stvaast, five miles north of Arras, and the centre of desperate fighting for several weeks.

This morning Bryan received the newspaper correspondents for the last time. At noon he shook hands with and said good bye to the officials and employees of the State Department. He said that his personal plans for the future were unformed, and that he would not return to the department to-day after leaving for luncheon, shortly after one o'clock. No formalities attended the turning over of the reins by Bryan to Counsellor Lansing. Bryan seemed extremely depressed and weighted with sadness as he gave the newspaper men their final audience. His voice was subdued, his face grey and lined, above an almost funeral garb. Bryan and the president had their interview in the blue room. They resumed the discussion of their differences over the German note and continued the discussion in a most friendly manner. When the visitor finally rose, as did the president, both exclaimed "God bless you" in the same breath.

The Matter is Referred to Mr. E. H. D. Hall, Solicitor for the Commission Who Advises That Body That They May Either Cancel Agreement or Charge for the Extra Current Used—"A Scrap of Paper."

Some time ago Mr. R. R. Hall addressed a communication to the Utilities Commission in which he asked that body to respect a contract that existed between him and the Peterborough Light and Power Company. He charged the Commission with raising his house lighting bill from the original contract price of two dollars a month to five dollars and ninety-one cents. As successors of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Mr. Hall reminded the Commission of the fact that he had a five year contract with the Peterborough Light & Power Company, which provided for a fixed rate of two dollars a month. Mr. Hall's letter and the reply of Mr. E. H. D. Hall, solicitor for the Commission, follows:

Mr. R. R. Hall's Letter.

"I have a contract with the Peterborough Light & Power Company for five years, from March 1913, in respect of electric current consumed in my house of $2.00 a month. This contract extended for a period of five years. That contract still stands in full force and effect and I expect either the Peterborough Light & Power Company or its successors to perform that contract. I do not find I am allowed by any person to treat my contracts as "a scrap of paper," nor also I propose that any person else shall make a contract with me and treat it as "a scrap of paper," as your Commission either willingly or unwillingly are proposing to do in my case. I paid your Commission last month under protest $5.91. Kindly, therefore, see that it is properly credited in the books of the Commission on account of my contract."—R. R. Hall.

Solicitor's Reply.

This communication was referred to Mr. E. H. D. Hall, solicitor for the Commission for an opinion, and the following letter received in reply:

Re R. R. Hall's Contract.

"It appears by agreement between Mr. Hall and the Light & Power Company, dated the 1st of March, 1913, that the company agreed to furnish current for the following apparatus as set out in Clause 1—b, viz., for house lighting and an electric iron for $2.23 per month for five years.

The agreement is made subject to the general conditions printed on the back and also contains the following as Clause 8—"The consumer agrees to use only Tungsten lamps for lighting purposes and that he will notify the company of any additions to the apparatus in use as specified in Clause No. 1—b, and therefore enter into a new contract and the company agrees by Clause 4 to sell the current for the purposes, the term and at the price above mentioned, and among general conditions are the following: Clause E, which provides that the company is at liberty to discontinue the supply of current and cancel the agreement for failure to comply with any clause of the contract, and Clause K, which provides for purposes other than contracted for shall give the company the right either to discontinue the supply of current and cancel the contract or to continue the contract and charge for the current used for the extra services as if the same had been supplied from the date of this contract

I am informed that Mr. Hall has not been using Tungsten lamps and has also been using current for an electric heater without giving the notice required by Clause 8 of the agreement or entering into a new contract and it appears to me, therefore, that by the terms of the general conditions the Commission may either cancel the agreement or charge for the extra current used.

"It might be observed that Mr. Hall in his letter of the 31st May last to the chairman of the Commission emphatically affirms that this agreement is in full force and effect and that he does not propose to allow it to be treated as a "scrap of paper," but apparently, like the origination of this scheme, he wants the terms of the agreement that suit him carried ou, but does not think that he should be called upon to observe the terms that are not to his advantage." —E H. D. Hall.

HOW STAUNTON MET HIS DEATH

Nearly Every Bone in His Body Was Broken—Large Crowd Witnessed the Tragedy

A Rochester exchange has the following to say in reference to the death of Clarence Staunton, a Peterborough man which occurred in Rochester on Sunday last:

"Losing his hold on the rope upon which he was sliding to the ground, Clarence Staunton, aged 32 years, of 43 Centre Park, fell from one of the Kodak Park chimneys and died a short time afterward in Rochester General Hospital, where he was taken. The accident happened Sunday morning as Staunton was placing some lightning protection on the top of one of the large chimneys, 386 feet high.

"The chimneys were being fixed on Sunday, as they are much too warm to touch during the week. A large crowd was watching Staunton descend the rope at the time that the accident occurred. Suddenly they saw the man let go with both hands, topple backward and fall a distance of 182 feet. Other workmen rushed to his aid, and, finding that life was still to be found in his body, rushed him to the hospital with all possible haste. He died a few moments after he had been taken into the institution. Nearly every bone in the man's body was broken.

"Coroner Henry Kleindienst was notified and ordered the body removed to the Morgue, where he is now investigating the case. It is probable that an inquest will be held."

Staunton was employed by the Arrow Conductor Company of Chicago.

Constantinople To Thirst

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, June 9.—An epidemic of typhoid fever is raging among the troops and civilian population of Asia Minor, according to reports from Constantinople, says a Reuter despatch from Athens. Seventy-five physicians already have succumbed to the disease.

There is imminent danger that the Constantinople waterworks system will be compelled to suspend operations because of a shortage of coal, and the output of flour mills has been restricted for the same reason, with the result that here is an insufficient supply of bread. The situation is said to be so serious that many German families are leaving the Turkish capital.

CLAIMED $1000 JURY AWARDED HIM NOTHING

Albert P. Hardman's Case in the County Court Disposed of This Morning

The jury in the Hardman-Wilson case, before the General Sessions and County Court returned a verdict this morning allowing no damages to the plaintiff. Their report declared that the defendant, David Wilson, had not caused the injury to the plaintiff by any negligence, and also that Hardman could not have avoided the injury by any stated carefulness on his part.

Albert P. Hardman was employed by David Wilson of Harvey as a farm hand. While driving a load of milk to the factory the waggon broke. Hardman was seriously injured and probably permanently. He claimed that the waggon was in a dangerous condition when he was sent out and that his employer should have provided a better vehicle. He claimed $1,000, but the jury refused to award him any damages.

G. N. Gordon appeared for the plaintiff, and F. D. Kerr for the defendant.

Germans' Joy Has Faded

Signs of Foreboding in South Germany—Expected Short War

AMSTERDAM, June 9.—Instructive glimpses into the condition of feeling among the people of Southern Germany are provided in an article contributed to the "Handelsblad," of Amsterdam, by a special correspondent who appears to have been favoured with special opportunities for observation. It seems hardly likely that the article has passed the German Censor, for it contains some pleasant truths, which would be unpleasant in Berlin. Possibly it was written when the writer was safely back in his own country.

He points out how very deceptive is the "window-dressing" which is universally practiced nowadays in Germany, but he was able to get to the heart of things as they are in the ranks of the shopkeepers and business people of the middle class.

"A Good Time Coming."

When the war broke out, he was told, these people had been convinced that in a very short time the trouble would end, and a solid golden age would dawn for them. Now, all such anticipations have been given up, and a listlessness and indifference has taken possession of very many. With deep bitterness one such tradesman remarked that "only Army contractors and parasites" were having the good time that was promised to all.

The comparative success of the first German war loan, floated when the spirits of the people were still high, was secured by the aid of a vast newspaper campaign in which the subscriptions were looked on as loans soon to be repaid with heavy interest by Germany's enemies who were about to be conquered and "squeezed." The same argument has lost its power long ago. Instead, it is now shouted from the housetops that Germany has not needed a moratorium. But as no money process can be taken against men under arms or men doing military work of any kind, and as practically every able-bodied man is so engaged, the whole population is, in effect, under cover of the strongest possible moratorium.

Somebody's Opportunity.

Only the Army contractor flourishes. He appears in various forms, often only as middleman anxious to get his profit out of the State. Indeed, the writer hints that the people are beginning to scent some pretty high scandals in this direction. Goods often pass through several hands, each time at an enhanced price, before they actually become the property of the nation—at the highest price of all.

The famous "machine" jams now and then, it would seem, when profits and commissions replace the oil of patriotism.

The suppression of critical voices is becoming almost impossible. Intense indignation is felt by very large bodies of men who, on returning home for short periods of rest, have been disgusted at the scanty provision allowed by the State to their wives and families.

Fearful of Future.

Lastly, there are many who are looking forward and are trying to picture the condition of the widows, orphans and incapacitated men when the fighting is done. There are plenty of people who have some knowledge of the conditions in which such people existed after the war of 1870, and many are quietly expressing their fearful anticipations. If people in these circumstances were badly neglected after 1871 when comparatively small numbers were involved, what will be the fate of hundreds of thousands when this vast struggle is finished?

SCALE OF PENSIONS ADOPTED IN OTTAWA

List as Supplied by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P.—Rate Varies With Rank

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., supplies the following information concerning the scale of pensions as revised to date and adopted by the authorities in Ottawa. The list covers every conceivable case. For all officers and non comissioned officers the rate is correspondingly increased. Following is the list:

The pensions are payable to militiamen disabled on active service, or disabled during drill or training provided disablement is not due to negligence.

Those totally incapacitated receive $384 a year, if disabled in action, and $192.00 if disabled during training.

Those materially affected, but not totally incapacitated, receive $132.

Those incapacitated in lesser degree receive $75.00.

Pension of a widow or widowed mother ceases on marriage, but she gets two years gratuity.

Angus McIntosh's Two Soldier Sons Send Letters Home

Mr. Angus McIntosh yesterday received word from his two sons under arms in Europe. A field card from Wilbert, the older boy, a private in the 16th Battalion of the Canadian Scottish in the trenches, who enlisted in Hamilton with the First Contingent, said merely he was in good health. It was written on May 23rd, on receipt of letters from home. Private Angus McIntosh, Jr., "another chip off the old block," wrote from Sandling, Kent County, England, where the 21st Battalion of the 2nd Canadian Contingent are encamped. He is evidently near Shornciffe, and speaks of going over to visit the wounded. The younger McIntosh writes that everything is fine and they are in a beautiful country.

LETTERS TO SOLDIERS

The Militia Department has issued the following memorandum of procedure to be followed in communicating with members of the Canadian expeditionary force, who are prisoners of war in Germany:

(1) Letters should be made up and addressed as follows: (a) An inner envelope, showing the prisoner's name and initials, should be left open; (b) an outer envelope enclosing the inner envelope should be closed and addressed "For British prisoner of war, interned in Germany (or Austria-Hungary), care General Post-Office, Mount Pleasant, London."

(2) Correspondence should be limited to private and family news and to necessary business communication. No reference to the naval, military, or political situation or to naval and military movements and organizations is allowed. Letters containing such references will be returned to the senders.

(3) Letters may be written in English.

(4) Postal parcels should be addressed "For British prisoner of war, interned in Germany (or Austria-Hungary), care General PostOffice, Mount Pleasant, London."

(5) Postage need not be paid either on letters or parcels addressed to British prisoners of war.

(6) No letters should be enclosed in parcels. As correspondence must be submitted to censorship on arrival, short communications not exceeding two sides of a sheet of notepaper will probably be delivered more speedily than long letters.

To prevent waste of tooth powder or paste is the purpose of a new cup to hold a small amount into which a brush may be rubbed.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL DAMAGE CLAIMS ARE UNDER INVESTIGATION

Mr. Robert Fraser, C.E., of Ottawa, Chief Valuator of the Department of Railways and Canals, and Mr. Burnham, M.P., began their trip yesterday to investigate complaints and to wind up Trent Canal claims for damages. They said that the country travelled through never looked more beautiful or the harvest more promising.

In 1909 the dam at Buckhorn was replaced by a new concrete one at a different level, causing the normal level of the lakes behind it to be raised by fifteen inches. This increase in height of level did not matter till the year 1912, when a tremendous rainfall put much farm land along the shore of the lakes out of business. The level of the dam was dropped after 1912 back to the old level for which the claims for damages had been appraised and paid. But the new damage claims for 1912 had to be considered and they have given much trouble. Two Government valuators were given the list of claims and camped here for a great many weeks. They made certain awards, which in almost every case were refused by the claimants. Mr. Burnham requested the Minister to allow dissatisfied claimants to go to the Exchequer Court whose especial duty it is to consider claims against the Government. The Minister of Railways and Canals consented. But the two valuators again came on the scene with the object many of the claimants think of scaring them off going to the Exchequer Court because it is thought if the Exchequer Court gave higher awards in any number of cases than the valuators did, the usefulness of the latter in their positions would be gone. The Minister recalled the valuators and sent his chief valuator to Peterborough to go with the member and look into valuations and complaints. The complaints were substantiated and Messrs. Pope and Wilkins will do no more valuating in this vicinity. Yesterday Mr. Fraser and the member went through some of Smith township and about one-half of the Ennismore claims, doing about one-half the whole work in one day, and going over the land which was said to be damaged carefully. Mr. Fraser assured claimants that any who remained dissatisfied with awards provided their claims were not a mere fake would have no costs to pay for taking their claims into the Exchequer Court, whether they won their cases or not. The Government does not wish to hold up claimants and the Exchequer Court is provided practically free for the purpose of trying honest claims. The scare of the former valuators was effectually disposed of. The chief valuator will return within a month, when he and Mr. Burnham will visit all remaining claims in Harvey, Ennismore and Smith, which will take not more than two days at the outside, and if after awards are made by Mr. Fraser any claimants are dissatisfied, they are at liberty to ask for trial of their claims by the Exchequer Court Judge, who will hold Court at Peterborough, and there will be no costs so far as the Court and Government are concerned. If, however, claimants do not state their own case to the Judge and leave them to him for further investigation and adjustment, they are at liberty to employ and pay for their own engineers and lawyers.

LONDON, June 8.—The London clubs are proverbial as to the real home of the male Londoner of means. It is there that he turns when he wants to be happy. There he meets his close associates and is as free or reserved as he beastly well likes. Although you may not happen to be aware of the fact, that the fate of our arms in battle is settled there with the greatest precision. In the minds of the various speakers all the details regarding the duration and the nature of the peace to be arranged are conclusively settled. The confusing part of the whole matter from outsiders' standpoint is that grave discrepencies exist between the arrangements of the different authorities. Most of these men, who, by the way, are old enough to know better think that in some particular branch of this war business they could give Kitchener, or the man in charge at the War Office, a liberal handicap and head him off at the wire.

All for Canadians.

A stranger to Clubland blew in. He was a young officer—about thirty—back from France. He had no infallible knowledge regarding the duration of the war, neither did he seem very positive that we would get the peace we wanted for quite a time to come.

He had been billeted near the Canadians, and it was in talking about them that he ventured to express his opinion.

The flare of the fire in the half darkened room played on him and tended to stir reminiscences. He hadn't very much to say, but what he did say, I found interesting and I will set it down as I remember it.

"The word Canadian is the open door to everybody's heart in France," he said. "The absolutely marvellous fight put up by the chaps from Canada has won the absolute adoration of the French. Your fellows accomplished the impossible. Sheer courage and valour carried them through. It was the hopeless impossibility of their task and the wonderful buoyancy with which they went forward that stamps their feat with distinctive greatness.

"He said that he had spoken to a Princess Pat wounded officer, who told him that only 50 of the original regiment was now in action, and that a second lieutenant who had joined at Ottawa was now the commanding officer.

German Infantry.

"The infamy of the Germans is unbelievable. It is absolutely true that when the Canadians advanced up to the captured guns — which by the way, were not Canadian guns — they took hundreds of German prisoners. They did not have time to take them to the rear, and, when they had passed, the Huns took up their arms and shot them in the back. You can believe the worst you hear about the terrible Huns.

"I heard of one captain, I think his name was Geddes, also a Highlander, although mortally wounded, he crawled along the ground calling on his men to follow him."

Asked regarding the devastation of the country, the captain said: "There is just about a mile behind the first line of trenches which is not under cultivation. Behind that the farmers with all the members of their household are cultivating as usual. Why, before this last big affair, we could hardly do anything. The farmers didn't want us about at all. I have seen lots of farmers working with shells dropping in the same field.

Farmers Do Well.

"They keep their pigs and cows and horses. Their hens are a regular fortune to them. They sell eggs at tuppence and thr'pence each. Of course, every one must have an egg.

"They are thrift personified — regular grafters in fact. If our men cut down a tree for firewood, they were right after our O.C. and we finally gave orders to cut no more trees. If we took straw they would send in a bill for about four times the quantity.

"It is wonderful to see how these farmers adjust themselves to the war. You will go along one day, their house is intact. The next day you go by and find that a shell has blown the roof half off, and turned the interior inside out. A few days later you go by, and there stands the house, new tile on the roof and everything apparently as usual.

No Looting.

"The farmers are absolutely protected against thieving. Looting is unknown. It means death and not even a chicken is taken— even by the Canadians.

"When I look about at the chimney pots in London, I can't help feeling how the German gunners would love to get a whack at them. They would take a land mark, say St. Paul's, and systematically flatten everything all about it. They would never touch the dome itself as they would want it for a mark. Their artillery is good—very good."

His opinion about the duration of the war was that it would take a lot of fighting yet to finish it. The end is not now in sight.

Events of tremendous moment are taking place here these days. The use of gas and the fate of the Lusitania, along with the attitude of some of the Labourites, have brought the Government face to face with a situation that it fears to face. The result is the proposal of a coalition Government. Many who should know profess to believe that this foreshadows conscription and the organizing of the nation on a war basis. The munition workers will be taken into the army, striking will mean death.

Would Fix Strikers.

A Canadian officer back from the front said if the fellows at the front who have lost their comrades because of the shortage of munitions were brought back from the front, they would soon settle this strike business. They would charge them with the greatest pleasure. "I would like to bring a platoon of my fellows up, line up the strikers and then tell my boys: 'There are the blighters who are holding up your ammunition on you.' The lesson they would inflict would settle the strike business for some time to come."

A touch of Canada was given to the sale of the world famous Jersey herd of the late Lord Rothchild at Tring on the 17th. Among the Canadians who purchased were W. P. Bull, K.C., for the Brampton Herd; R. Reid for R. J. Fleming, of Toronto; and W. G. Trethewey. Great faith in England's economic position was reflected in the prices which ruled. Two thousand three hundred and seventy-five dollars was realized on one animal. Prominent among the buyers were the King, Lord Derby, the Duke of Connaught, and other English nobility.

THE WORTH OF A BOY

IN a small town of Ontario lives a lad in his teens---the son of a father who for years has been in frail health; an indulgent father who never chided his son, who is mastered by his son. The son is a law unto himself.

In this town are other lads and youths---young fellows with nothing to do when the day's work is done but hang about the main street, loiter on the bridge that crosses the river, and talk the talk that makes them braggart and evil-minded, coarse and rowdies.

Beer drinking has been one result of these assemblies, card playing and pool for small stakes.

Ambition has no part in the life of these lads. Time hangs heavy on their hands. One is destined to be a laborer, another wants to go railroading. Others are drifting, without volition or purpose.

The youth who is the son of the feeble father is in a planing mill. The other day he lost a finger. He is a likable boy and bright---but a boy with little schooling, never likely to rise above his present level.

All this because in this small Ontario town is no Y.M.C.A.---no gymnasium, no pleasant quarters where lads and young men are welcomed; no classes, no games.

A doctor's son is the one who wants to go "braking" on the railway; a leading minister's son is a lazy lout; a contractor's son is a ruffian.

And so we could go on enlarging the dismal tale.

The point of it all is that the Y.M.C.A. saves lads---redeems them from sloth, from bad environments; guards them from the perils of idleness.

The Y.M.C.A. "takes up the slack" in a boy's life---in a young man's life, carries him safely and clearly over the years of forming character. Thank God for the Y.M.C.A. Thank Him with money---as much as you can.

Support the Y.

Local Council of Women's Column

The Matter Published in this column will be supplied by the Local Council of Women and in the interest of their work.

Life is too short to get everything. Choose you must, and as you choose, choose only the best in friends, in books, in recreation, in everything."

An important meeting of the Local Council of Women was held last Friday afternoon.

Arrangements were discussed for the meeting of the executive of the National Council which meets here next Tuesday and Wednesday, 15th and 16th inst.

Although the meetings of the National executive are not open to the public a general meeting of the Local Council of Women will be held on Tuesday evening, 15th inst. at which a number of prominent ladies have been invited to speak, among them Mrs. Plumptre of Toronto, Mrs. W. E. Sanford of Hamilton, Mrs. Ruestis and Dr. Margaret Gordon, both of Toronto.

The report of the fifty-pound layette was received, and showed a fund on hand of nearly fifteen.

The executive instructed the committee to proceed with the work of engaging supervisors and procuring apparatus, and it is expected the grounds will be in readiness by July 1st.

Dollmaking is a new business which the Woman Suffrage Party has undertaken.

Two fingers make legs, two others arms, the wrist buttoned or sewed up the back makes the head. Mrs. Churchill paints a face and there is the neatest little kid body any one ever saw. A yellow chamois glove makes a Chinaman, a brown dressed kid an Indian, who is elegantly dressed in white kid—the upper part of the long glove—and you can have your own old gloves made up into any sort of a character doll you desire or a plain little boy doll in silk sweater made of a man's silk tie or an athletic girl, whose sweater is knit for her.

A little white kid glove bride in white silk and lace, a veil, pearls, and diamonds is the most modest and adorable little creature imaginable. There are to be Jane Addams dolls and Mrs. Chapman Catt dolls, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw dolls, and nobody knows how many other souvenir dolls. They will not personate the people by whose names they are called, but will be made from their gloves.

The first dolls made for the public were offered in Denver, Mrs. Churchill's home, the inventor, and were for the Belgian Relief Fund. One actress there ordered a set representing a play she was in, a character study of each player.

The gloves are all cleaned before using and the part of the glove which makes the face is specially treated.

Mrs. Churchill says the fact that she has voted for twenty-six years has not affected her ability to use her needle.

THE BURDENS OF AGE.

The kidneys seem to be about the first organs to wear out and fail to properly perform their work. The result is weak, lame, aching back, rheumatic pains and failing eyesight. Many people of advanced years have recovered health and comfort by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They ensure the healthful action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

The Wellington County Council has fixed the rate of assessment for this year at three and seven-tenths of a mill and two mills for war purposes. The county has subscribed $30,000 to the patriotic fund.

Construction Work.

The Hamilton Hydro Board is considering the matter of raising $240,000 by debentures to carry on new construction work.

Fire Destroyed Town Hall.

Damage to the extent of $75,000 was caused by fire which wiped out the town hall, library and court buildings at Russell.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Yankees Fail to Hold Place Among Leaders

NEW YORK, June 7.—The series of setbacks accorded the Yankees has afforded food for conversation among the "fans," who like to "play" the game each night followed a performance of the afternoon. During the week just ended the followers of Donovan have been seriously hampered in their fight for first division honours by Boston and Detroit. The Red Sox began by taking a thirteen inning combat and then won going away in the second affair. Detroit was not so kind, shutting out the Yankees in their first game and then humiliating them in the second.

Thus the Yankees have not yet won a game since they returned home from the West. In their journey through the enemies' country they managed to win seven out of fifteen games played, two victories over Washington last Monday helping in a great measure to bring about a near break of the luck.

Donovan, who is noted for his smile, is fast wondering just how long he will be able to grin and bear it. His team not is failing down in hitting but the pitching is beginning to weaken. Only Maisel is hitting the ball as Donovan would like to have the others respond. Just what measures will be taken to strengthen the team, if any, Donovan has not disclosed, but he does say that he will not stand for a losing streak, even if he has to get in the box and do some pitching himself.

LATENT STRENGTH ON TEAM.

The spur of the Yankees, which kept them among the leaders of the league for more than six weeks, was the talk of all baseball. Most followers of the sport insist that Cree, Cook and Hartsell have not reached their real strength yet, and that when they do the Yankees once more will ascend to a place among the fortunate.

It might be said that the preliminary season is now over for the major leagues and that from now only the teams which have the material will be winning. In this respect the American League already is beginning to show, with Boston, Detroit and Chicago doing the fighting for the honours.

After seeing most of the major league teams New York critics are together in choosing the Red Sox, White Sox and Tigers as the best in the American League. Boston is a well balanced aggregation, which is only now beginning to play the game as it can be played. The White Sox, with its efficient pitching staff and "Eddie" Collins, looms up as a formidable machine which will be hard to stop. With Cobb, Crawford and Veach pounding the ball so terrifically the Tigers already seem to be pennant prospects.

The only real change in the American League standing during the week was the drop of the Yankees from third place to fourth, they relinquishing the higher rating to Boston. Of the second division clubs Cleveland and St. Louis seem to be playing better ball, with Washington and Philadelphia doing only average well. Washington is in a serious slump and is being counted out of the race by the backers.

BROOKLYN GAINS FAME.

Brooklyn's surprising stand and fight for the honours is proving of unusual interest among National League "fans." Wilbert Robinson seems to have been unusually fortunate in his selection of young pitchers this spring, as no less than three have shown merit. Weiser Dell is proving the sensation of the older league, although he was seriously set back Saturday. "Ed" Appleton and Sherrod Smith also are pitching winning ball and doing their share in keeping the Dodgers up in the race.

The come-back of "Jack" Coombs, who was slated as "all in" when dropped by "Connie" Mack last fall, is another surprise. Coombs is not only pitching with his old accustomed fervor, but is hitting the ball consistently. Robinson with his good pitching has not yet got the hitting out of his men which he should, and when the team begins to hammer the ball as it did last year it is safe to say that the Dodgers will seriously menace the lead of the other teams.

The race in the National League is fast assuming an interesting stage, with every team in position to take the lead. Saturday the Giants were only five full games behind the Cubs, with the six other teams sandwiched in between. A winning streak by any team would put the club out in front within a week.

GIANTS PLAYING BETTER.

Since the Giants left home they seem to have recovered from their inactivity with a realization that they must win games to get any recognition. After losing one game in Boston they have been turning in victories regularly, and are only in last place because the race is tightening up and all of the second division teams are showing fight. John McGraw insisted before he started West that the Giants will be near the top shortly, and it seems now that he knew whereof he spoke.

The Boston Braves still are not getting the best results from their pitching staff. James, Rudolph and Tyler so far have been second string pitchers, with Hughes and Crutcher doing the brunt of the work. George Stalling is not worrying a great deal — that is, not in print — but he would feel safer if his star mound men were doing the kind of work that carried the club from last to first place in the race of 1914.

Baseball lost during the week just past three characters that will never be forgotten. "Dave" Orr, who made famous the "sacrifice home run"; "Tim" Hurst, the witty umpire, and Charles J. Strobel, the owner, were the men taken by the Grim Reaper. Orr was one of the last of the veterans who played with the old "Mets." Hurst was known the country over for his umpiring and refereeing. Strobel was not so well known in New York, but enjoyed a reputation for honesty and fair dealing throughout the Middle West.

CANADIANS ARE UP WITH BIG LEAGUERS, SAYS LIEUT. CAMPBELL

Well Known Peterboro' Boy Who is Machine Gun Officer of the 48th Highlanders at the Front, Tells of Charge on German Position on May 21st.

THEY LOST HEAVILY

Lieut. "Peter" G. Campbell, of Peterborough, machine gun officer of the 48th Highlanders, the well-known University of Toronto football player writes, under date of May 24, in which he repeats that Lieut. Geoff Taylor was killed by the gas, although he gives no particulars, says the Toronto Star. He also tells how Lieut. Art Muir lost his life, and how Capt. Musgrave, Lieut. Mavor, and Lieut. Man Reid were wounded. The letter follows:

"I thought I would drop you a line to let you know how poor Geoff Taylor and Art Muir lost their lives. The former was overcome by gas and didn't have a chance to grapple with the Hun. He was the finest all-round man and cleanest athlete I ever knew.

"Art Muir died in the thick of battle. On May 21st we got orders to take a farm about 500 yards in front of our lines. Major Marshall detailed Nos. 2 and 4 companies and my machine gun section, of 4 guns and 42 men—as we are away under strength in officers it just left Capt. Musgrave and Capt. R. S. Smith (an ex-R. M. C. athlete around 1907, who is there as a soldier too), Art Muir, Bill Mavor, Dutch Wilson, Jack Kay, and myself, and about 300 men. We went up from the reserve trenches to the front line to reconnoitre the post.

A BIG GAME, BUT NO REFEREE.

"By the way, this is just a big game—a preliminary survey of the field to look things over — only in our games the referee is the rules. There is no referee in this game, therefore, by deduction there are no rules and believe me there is a lot of dirty work, too.

"I came back with Art and he didn't like the outlook, but I said don't say anything to the men. At six o'clock we started in single file up the road and then the German artillery opened fire on us. Their artillary is wonderful and so are their machine guns.

"We lost a lot of men going up and also a lot more in a communication trench. Around the end, Muir started, followed by his men, then Mavor, Kay, etc., the machine guns bringing up the rear. I lost 22 men out of 42, four being N.C.O.'s. Art was wounded in the knee and bandaged it up. Then he was wounded in the throat, but they couldn't stop 'the big bird,' as the boys affectionately called him, till they shot him through the head.

"Capt. Musgrave was wounded and Bill Mavor, who is only a kid, but all grit, was wounded in three different places. We also lost 186 men.

"On our left were the 2nd Grenadier Guards and on our right were the 6th Black Watch, so you see they think well of the Canadians to put us up with the big leaguers. "Buck" Pearce, former Varsity football player, is machine gun officer of the Montreal Royal Regt., the 14th, and Max Reid of the 16th. Reid got a brace of clean hits that night, one in the arm, the other in the shoulder.

"Everybody calls the Machine Gun Section the suicide club, which hinders recruiting for the gun teams. As a matter of fact, your chances are 50-50 with any branch. The great danger with the guns is when you open fire; no matter how well they are concealed, their queer, weird noise gives them away and then artillery soon spots them.

"Ardagh Coe, an Argo rugby player, was killed that night. He was in the gun section. Col. Currie was going to make him a sergeant for bravery at Ypres. The Argos certainly have suffered. Geoff Taylor, Art Muir, Bill Darling, Tom Dunbar, Ardagh Coe killed, and Botterill wounded.

"To-day being the 24th, I suppose you were down at the Woodbine. I have just finished painting the machine gun green with one of the corps, Jack McGrath, who works for Ed. Durnan at the Island renting boats."

Coombs' Return As Mound Star Is Sensation

NEW YORK, June 8.—Up out of the misty work of oblivion emerges one Jack Coombs, former world's series star and long the mainstay of the Athletics' great pitching staff in their palmy days. With Squire Ebbetts' Brooklyn Trolley Dodgers, ably managed by your Uncle Wilbert Robinson, Coombs is once more batting his way over the rough roads to fame and glory.

Released outright by the Athletics and generally regarded as being one of baseball's "has beens" the "Iron Man" of other days has flashed a brand of twirling in the National league this season that bids fair to put him at or near the top of the circuit's winning hurlers. Robinson has sent him to the mound several times this spring and to date the ex-Athletic has turned in more victories than defeats. His victories have been hard won battles, too, his teammates making but two and three runs behind him.

Coombs' return to the top of the heap is one of the most remarkable ever recorded in the annals of baseball. The big twirler severely wrenched the muscles of his back in a world's series battle while with the Athletics. At that time it was though he was through for all time as an athlete. But Coombs was determined to stick in the game. He employed specialists to work on him and a "harness" — something in the order of a steel jacket—was rigged up for him. Wearing this he was able to work on the mound, though under great difficulty.

Couldn't Regain Effectiveness.

The injury made itself manifest in his work, however. He twirled lots of good games but he couldn't pitch with the effectiveness that had once marked his efforts. Connie Mack was loath to let him go and it was not until last fall, when he "cleaned house" for fair, did the Athletic manager part with him.

Coombs, then a free agent, went to Manager Robinson, of the Dodgers. To him he made the proposition that if he didn't return to his old form his services were not to cost a cent. Judging by his work so far Coombs is meeting the Dodgers' paymaster regularly.

In talking of his work this year, recently Coombs ventured the opinion that his success was due to his easy style of pitching.

Seeks To Save Energy.

"I always saved something back for the pinches, even before I was hurt," he said. "I never believed in working hard over every ball I pitched. When I broke into fast company I resolved to copy the crack twirlers who had been in fast company for years. I believed that the ones who stayed up there year after year were the ones to study.

I picked out Cy Young and Bill Dineen as the best examples. I noticed that they worked in the easiest possible way. They never exerted themselves needlessly. I think I got more benefit from watching them work than any other twirlers I saw. I copied their methods and tried to improve upon them—tried to be as effective as possible without wasting much energy."

CATHOLIC BASEBALL LEAGUE OPENED

Two Good Games Last Night Attracted Large Number of Fans

The recently organized Catholic League opened auspiciously last night with fairly large attendances at the two games. Immaculate Conception defeated the K. of C. by 11 to 9 at Riverside, and the Sacred Heart boys won easily from the Cathedral nine by 11 to 6 on the former church grounds.

Jimmy May for the East City parish pitched nice ball against Ab. Quinlan and Jack Corkery for the Knights. Jerry Coughlin, Primeau and Coughlin showed up well. The K. C. boys have good material and should go stronger in future games. Max Swanston gave every satisfaction as referee. The line-ups:

Knights of Columbus— Phelan c., Corkery 3b p., R. Sheehy s.s., Quinlan p 3b., S. Sheehy r.f., McCabe r.f., Wolfe c.f., Crough 2b., McDonald 1b., Milloy c.f.

The score by innings:

K. C. .. ..130320—9
I. C. .. ..03152x—11

In the south end game the home players worked smoothly and had little difficulty in hanging it on Sam Hoolihan's aggregation. Neary in the box and Kenneally behind the bat worked smoothly and were helped by their team's clubs.

Ray, Gus and Lornie Rose were prominent, Ray getting a homer to deep centre with one ahead of him. The line-ups:

St. Peters—Murty s.s., Heenan p., Cronin 2b., K. Corkery 1b., G. Maher 3b., E. Murty c.f., Lebar r.f., Cupoli c., Hatrick l.f.

Sacred Heart— L Rose s.s., Kelly c.f., O'Dette r.f., O'Connell 2b., R. Rose 3b., Hardgrove l.f., F. Neary p., Kenneally 1.

CUTS HAL CHASE'S ALIMONY.

A reduction of from $1,200 to $600 a year in alimony to be paid by "Hal" Chase, formerly first baseman of the New York American League baseball team, has just been signed by Justice Donnelly, in the Supreme Court. Chase joined the Chicago White Sox and later the Buffalo team, of the Federal League. While no reason is given for the reduced amount ordered for the support of Mrs. Nellie E. Chase, it is said to have been in part due to a reduced income from Chase's ball playing.

Chase began action to obtain a divorce in 1913 and Mrs. Chase replied with a counter claim. Alvin Untermyer, as referee, found in her favour, dismissing the husband's action. He gave to Mrs. Chase custody of her son, Harold.

Havelock Boys Write Interesting Letters From the Front and Shorncliffe

HAVELOCK, June 9.—Mr. Frank White, of Peterborough, spent a few days in town last week.

The local lacrosse club held a "Shirt Waist Dance" in the Town Hall on Friday night last. The pianist for the evening was Mr. Green, of Campbellford.

Mr. Clayton Bohan, of Trenton, was in town on Friday last.

Mr. J. Dixon, of Campbellford, was in town on Monday last.

Mr. Walter Davidson, of Campbellford, was in town on Sunday last.

The first O. A. L. A. game in the juvenile series took place on Friday afternoon last at 5 o'clock, when the fast Norwood team crossed sticks with locals. The game was refereed by Mr. Alex. Kempt, of Norwood.

The local line-up was as follows: Goal, R. Wright; point, J. O'Brien; cover, J. McGill; 1st defence, M. Brown; 2nd defence, R. O'Brien; centre, W. Copp; 2nd home, H. Haughton; 1st home, T. Barnett; outside, C. Rose; inside, C. Bohan.

LETTER FROM SAPPER HOLDCROFT.

France, May 6th-10th, 1915.

Dear Mother,—I received your letter and Don's while at work this morning. I am feeling fine and like things over here. We are situated near the channel on Delegate Plains near Shorncliffe. There are ten in a tent, so we haven't much room to spare. It is just 45 miles to the front from here, and we often hear the cannons. We see about a dozen aeroplanes every day flying over the camp, and there is one overhead as I write. It is a biplane, and one can hear the engine hum. There was a German air raid at Southend on Sunday night, about 80 miles from here. There are about 10,000 soldiers camped around here, and [illegible] the front, some of whom were wounded. You should see the women in the bars here. They drink as much beer as the men. All lights in the town around here have to be out at 10 o'clock. Tell Dad they have a lot of cars here that are not as big as the Saxon and they look all right too. I am learning the English money so that I can count my change correctly and not get soaked. Meals are expensive here. It costs 3 bob for a decent meal, and it's hard to pick out the most reasonable places as the people soak you whenever they get the chance. I expect to go up to London in a couple of weeks as we get six days' furlough. Well I can't think of anything more to say. Send the Standard and other Canadian papers. Well I guess I'll close, so good-bye,

BILL.

P.S.—Tell all to write.

PTE. GEORGE BUCHANAN WRITES.

The following letter from Pte. Geo. Buchanan, of town, was received recently by his cousin, Miss Flossie Carter, of Hastings:

Dear Flossie,—Received your most welcome letter of April 1st and was sure glad to hear from you, also received the papers last night.

Well Flossie, I suppose by the time you receive this letter you will see in the papers all about the big fight we have been in. I came through it safely, but had some narrow escapes. It lasted eight days. Poor Charlie Cowan got wounded in the arm, but will be all right shortly. Earl Green also came through safely with me.

Well I guess you will never see Will Savage any more. More than half of our battalion were killed and wounded. England is ringing with cheers for the Canadian boys. You will see more in the papers than I can tell in this letter, and you will see the casualties also.

Lieut. Doxsee, of Campbellford, was killed, but Capt. Birdsall is all right yet, although he got a bad shaking up and several bullet holes through his cap. I had one bullet go through my putty, but never touched my leg.

Well Flossie, how are all the folks? Give them my best regards.

We are out having a rest at present but don't know for how long, but I suppose we will soon be going back to get another crack at the Germans. My nerves are pretty well racked.

Well Flossie, I will close for this time, with love, from your loving cousin, GEORGE.

PTE. COWAN'S LETTER.

The following letter from Pte. Chas. Cowan, of Trent River, was received recently by his mother, and his many friends sincerely hope that his wound will soon be healed:

Kingswood School, Bath, May 8.

Dear Mother,—I suppose you are wondering how I am getting along, but I am quite well and hope this will find you the same. My arm is getting better as quickly as possible. I had an operation on Friday and had the bullet taken out. It went right through my elbow, so I cannot bend it. I got hit in the side too, but it is nearly all healed up now. I suppose you have heard all about the sinking of the Lusitania. It is awful, isn't it? I have not had a letter from you for over a month. We have been moving about so much. I was in Bristol for the operation and then I was sent down here to a private hospital. There are only 21 patients, and the sisters are very kind. I guess this is all for this time. Will write a longer one next time. So good-bye for the present.

CHARLIE.

Mr. Wm. Andrews was in Norwood [illegible]

Mr. Harry Siddon spent the week-end in Campbellford.

Mrs. Roche, of Wilbur, is the guest of her son, Mr. Harry Roche.

OBITUARY

MISS JESSIE JOHNSTON.

Word was received in the city to-day by friends and relatives of the death of Miss Jessie Johnston, of Grafton, Ont. The deceased young lady had been visiting sisters in Fort William and Port Credit, and her death occurred at the latter place from acute appendicitis. She was a sister of Mr. Gordon Johnston, who has represented Gunn-Langlois of Montreal in Peterborough for several years.

Voice of The People

Editor of the Examiner:

16 Linder St., Toronto, Tuesday.

Please note that whatever be the facts I made no reference whatever to the proportion of Church of England men in the contingents as stated in the Globe of to-day. To my mind we should not differentiate the soldiers belonging to different communion, when all our people are co-operating so heartily for national ends.

J. C. DAVIDSON.

Peterborough, June 9, 1916.

To the Citizens of Peterborough.—An enthusiastic group of our citizens are leaving their businesses for several days this week to push the public campaign on behalf of our local Young Men's Christian Association. They have met with an encouraging response and should receive all the cooperation we, as a city, can give them.

Leading officers in the British Army, as well as in our own Canadian Expeditionary forces, bear glowing tribute to the valuable work the Y.M.C.A. is conducting at the front. Officers who at first were opposed to privileges being granted to the Y. M. C. A. are now its enthusiastic supporters. This important work has been made possible only by the fact that we have at home local Y. M. C. A.'s in our towns and cities.

Our interests centre in our local Y.M.C.A. Now is our chance to give it support. It will be a splendid thing for us to contribute the $12,000 for which our local Association is asking.

Our citizens responded nobly to the appeal for the Patriotic Fund, and none of us have begrudged the money we then gave. Here is a cause that is also worthy of support.

Do not wait for the canvasser to call upon you. Leave your contribution in the local Association or give it to any of the workers whom you may see on the street.

The campaign closes to-morrow night at 10 o'clock. Let us, as a city, unite to push the hands around to 12 o'clock and thus show that in these war times we are resolved to keep all our public institutions working to full capacity.

(Signed) W. H. BULLER, Mayor.

DEATH OF MR. JOSEPH ARMSTRONG

Brother of Mrs. Stratton, Gilmour Street, Has Passed Away

A telegram to Mrs. Stratton, 566 Gilmour Street, brought the news of the death at his home in New Westminster, B.C., late last evening of her brother, Mr. Joseph Armstrong. He has been ailing for some time, suffering from heart trouble.

The late Mr. Armstrong was born in Cavan Township 76 years ago, but removed to British Columbia when but a boy, and he has spent his life there since boyhood. Besides Mrs. Stratton, the only other surviving member of his family is his brother, Hon. W. J. Armstrong, also of New Westminster, B.C.

For many years Mr. Armstrong has been associated with the growth and development of British Columbia, and practically interested in the mining industry and the development of electric transportation. His devotion to his work, accompanied by rare business ability, not only resulted in the enterprises with which he was associated, but he benefited himself. He amassed considerable wealth, and in this regard made a success of life; and at the same time, he discharged his duty in all the relations of life and also the duties of responsible positions he occupied, as to win for him universal esteem, and he will be remembered for the good qualities that centred in him as a valuable member of the community as a public spirited and progressive citizen.

Among his many interests is property in Lillooet, B.C., where he owns the Hot Springs property, which is well-known throughout the Province of British Columbia and other parts of Canada.

He was a member of the Church of England. His wife and two daughters survive. The daughters are Mrs. Sutherland and Miss [illegible] Armstrong.

NO BALKAN AID FOR ALLIES SAYS BERLIN

Special to The Examiner.

COLOGNE, via London, June 10.—The chances that Bulgaria and Roumania will enter the war with the Allies are diminishing, says a Berlin despatch to the Cologne Gazette.

"The political heavens of the Balkans have cleared somewhat," the despatch says. "Roumania has rejected the first offer of the Triple Entente (Great Britain, France and Russia) as unsatisfactory.

"Bulgaria also has received offers from the Entente. It is not known that Bulgaria has formally rejected them, but she is in agreement with Roumania, and since the latter has rejected the offers Bulgaria probably will do likewise.

"This assumption is the more reasonable because Bulgarias first demand is immediate occupation by her of the Macedonian territory taken from her by Serbia. The Entente has not yet offered that. Bulgaria naturally is not disinterested in the Turkish frontier, but Bulgarian statesmen are keenly conscious that the opportunity regarding Macedonia is one which will come now or never."

Italian Troops Gain Important Victory

Have Captured Railway Centre of Monfalcone Near the Adriatic---Great Battle Now Raging---Other Despatches

SPECIAL CABLE:

ROME, June 10.—Italian troops have won their most important victory of the war. In the first stages of a great battle now raging along the Isonzo they have captured the railway centre of Montfalcone near the Adriatic. The fall of the Goritz capital of the Austrian province of that name is believed to be imminent.

To the north in the fighting on Monte Nero the Bersagleiri regiment drove the Austrians from Arocky Height in a hand to hand struggle with bayonets. The enemy fled leaving a thousand bodies and fifty wounded on the summit of the peak. Four hundred Austrians were captured.

Montfalcone lies twelve miles inside the Austrian frontier, sixteen miles northwest of Trieste. The right wing of the Italian army along the Isonzo made a final onslaught on Monfal-Cone fron Ronchi after the Italian batteries had silenced the Austrian guns and wrecked the concrete works on the outskirts of the town. The Austrian garrison from entrenchments inside the outer forts, fought with great bravery for several hours, and in their

Austro-German Drive In Galicia Near End

Observer Summarizes Situation of the Allies on All Sides ---Believed to Be Near Exhaustion

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, June 10.—The main theatre of Austro-German operations has been shifted suddenly from the Peremysl region to the Pruth, where the Germanic allies have reopened an offensive against the Russians. According to an official Vienna report, the Russians have been pushed back between Kolomea and Kalusz.

In the meantime the Austro-German armies are maintaining on other fronts a solid pressure toward Lemberg. They have crossed the Dniester south of Lemberg and are making some progress eastward from Peremysl. The army moving from Jaroslau, on the San, has reached Lubaczow, twenty-five miles northeast of the Galician capital and about on a line parallel with General von Mackensen's army at Mosciska.

The offensive on the Pruth is regarded as necessary before the Teutonic allies continued their advance toward Lemberg, as the Russian attacks in the region of Kolomea were beginning to look dangerous, after the Russians had, as reported from Petrograd last week, inflicted a rather severe defeat on the Austrians in this district.

British and Russian military opinion is that Austro-Germans, after their big effort, which regained for them the greater part of Galicia, have about exhausted themselves, and the view is expressed that they will soon have to secure and fortify a line on which they can withstand the Russian counter offensive, which already has made itself felt on the lower San.

If the Russian positions were really dangerous, these authorities say, the Allies would long ago have taken the offensive in the west to relieve the pressure on the eastern front. It is true the French have been attacking at a number of points between Rheims and hte district north of Arras, and have in some cases been successful in gaining ground. But the British are remaining quiet, and it can hardly be said that a general offensive in the west has begun.

The French have been very successful in what they have undertaken. North of Arras they have gained additional ground, and north of the Aisne have repulsed four German counter-attacks and extended their previous gains.

The operations on the Italo-Austrian frontiers are pretty well screened by the censorship. There are indications, however, that a big battle is imminent, if it has not already begun, along the Isonzo River, where the Italians apparently have decided to launch their principal attack. The Italian cavalry already have crossed the river at one point, and have pierced the Austrian line.

There also are reports that the Allies again have taken the offensive on the Gallipoli Peninsula and have decisively defeated the Turks, but this, likewise, lacks confirmation.

German submarines continue their activities. Among their latest victims were three Norwegian vessels, two steamships, the Trudvang and the Glittertind, with iron ore and lumber, respectively, for British ports, and the bark Superb, with grain from South America for Queenstown.

Others sunk were the Belgian steamship Menapier, with the loss of seventeen lives, and the trawler Pentland.

Roumania, according to a German report, has declined the first offer of the Entente Allies to join them, and Bulgaria, in agreement with Roumania, is said to be willing to take any action that country decides upon.

GERMAN GIVES $1,000 TO CREW SINKING "SUB"

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 10.—Mr. G. W. Lacey, a well known Humber coal exporter, told to-day why he had sent a check for $1,000 to the Lord Mayor of Hull for presentation to the master and crew of any vessel belonging to a Humber or Ouse port who satisfy the Lord Mayor they have sunk a German submarine. Mr. Lacey is a naturalized German who recently changed his name from Lutze, and he has resided in Yorkshire thirty-eight years, twenty-five of which he has spent in Hull.

"I got to know," he said, "that a deputation, supposed to represent all German born residents in Hull, waited on the Lord Mayor. They were headed by O. Hillerns, a Hull merchant, and I find in the report he made certain statements which he had no business to do on behalf of anybody like himself, a naturalized German of many years' standing.

"I contradicted them immediately as far as I was concerned. I take special exception to a remark made to the Lord Mayor that some of the naturalized Germans in Hull still have some love for their native land. I could not stand that, and to emphasize my feelings I sent the check. My love for Germany expired many years ago, long before I was naturalized, in 1891. I earnestly desire to see the complete defeat of Germany— anything short of that result would be a catastrophe, not only for England, my adopted and greatly appreciated country, but for the whole world."

Mr. Lacey's sons offered their services to England when war began, and he is paying full wages to all his employes who enlist and keeping their places open.

MEAT MEN TO WORK MAKING MUNITIONS

Examiner Special:

LONDON, June 10.—Between three and four thousand men who are employed at the Smithfield meat market in London have volunteered to work four hours a day in turning out munitions of war. A committee formed to put this plan into effect purposes to close the market two days of the week to offset partly the increase in working hours.

The Associated Chambers of Agriculture at a meeting to-day discussed the shortage of labour for gathering the hay crop. It was resolved to appeal to the War Office to send drafts of men accustomed to farm work, under non-commissioned officers, to help the farmers.

Monaghan Township Has a Grievance

Charges the City With Removing Sand Belonging to the Township

Mr. Bruce Johnston, clerk of North Monaghan, addressed a letter to the Board of Works, in which was registered the township council's objection to the city removing sand from township thoroughfares over which the trunk sewer is being laid. Ald. Green, chairman of the Board of Works said that no sand was removed other than that which was carried away in the workmen's boots. Ald. Stratton suggested that the workmen be requested to take their boots off and shake them out before leaving work at night.

Believed to Have as Their Objective Both the Complete Isolation of the Courland Coast and the Seizure of Russian Landing Places

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, June 10.—The operations of the German fleet at the head of the Gulf of Riga are believed to have as an objective both the complete isolation of the Courland coast from Scandinavian ports and the seizure of Russian landing place for the disembarking of German troops upon the flanks of Russian forces now in the Courland country.

The Courland country projects into the Baltic in the form of a peninsula. On the west coast is the important port of Libau, which recently fell into German hands. On the fort side of Courland is Riga, located at the head of the Gulf of Riga. This latter port is one of the most important possessed by Russia to-day by reason of its ship and engine building facilities. With Riga in possession of the Germans the entire Courland country would be flanked both on the east and the west by German forces, and the heads of important railways centring in Libau and Riga would be under German control.

GERMANS FAR FROM BASE.

The city of Riga lies about eight miles back from the coast on an estuary from the sea. There is good water for heavy draught vessels right up to the shore line, so that the city can be reached by long range guns, provided a hostile fleet can approach close enough to the beach. In the opinion of military experts the defence of Riga is dependent on the Russian fleet, and it is believed that so long as the Russian squadron can withstand the German sea force Riga is safe.

It is a significant fact that the German squadron in engaging off the head of the Gulf of Riga is operating fully five hundred miles from the entrance to the Kiel CCanal. It is not believed that the Germans have sent against the Russians their main high sea fleet, for there is always the danger of a flank attack by way of the Great Belt through an understanding between England and Denmark. The Great Belt passage passes wholly within Danish territory and is the only passage from the North Sea to the Baltic that is practicable for ships of the heaviest draught.

It has long been a practice of German dirigibles to fly over Danish territory and well up into Cattegat Sound. The presence of these German air ships has been regarded as in the nature of scouts, and any approach of a British fleet in force in the Skager Kack leading to the Cattegat would, it is believed, be made known in time to the German squadron in the Baltic so that it could fall back the 500 miles to Kiel Bay before it could be attacked in flank.

GERMANS CLAIM COURLAND.

Courland long has been regarded as German territory in the same way that Trent has been looked upon by the Italians as Italian territory. Courland is populated by people who speak German for the most part and the leading spirits of the country, professional men, manufacturers and business people, are for the most part Germans.

It is evident the Germans appreciate that since a foothold can be had in Courland that country can be held with much greater ease than Belgium; and with Courland in her possession Germany will be in position in treating for peace to insist that both Belgium and Courland shall pass under the German flag. Germany would also regard possession of the Riga ship yards and engine building plants as an immense acquisition, and it is readily perceived that Riga would be turned into a second Antwerp for the construction of destroyers and submarines. With Riga as a base for submarines it would be an easy matter to operate against Cronstadt and the entire Gulf of Finland coast.

New Library For Louvain Being Collected in England

LONDON, June 10.— Hard on the publication by Lord Bryce's committee of the authentic story of the sack of Louvain comes the announcement of an endeavour, as yet modest in scope but admirable in aim and pregnant with possibilities, to raise again from its ruins one of the true temples of culture.

Chief of the treasures of Louvain always has been the library of the university, stocked as it was with some 230,000 volumes, collected by presentation, purchase and bequest in the three centuries that have elapsed since its foundation by Laurent Beyerlinck. Up to that fatal day of ravine and outrage, August 26, 1914, the collection in the Cloth Hall at Louvain was one of the great libraries of Europe. Now, as Dr. Vander Essen, one of the university professors, writes, all that remains are a few half charred pages driven by every passing wind that stirs the ruins, and a chance manuscript, part of the university archives, which he himself had removed for study at the time of the destruction.

As a whole the library is irreplacable, but it is welcome news that while the outrage of Louvain still is lacerating the public mind the honourable work of restoration already should have been put in hand.

To the Rylands Library, at Manchester, belongs the credit of making possible the new library of the University of Louvain. From its own shelves, as Sir Alfred Hopkinson, till lately vice chancellor of the University of Manchester, and a trustee of the Rylands Library, told a correspondent, Mrs. Rylands' well known foundation is presenting a collection of books that already has been gratefully accepted by the Louvain authorities as the nucleus of its library in days to be. More than that, the Rylands Library has undertaken to receive and store all similar gifts that private or public generosity may prompt, and the librarian and his staff have assumed the responsibility for cataloguing the whole in the most approved method.

GET POWER
The Supply Comes From Food

If we get power from food, why not strive to get all the power we can. That is only possible by selecting food that exactly fits the requirements of the body.

"Not knowing how to select the right food to fit my needs, I suffered grievously for a long time from stomach trouble," writes a lady from a little Western town.

"It seemed as if I would never be able to find out the sort of food that was best for me. Hardly anything that I could eat would stay on my stomach. Every attempt gave me heart-burn and filled my stomach with gas. I got thinner and thinner until I literally became a living skeleton and in time was compelled to keep to my bed.

"A few months ago I was persuaded to try Grape-Nuts food, and it had such good effect from the very beginning that I kept up its use. I was surprised at the ease with which I digested it. It proved to be just what I needed.

"All my unpleasant symptoms, the heart-burn, the inflated feeling which gave me so much pain, disappeared. My weight gradually increased from 98 to 116 lbs., my figure rounded out, my strength came back, and I am now able to do my housework and enjoy it. Grape-Nuts did it."

A ten days trial will show anyone some facts about food.

MILITARY SUPPLIES FOR ITALY

SPECIAL CABLE:

NEW YORK, June 10.—Large shipments of finished war munitions, as well as of raw materials for their manufacture and of general supplies, are to be made soon from this country for Italy.

For the last few days there had been a lull in the receipt of orders. It is a matter of conjecture how large the volume has been of the supplies which since the beginning of the war have been reaching Germany by the way of Italy, but there is reason to believe that the amount was not small. Now all similar shipments to Italy will be for the sole use of the Italian War Department, and negotiations at present in progress show that before the end of this month the volume of this business will be enormous.

Copper, zinc and other metals are in great demand by the Italians, as indeed are all materials which may be converted into ammunition. Since the beginning of the conflict three large cartridge plants in Italy have been working night and day to supply the requisite small arms ammunition which Italy foresaw that she would need.

The orders include heavy consignments of light socks and of military shoes. There has been also a demand for shirts suitable for summer campaigning.

Importers of olive oil in this city stated that although they still permitted to have this product shipped into the United States in cans, they would not be surprised at any moment to learn that an embargo would be proclaimed which would cut off the American supply.

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

Her face was drawn, in spite of her healthy tan, and her expression was mixed, full of eagerness and yet holdin' a trace o' worriment. Her back was to me as soon as she passed and yet I couldn't figger how to get any better location.

The ponies' heads dropped to their knees the minute they were stopped, and Big Jeff got up with his face twisted into the familiar grin, and sez: "Well, I'm mighty glad to see ya."

The driver had got out and had set her little grip at the side of the door. Tom Smith just sat on his bench lookin' up at the girl, and she sat on the buckboard, tryin' to make her face pleasant as she looked down at Big Jeff.

"Where is my brother" sez she.

Tom Smith hadn't shaved since he'd left the Lion Head purt nigh a month before, and the girl didn't recognize him as the feller in the hard-shelled hat who had ordered me to rope a mule while he tried to flirt with her; but something in her face awoke memories, and I felt sure that after all, Tom Smith was her brother.

"Why, that isn't my brother," sez she. "You're not my brother, are you?"

Tom Smith shook his head, and Big Jeff scowled, then switched on a grin, and sez: "Nope, that ain't your brother. Your brother's lyin' inside bad hurt, just like was told ya. Light down and step inside. You must be purty well beat out after that ride."

The girl reached out one foot a little then paused. "Martin," sez she to the driver, "you step inside and see if my brother's in there."

The driver stepped inside and presently tiptoed out again. "Yes'm," sez he, "he's in there; but he's asleep and he looks mighty weakly, so you'd better not waken him."

"How do you know it's my brother?" sez the girl eyein' him square.

"Well, I—I don't, exactly," mumbled the driver, not able to return her gaze; "but someone's in there."

"Aw, there's no use carryin' this game any farther," sez Big Jeff. "I saw you the time you were down here before, and I made up my mind to have you. If you'll just be sensible why you can do about anything you want with me, for I'm a perfect fool about a woman who strikes my fancy."

The girl turned her head and looked at him in disgusted amazement, and right then a lot of her character-wrappin's shattered off and left her free to meet the situation without any put-on. "Martin," sez she, "drive me back at once."

Big Jeff laughed. "Why, those mustangs are sound asleep in their tracks and ten miles more 'd kill 'em. You'll have to spend the night here."

The girl faced around and looked at the driver who shook his ratty head and grinned. "I sez't do nothin'. They've got us, all right, and the best you can do is to do what they tell ya and not make any fuss."

"Get down," sez Big Jeff. "We'll make it as pleasant for ya as we can to-night, and then in the mornin' if you want to go back, why, ya can."

Lookin' at Big Jeff made a feller ashamed he was a human; but lookin' at the girl tuned him up again. She sat starin' down into his ugly face with her eyes narrowed and her lips set. The' was some horror in her face, but more fight. The driver stood at the back of the rig with his hands in his pockets, Tom Smith sat on his bench markin' on the ground with a stick.

"Get down, right now," ordered Big Jeff. She didn't move and he reached out his hand to touch her, but she drew away with a little smothered exclamation.

Her utter disgust of him knocked the leer off of Big Jeff's face, but put on even a meaner expression. "Do just as ya please," sez he. "I've busted a many of 'em in my time, and I don't mind a filly r'arin' up and tryin' to climb the fence when I first come in the corral; but they allus give in sooner or later, and you'll be eatin 'out of my hand inside of a week."

"Will you give me a week to think it over?" sez she.

"Not a week nor a day nor an hour," sez he.

"Did you write the letter?" sez she.

"Nope," sez Big Jeff with a grin, "a better lookin' feller than I am wrote the letter." He nodded at Tom Smith, the girl looked down at the top of Smith's hat, and her face expressed just what I felt. After all, then, Tom Smith's heart was black. Qualities he'd had at one time, but somethin' had undermined 'em and he had sunk so low that he'd let a beast like Big Jeff use him for such a tool as this, and probably a drink had paid the bill. My blood was gettin' thicker every minute. Tom Smith just sat on the bench drawin' lines with his stick, and I loosened my [illegible] to pull out at the highest figger I could get.

"Are you goin' to get down, or shall I lift ya down?" sez Big Jeff. He reached out his hands to take her and I covered him careful with my finger pressin' the trigger tighter as his hands got closer to her, and then just as the limit was reached, she jumped to the ground. My gun was so near to explodin' when she jumped right across the range of it that I purt nigh gave a cry, but I choked it down and after my heart had settled back to its place and I had tamped it down with a good breath I was ready again; but now she was between me and Big Jeff.

She was leanin' towards him with her hands clasped across her breast and she sez to him in a low, pleadin' voice: "Won't you please let me go?"

"When you're plumb gentle," sez he in a deep growl, "when you get so d——d gentle that you'll crawl to my feet and beg me to marry you, why, that'll be the time that I'll probably let you go. You're one o' these high-headed ones; you're too good for common folks, you're——"

Tom Smith was beatin' his stick up and down on the lines he had been makin' and the girl looked at him: "Oh," she said, "won't you help me?"

"Yes," sez Tom Smith, clear and steady, "I will"; and at these words my heart rose up on its hind legs and threw its hat in the air, for nothin' could have made those sounds but the voice of a real man.

Big Jeff pulled his gun, but his attention was caught by the driver, who had crouched forward and was now starin' at Tom Smith. "My God!" sez the driver between his teeth.

"Yes," sez the driper in a hoarse whisper.

"Then you cut down on him," sez Big Jeff, holdin' his gun above his shoulder. "I'm in a love-makin' mood this evenin', and I don't want to stain my fingers."

That girl insisted on geetin' in my way and I couldn't stand it any longer. So I stepped plumb out in the open and walked off to the right seven or eight paces to another little patch o' cover. The driver had pulled his gun and now had Tom Smith covered, Big Jeff also had him as good as covered, and the girl crouched forward, one hand clenched at her throat and the other held out pleadin' to Big Jeff. "Don't shoot him, don't shoot him!" she begged.

An amused grin came to Tom Smith's face, exactly the light that had come to it with the drink, and he sez to Big Jeff, "You'll sure give me some sort of a chance, won't ya?"

"You're welcome to all the chances you can get on the other side," sez Big Jeff; "but you don't get any more here."

I still hoped that Tom Smith would talk 'em into some sort of a game and I was afraid that if I cut in too soon, it would spoil it all, for I didn't dare risk a shot at Big Jeff, he bein' right on the line with Tom Smith. I held both my guns on the driver and waited to see what Tom Smith could do with his talk.

"Listen, you coyote," sez he, scornful, to the driver, "I want to be shot plumb through the heart, right here where I'm tappin' with my hand. Now I'll fold my arms peaceful and count three and then you shoot me through the heart—but say," sez he, turnin' to Big Jeff—"if that lizard don't get me with five shots, do you give me a chance to settle him?"

"I sure will," sez Big Jeff, with a grin.

The girl was still crouched forward, her fingers workin' at her throat as though to help her breathe, her face raised to Big Jeff and pleadin' to him in a broken voice, so that her words couldn't be misunderstood. Tom Smith folded his arms. "One," he counted in a steady voice; "Two,"—and then a spurt of flame shot out from under his left arm, and Big Jeff started to spin. I fired both my guns at the driver, and he cut down on Tom Smith; but Tom Smith was crouchin' low in a most peculiar position and pumpin' into the driver like corn a-popein'.

SEIZED WITH PARALYSIS OULD NOT WALK

Most Extraordinary Cure Effected by the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

To have the nervous system paralyzed, to be unable to walk and scarcely able to talk, and then to be completely cured, is not a usual experience, but Mr. Hyatt tells in this letter what he passed through. Doctors told him that his case was hopeless, and when they gave up he turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and obtained complete cure.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, blacksmith, St. Anns, Lincoln Co., Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything that I would say. Being only a young man I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was brought on by overwork, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and advised me to try it. I bought 12 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 12 boxes were used I was cured. I am well and strong and working every day, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Elmon J. Hodgkins, J.P.

No ailment is more dreaded than paralysis. And yet how few people realize that paralysis of the nerves is only the natural result of neglected nervous troubles.

At first you do not sleep well, have nervous headaches or indigestion, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, can hear noises which in good health you would never notice. You do not consider yourself sick, and yet you lack the usual energy and vigour and feel out of sorts.

Restore the nerves by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

GRANDMOTHER'S DESK

Old Love Letter the Newly Weds Found in a Secret Drawer.

By FRANK FILSON.

Grandmother Penderby was one of those sweet-faced, silvery haired old ladies who seems to have stepped straight out of the pages of some seventeenth century novel. She ruled by love, but unquestionably, in the old house at Lynbrook.

Nobody would ever have dreamed of disobeying or thwarting Grandmother Penderby. Even "Squire" Penderby, hot-headed and impetuous as he was, had never done that. One glance from grandmother, one wave of the uplifted finger, and the Squire was reduced to a condition of trembling obedience.

That was why the quarrel between Mildred, the old lady's granddaughter, and her fiance, Will Hurlbut, was made up so quickly. They had been engaged two years and they were to be married at Christmas. But Will had been attentive to another girl—at least, so Mildred fancied—and harsh words left harsher feelings in their wake; and the end of it was that Mildred threw her ring at Will and Will clapped on his hat and slammed the door.

"Quarreled? Did you say you and Will had quarreled, Mildred?" exclaimed her grandmother that evening, when she had succeeded in forcing an explanation of her granddaughter's tear-stained face and dejected spirits. "How can a girl quarrel with the man she is engaged to marry?"

"Because I have found out that he is false," sobbed Mildred unhappily. "He—he—he didn't love me; he has never cared for me at all."

"He cared for you enough to offer you his hand and name, Mildred," replied her grandmother. "And I presume that you had some knowledge of his nature and disposition before you accepted him?"

"I was deceived," said Mildred. "All girls may be deceived. We claim the right to act for ourselves nowadays. It isn't like it was when you were young and women had no power of initiative. Didn't you ever break an engagement, grandmamma?"

The old lady's cheeks had suddenly grown scarlet. "From the day when I accepted Mr. Penderby," she said, "my will was his will and his wishes were mine and I placed the most implicit trust in him."

"Didn't You Ever Break an Engagement, Grandmama?"

So the quarrel ended, because that evening, when Will came back in a penitent mood, Grandmamma Penderby led him straight into Mildred's boudoir, and made Mildred put her hand in Will's, and then wisely went out and left them together. And ten minutes later, when they appeared before her, as she sat in her chair, knitting, the faces of both were radiant.

The Penderby homestead was one of those quaint, old-fashioned houses that are still to be found, here and there, upon the very borders of our modern cities. It was full of little stacked with the accumulated debris of generations: old trunks, old furniture, old papers. A week before their marriage, Grandmother Penderby, who had been rummaging in what she called her private store room, appeared before Mildred and Will, flushed and triumphant. In her arms she bore a heavy, old-fashioned writing desk.

"This is to be one of my wedding presents to you children," she said. "And don't turn up your noses at it, either of you, because my mother thought enough of it to give it to me when I was engaged."

Mildred had often seen the little desk, but instinctively she had refrained from tampering with it. She knew that grandmother valued it highly—so highly that she had never allowed it to be used, but had kept it on the high shelf among her most cherished treasures. She had always suspected that some of grandmother's treasured relics were kept hidden in it. But when she opened it it was empty, and only the faint odor of dead rose leaves betrayed the fact that it had contained anything but dust.

"We'll keep—what shall we keep in it, Will?" Mildred asked.

"Our love letters," responded Will promptly. "That is, if it is big enough. But isn't it strange, Millie, that a desk of this size should have such a very small interior? It almost looks as though it might contain a secret drawer."

"There does seem to be a lot of space underneath the drawer," said Mildred, fingering the edges of the desk. "Why, Will, it rings quite hollow. Just tap it and listen."

It certainly did ring hollow. And it did seem as though there were some second drawer under the first. But the cunningly arranged veneering gave no evidences of any opening. Will tapped and tapped in vain.

"I guess there isn't any secret drawer, Millie," said Will, and set the desk down upon the table with a bang. And then a curious thing happened. The jar apparently set some long devised spring to working, for the whole front of the desk flew open, revealing a little, flat compartment immediately beneath the drawer.

A single sheet of yellow paper, covered with faded writing, lay there. Will looked at it and then snatched it up and began reading.

"Will!" exclaimed Mildred reproachfully.

"But I must read it," he exclaimed. "Look at this signature—it is that of my grandfather, Ebenezer Hurlbut. It may be some long-lost will.

But it was no will. It was a letter addressed to Grandmother Penderby, and it ran as follows:

"My Dearest Own Elizabeth:

"Your cruel words to me today, though they have sorely wounded me, cannot quench the passion for you that burns in my bosom. So, since you have said that this unhappy misunderstanding of ours must end our engagement, since you have forbid me to approach the shrine and alter of my devotion, I shall place this within your mother's writing desk, hoping that some impulse will draw you hither, to open the little drawer you once showed me, and to find this outpouring of my soul. Elizabeth, you cannot mean that we must part for ever, that you will bestow your priceless self upon that dullard, Nat Penderby, for when your marriage bells ring out my life will become unbearable to me and I shall end this wretched existence. Without you, life will become impossible.

"Till time shall end, thine,

"Ebenezer Hurlbut.

"Jan. 24, 1857."

Will Hurlbut folded up the paper and looked at Mildred. Her eyes were moist and her lips were quivering.

"It must have lain there unnoticed these fifty years and more," she said. "We must not let her know—now."

The annual custom of the Warden of Victoria County, entertaining his colleagues, was ably carried out on Tuesday evening, June 1st, when Warden R. J. Mulligan, of Omemee, provided an excellent outing for the members of the County Council, county officials and their friends. The popular and genial Warden chartered a special train, which consisted of two coaches and a baggage car, and conveyed his friends to our pretty little village, where they were right royally entertained.

The Warden's guests wended their way to Coronation Hall, where the musical portion of the evening's programme was to be enjoyed. The talent was of the A1 professional class, including such well known Toronto artists as Mr. Arthur Bligh, baritone soloist, of Bloor Street Presbyterian church; Mr. Jules Brazil, pianiste soloist; Dr. Harvey Rodd, organist of Bond Street Congregational church, and Mr. Douglas, baritone. Needless to say with such an array of entertainers the programme furnished was a most excellent one, and one that was enjoyed immensely by all present.

His Honour Judge McMillan, of Lindsay, was the chairman of the evening, and, of course, filled that post of honour in a delightful manner. Reeve. G. A. Jordon, Dr. W. W. Wood, and His Honour Judge Harding all of Lindsay, were the speakers of the evening.

At the close of the programme a dainty luncheon was served, the entire evening being well spent, and the Warden voted a jolly good fellow and a king among entertainers. The special train returned to Lindsay about 11.30 o'clock.

Mr. Robert Johnston was in Peterborough on business, on Saturday.

Water For the Wounded

Somewhere in France there is buried a brave Royal Engineer who gave all he had—his life—for his wounded comrades.

Near the trenches there were a lot of wounded lying, whose pitiful cries for water reached the ears of a quiet little engineer; he collected together all the water bottles he could find. Somebody asked him where he was going.

He said he was going out, and he went out. The air was thick with shell and rifle fire. He reached the first wounded man safely and gave him a drink, but when he had finished his merciful mission one bottle was shot clean out of his hand.

He crawled along to another, and another, and still another, until he was a full quarter of a mile away from the trenches. Then he stood up to zig-zag across to some more wounded chaps. His comrades saw him throw up his arms, and that was the last seen of him.

STOMACH TROUBLES DUE TO ACIDITY

SO SAYS EMINENT SPECIALIST.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, wind, and stomachache are in probably nine cases out of ten simply evidence that fermentation is taking place in the food contents of the stomach, causing the formation of gas and acids. Wind distends the stomach, and causes that full, oppressive feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the fermenting food. Such fermentation is unnatural, and acid formation is not only unnatural, but may involve most serious consequences if not corrected. To stop or prevent fermentation of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid, and render it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, probably the best and most effective corrector of acid stomach known, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water immediately after eating, or whenever wind or acidity is felt. This stops the fermentation, and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments. Fermentation, wind and acidity are dangerous and unnecessary. Stop or prevent them by the use of a proper antacid, such as bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist and thus enable the stomach to do its work properly without being hindered by poisonous gas and destructive acids.—M. LONDON HAS ENROLLED 11,000 WOMEN IN POLICE

It is announced that over 11,000 women have been enrolled in Great Britain under the scheme authorised by the home secretary for organizing women police.

At Brighton, Winchester and other places, women police have been in evidence for some months, but they have been the result of local effort rather than of a general nation-wide movement. The Home Office authorisation was intended to give official recognition to the scheme and encourage its general adoption.

The women police are intended particularly to take care of young women and children in their respective districts. The chief recruiting efforts are being put forward in the vicinity of the great military camps, such as Colchester, Chelmsford, Canterbury, Dover, Winchester and Exeter.

The policewomen are given a course of special physical training, and wear a distinctive uniform, with an armlet not unlike that worn by the special constables enrolled soon after the beginning of the war for use in case of aerial attack and for home defence.

When the Sun Draws Water

When the sun is to the east or west of us on a cloudy or hazy day, beams are often seen radiating from it toward the horizon; then many people say the sun is "drawing water." They actually believe that the lines of light and shadow appearing to converge in the sun are great shafts of water and vapour that the sun is drawing up into the air to be precipitated later on the earth as rain or snow. These shafts as a matter of fact, are generally indicative of coming rainy weather, but they cannot be counted on as infallible signs.

The idea that the sun is "drawing water" however, is entirely erroneous, for the lines seen are the result of the message of light through openings in clouds already formed. The lines that appear dark are shadows of clouds, while the light lines or rays from the sun are made visible in the air by the presence therein of dust or watery vapour, just as the dust in the air of a room makes visible the light that enters it through small apertures. Although as an effect of perspective the shadows and bars of light appear to converge in the sun, they are really parallel. Usually, the condition of the atmosphere which makes it possible for the beams and shadows to be seen is indicative of the active condensation of moisture, so that when the sun "draws water" rain may be expected with some degree of certainty, although like all local signs, it is far from infallible.

DISTRESS, DISTEADY SHAKY NERVES

MAY BE TONED UP BY USING

MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS.

Mrs. John Harper, Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have used Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for the heart and nervous system. I was confined to a grocery store for twelve years, and had to give up business, as I became terribly run down and nervous, and had heart trouble, and I am sure I am gaining very fast now. I feel that nothing did me any good until I tried your Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am positive they will cure me. The nerves of one hand would tremble and then seem to go numb so that I could not write or sew. Now my hand is quite steady, as you can see by my handwriting. This is a big change which delights me so much for I thought all was done that could be done. I was about to give up in despair when I tried this last remedy, and even after I had only taken half a box the change started to come."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will restore the enfeebled, enervated, exhausted, overworked system to full constitutional power.

Export Cheese Market Shows Slight Decline This Week

Cattle and Meat Markets Generally Steady and Firm—Butter Weak Under Heavier Receipts.

MARKET FEATURES.

Export cheese—Slight decline.
Fresh eggs—Firmer.
Live hogs—Unchanged.

This week's rain should be a strong factor in restoring cheerfulness throughout the farming community. It came most opportunely. Pasturage, hay and various crops were beginning to suffer, but it is not expected that the drought's effects had even so marked that any fields will be materially set back. On the other hand growth which had showed up during the dry spell should be materially advanced.

During the week export cheese prices have declined practically to 17 cents. Some higher quotations have been recorded, but the general tendency has been downward. This is a direct result of the heavy May-end output. Patrons, especially those with cool-curing room factories, have withheld large supplies with the wise idea of controlling the supply reaching the market. When quotations did not appeal to them they simply held the cheese, thereby stemming the flood from the counties busy factories.

Dairy and Poultry.

Butter was offered freely on the local markets last Saturday and is generally easier. At Owen Sound it dropped as low as 19 and 20 cents a pound. Cheese production is noticeably heavier throughout the province, the various boards last week rolling up nearly double the make for the same week a year ago. Eggs are firmer; that is, strictly fresh eggs, because of the effects of the weather and lighter receipts.

The total cheese receipts in Montreal from May 1 to May 22 was three times what they were for the corresponding period a year ago.

Vegetables and Fruits.

Potatoes are near the end of the season and are a dead letter. Toronto advices say that New Brunswick Delawares at 50 cents are crowding Ontario potatoes off the market. There is no local interest in potatoes. In Owen Sound they are selling at 25 cents a bushel.

Flour Extra.— Late this afternoon the Quaker Oats reported another 50 cent per bbl. reduction in flour. This means a total of $1.00 a barrel during the past two weeks. The Quaker Oats Co. prices for 1st patents are $3.55 a bag car lots and 2nd patents $3.30. This decline covers Manitoba flour, and winter wheat flour should follow. The wheat market is away off. This afternoon's despatches quote October wheat options at $1.05, an indication of the feeling pervading the market. The United States, with a heavy crop in prospect and a greatly curtailed export trade is apparently not holding any hopes for high prices at the harvest.

Farm and Dairy Market Report

TORONTO, June 7.—While the broadening scope of the war is undoubtedly causing some hesitation in general business, there seems to be a gradual but steady improvement. This improvement is probably as noticeable in agricultural sections as any, the farmers profiting by the high prices for farm products. While conditions point to a bountiful harvest and greatly increased acreage, authorities tell us that even if present prospects materialize, that there will be no danger of the world being over-supplied and that prices should remain at a high level for grain products.

Grain markets at present are very quiet. Live stock is steady, butter is at practically the same level as last week, while cheese is firm.

WHEAT

The movement of wheat has been decidedly on the down grade during the past week. It is now stated that large quantities of wheat are being offered, the existence of which was not generally known before. As a general rule soaring prices bring out "hidden" wheat, but in this case the rapid decline seemed to have its effect. No. 1 Northern is now quoted $1.43; No. 2, $1.40; No. 3, $1.36½; Ontario wheat, $1.38.

COARSE GRAINS

As was noted last week, this market is the quietest for some weeks, and prices have dropped still lower during the past few days. Oats, C.W. No. 2, 62c; No. 3, 59½c; extra No. 1 feed, 59½c; No. 1 feed, 58c; Ontario oats, 57c to 58c; corn, American, 75c; Canadian, 76c; peas, $1.40; barley, malting, 72c; feed, 65c; rye, $1.10; buckwheat, 77c to 78c. On the Montreal market oats, C.W., No. 2 is quoted 62c; extra No. 1 feed, 61c; local white, 61½c to 62½c; barley, feed, 71½c to 74c; corn, 85c to 87c.

MILL FEEDS

Quotations rule steady: Bran, $25; shorts, $28; middlings, $29; feed flour, $1.80. At Montreal bran is quoted $25; shorts, $28; middlings, $33 to $34; moullie, $35 to $38.

HAY AND STRAW

The bright prospects for a good average crop of hay has caused an easier feeling in the market, although there is little change in quotations: No. 1 baled hay, $16 to $17; No. 2, $14 to $15; No. 3, $12 to $13; baled straw, $7 to $8. At Montreal No. 1 baled hay is quoted $21.50; No. 2, No. 1 baled hay is quoted $21.50; No. 2, $20.50 to $21 and No. 3, $18 to $18.50.

EGGS AND POULTRY

Receipts of eggs are falling off a little, but prices to the trade remain unchanged. Cold storage stocks are pretty well in now and local firms indicate that they are no heavier this year. This no doubt is due to the prospects for a future good market. New laids in cartons are sold to the trade at 22c to 24c; new laids, 21c to 22c.

Poultry quotations are: Chickens, live, 12c to 14c; dressed, 17c to 20c; fowl, live, 12c to 14c; dressed, 14c to 16c; ducks, live, 14c to 15c; dressed, 16c to 18c; turkeys, live, 15c to 16c; dressed, 20c to 22c.

HIDES AND WOOL

Quotations on hides are still on the up grade: Hides, flat, cured, 15½c to 16½c per lb.; part cured, 14½c to 15½c; green, 13½c to 13½c; calfskins, cured, 16c to 17c; part cured, 15c; deacons, or bob calf, 65c to $1 each; horse, take-off, No. 1, $3.75 to $4.25; No. 2, $2.25 to $3 each; sheepskins, 75c to $2; shearings and spring lambs, 30c to 45c; horsehair, farmers' poddier stock, 25c to 40c per lb.

Now that the Federal Government has modified the embargo on wool, allowing the Canadian product to cross to the United States under special license, the situation of the market is relieved. Quotations are: Washed, coarse, 25c to 27c; fine, 28c to 30c; washed, rejects, 24c to 26c; unwashed, coarse, 19c to 20c; fine, 23c to 25c.

POTATOES AND BEANS

The ruling quotations on potatoes remains unchanged from last week, Ontario's selling at 45c in car lots and New Brunswicks, 55c. At Montreal too the market is quiet, a few car lots being placed at 47½c to 50c per bag of 90-lbs.

Beans here are quoted: Primes, $2.10 to $2.25; hand picked, $2.20 to $2.25. At Montreal one and one-half pound pickers are quoted at $2.20 to $2.25; three-pound pickers, $2.05 to $2.10 and five-pound pickers, $2.00 to $2.

DAIRY PRODUCE

The undertone of the butter market is easier and buyers are holding off in anticipation of still lower prices. The available supply of butter at large centres is large, unusually large supplies coming to this market. Much lower prices, however, are not looked for as there is always a demand for the June make for storage purposes. Fresh made creamery prints are quoted 25c to 26c; solids, 24c to 25c; dairy prints, 23c to 24c; bakers, 22c to 23c. At Montreal finest creamery changed hands this past week at the same quotation as the previous week, 27½c.

While receipts of cheese are liberal, exports continue to absorb large quantities. The market has a slightly easier undertone, however, and there is evidently a general break in the market since at hand. The Trade Bulletin has the following to say about cheese during the past week: "There has been a good business over the cable both in Canadian and American cheese, sales of the latter having been made at 16½c to 17½c f.o.b. within the past few days at country points. Montreal buyers have been busy from New York State to Wisconsin foraging around for the coveted article."

HORSES

Quotations rule on this market as follows: Heavy draftn, young and sound, 1,400 lbs. and up, $185 to $240; light draftn, $140 to $190; drivers, $180 to $275; farm chunks, $125 to $160; serviceably sound, $60 to $120; good workers, $30 and up.

LIVE STOCK

While the run of cattle at the Union Stock Yards at the closing market of the week was light, a new element appeared in the trade which strengthened the situation. Heavy butcher steers, which were a drag on the market earlier in the week, were picked up for export at an advance of 15c a cwt. over the price quoted early in the week. This tended to give a better tone to the market. Quotations for the week average about as follows: Heavy choice steers, $8.10 to $8.50; handy choice steers, $7.85 to $8.35; butcher steers, $6.75 to $7.85; heifers, $6.75 to $8.25; choice cows, $6.75 to $7.40; com. to good, $5.25 to $6.75; feeders, $7 to $7.40; stockers, $5.50 to $7.25; canners and cutters, $4 to $5.

The demand for choice milch cows is steady at $75 to $100; com. and med., $45 to $70. Veal calves remain firm in price at $8.50 to $9.75; hob calves, each, $2 to $7.

Sheep and lambs were steady, spring lambs going at $6 to $9; yearlings lambs, $7 to $8; ewes, $7 to $7.50; heavy sheep and bucks, $5.50 to $7; culls, $3 to $4.25.

Hog values are steadily maintained at $9.25 f.o.b. country points.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B. C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

MAKE WALLS TRANSPARENT

Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of wireless telegraphy, prior to his departure to Italy from New York, made it known that the time is almost here when, if he chooses to give to science the secret of a new apparatus he has invented, it will be possible for persons one side of a solid partition to observe what is transpiring in the adjoining room.

The possibilities for evil involved in the amazing invention have made its discoverer reluctant to make it known to the world until he is fully acquainted with all its uncanny qualities, and he admitted that it might be some time before he would feel justified in giving a demonstration to his fellow scientists.

Makes Wall Transparent.

The apparatus in its present state resembles in outward appearance a sort of camera. When placed against a wall or floor it renders transparent the material against which it rests, permitting its user to observe objects or persons on the other side. "I have not quite perfected it," he said. "Persons can be seen in the next room if they are close enough to the wall, but at any distance they become blurred. The transparency effected is not complete yet, but so far as I have progressed with it the idea is rather attractive."

His Wireless 'Phone.

The inventor also discussed tests made in his presence at the wireless plant in Sayville, in which the effort was made to get in touch with Germany by wireless telephone, a possibility so imminent that the experimenters are convinced that only the unfavourable weather conditions that night prevented the experiment from being successful.

A third invention in which Marconi expressed his confidence was that of the telephone over which the two speakers can see each other.

"That is undoubtedly coming," he said. "I can safely assure you of that, though personally I am not working on it."

MODEL CONDUCT WINS $200,000 FOR STUDENT

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9—It pays to be a model young man. Here is the proof — two hundred thousand dollars' worth of it.

Bruce Cartwright Basford, a second-year student of the University of California, has just been willed $200,000 by his guardian, Attorney Roger Johnson of San Francisco. Sitting in the Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity House at Berkley yesterday, this lad, barely eighteen years of age, manifested the traits that have characterized his life, and which unexpectedly brought him a fortune.

The chapters in Basford's life read like a novel and the rules for conduct which he laid down for himself and conscientiously followed, resemble the mottoes and advice which great men have often given.

"Attorney Johnson had been in his younger days a close acquaintance of my mother's, Mrs. Edith Scott Basford, who lived in Los Angeles for a long time," said the ruddy-cheeked boy. "With my mother's consent I was allowed to become his ward and live with him. When he would come home at night I comforted him and tried to make myself useful. Whenever I had time I went to his office and did what I could to help him. I always set it down as a rule for myself to try to be as helpful as possible. Only my friends can say how far I have succeeded.

"It was always Mr. Johnson's desire to have work done thoroughly and conscientiously, so I just tried to do my best."

When questioned Basford somewhat reluctantly admitted that in high school he had received none but perfect marks; that he had been one of the crack rifle shots of Hitchcock Military Academy and a winner of several medals; that he was on the football, basket-ball and baseball teams and one of the most popular boys in high school. He entered college at the age of sixteen, and with the semester over will have completed two years' work in a year and a half.

In College he has become well known and is a good student in his chosen line—medicine. He is also a persistent athlete.

Basford goes to dances on week-ends and visits numerous friends, but always makes it a point to be home and studying during each evening of the school week. He takes a reasonable recreation, enters into his fraternity's athletic contests and has helped it materially to win the inter fraternity baseball cup.

"When my uncle died I did not expect he would leave me an inheritance," he said. "Of course, the money will be of vast assistance to me," but I am going to continue with the study of medicine, and later, practice, as if nothing had happened. I am going to live as I have lived in the past. Maybe I will go to Germany to finish my course in medicine, but I have two more years of study here."

Johnson's will places the money in trust with the Mercantile Trust Company of San Francisco until the boy is thirty-five years of age. This is in accordance with the dead attorney's idea that Basford study and work as hard as possible up to that time. There is a provision in the will however, which permits Basford to draw a substantial sum for living expenses and to further his education with the permission of the court.

STOPS FALLING HAIR

This Home Made Mixure Stops Dandruff and Falling Hair and Aids Its Growth,

These are all simple ingredients that you can buy from any druggist at very little cost, and mix them yourself. Apply to the scalp once a day for two weeks, then once every other week until all the mixture is used. A half pint should be enough to rid the head of dandruff and kill the dandruff germs. It stops the hair from falling out, and relieves itching and scalp diseases.

Although it is not a dye, it acts upon the hair roots and will darken streaked, faded, gray hair in ten or fifteen days. It promotes the growth of the hair and makes harsh hair soft and glossy.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

NEW NORFOLK FOR BOYS.

By Anabel Worthington.

This stylish suit can be copied effectively in striped or checked suitings, in black and white mixtures, plain serge, khaki or linen. The coat has a notch collar, regulation coat sleeve, four patch pockets, yoke and belt. The yoke may be omitted, if preferred, and also one or both of the breast pockets. Knickerbocker or straight trousers may be used, the difference in making being a very slight one; for the knickerbockers the lower edge is stitched for a casing in which elastic is run; for the trousers the lower edge is merely turned up in a hem.

The collar is usually the difficult feature in making a suit of this kind, and the reason seems to be that the crease or roll comes on the bias. Before the collar is finished a piece of narrow tape should be sewed near the crease, between the two sections of the collar and revers. For 12-year size you would need 3¾ yards of 44 inch material. The pattern, No. 7,187, can be obtained in four sizes, from 8 to 14 years. Price, 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

THE GERMAN SUPRISE ATTACK FAILS

CANADIAN BATTALIONS HOTLY ENGAGED

ATTEMPT TO SEIZE MILL BY SURPRISE ATTACK A FAILURE

French Searchlights Picked Up the German Regiments as They Advanced and Rain of Shrapnel Drove Them Back--Enemy Trying to Prevent French Using Neuville as a Base of Operations Against Lens.

ITALIAN FORCES MAKING PROGRESS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 10. — A midnight attack upon the Souchez sugar mill in which the Germans were beaten off with severe losses, featured the despatches from the front today. Several German regiments took part in an attempt to recapture the mill by surprise. They crawled forward in an attempted encircling movement but were picked up by the French search lights and thrown back by a violent rain of [illegible]

The Germans are bombarding the ruins of Neuville Stvaust, evacuated by their troops on Tuesday night, in an attempt to completely destroy the town and prevent the French from using it as a base of operations against Lens.

The enemy is using the same tactics near Hebuterne, south of Arras, but the French are maintaining themselves in a strongly fortified mill. "We have made further progress in the Labyrinth south of Neuville," said this afternoon's official communication. "In the region of Lorette Hill violent artillery duels continued all night.

LONDON, June 10.—The British collier Ernabolt has been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine.

OTTAWA, June 10.—Canadian troops training in the various camps throughout the country are to have the benefit of the experience of officers who have already taken part in the gigantic fighting in northern France. General Hughes is arranging to bring to Canada within a short time a number of the officers of the first Canadian contingent who are wounded and convalescing.

BERLIN, Via wireless, June 10.—The Russian armies both in Galicia and farther north along the Baltic, have been heavily reinforced and are checking the Austro-German advance. An official statement this afternoon admitted the Germans had been forced to withdraw toward Betigola and elsewhere in Russian Courland and the Province of Kelwno.

OTTAWA, June 10.—That the 14th battalion of Montreal and the 7th battalion of British Columbia, have been in the thickest of the fight in northern France, in the last few days, is shown in the casualty lists received at Ottawa during the past 24 hours. So far in the Canadian division there have been 8281 casualties, of whom 1255 were killed, 5446 wounded, while 1584 are missing.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 10.—The Anglo-French losses during last week have been enormous, all reports from the Dardanelles agree.

BERNE, June 10.—Unofficial despatches received here to-day say that the Italians are shelling Trent from long range, having occupied Rovereto. These despatches, also unconfirmed from other sources, also reported that the towns of Besenella, Vattaro and Beseno, lying between Rovereto and Trent, are being shelled by the Italians.

LONDON, June 10.—Fire of a mysterious origin to-day destroyed three acres of army supply buildings in Park Royal, West London, at an aggregate loss of $500,000. One hundred Red Cross motor vans and 200 army service vans were destroyed.

DIRIGIBLE DESTROYED

AMSTERDAM, June 10.—A German dirigible of the Perseval type, was destroyed by allied aviators who dropped bombs on an air shed near Brussels Sunday night.

BERLIN, June 10.—South and southeast of Lemberg, the arrival of strong bodies of Russian troops has hindered General Von Linsene's advance. At certain sectors the Slavs have taken the offensive, says the German official statement. Around Szawle the Russians are stubbornly resisting the German attempts to hold their lines.

"Near Souchez the French have gained minor advantages and in the forest of Lepretre French troops occupied a section of our trenches," said the official statement. "Elsewhere, notably in the region of Souain and north of Lemesinel, we have captured enemy trenches."

LONDON, June 10.—By a careful reading between the lines of the various official announcements of the last 12 hours, to-day's British Observer follows the situation on the continent to the belief that the wearied Russians have been successful in gaining a breathing space along the Eastern front. Further more evidence of the stubborn opposition which the Germans are said to be meeting near the centre of the line in Galicia is declared here in statements from Petrograd that 3000 Austro-Germans have been taken prisoners in a series of counter attacks near Przemysl.

LONDON, June 10. — Two British torpedo boats were torpedoed this morning off the East Coast of England by a German submarine. Both were sunk. Forty survivors were brought here

DIAMONDS AS WEDDING GIFTS

A very valuable and attractive window display of diamond rings may be seen at the jewellery store of Warne Bros., "Diamond Jewellers," George street. The display is not only large, but very varied and artistically mounted. All are brilliant cut stones, and at such a varied and interesting diversity of prices that all classes may be suited. Owing to the wide range of values in diamonds, it is essential to implicitly trust the person from whom they are purchased. The reputation of Warne Bros. is such that confidence may be reposed in every purchase.

DRAFT FROM THE 8TH C.M.R. LEAVE FOR FIRING LINE

Fifty Troopers Including Number of Peterboro' Men Leave Barrie-field Camp to Reinforce the Strathcona Horse

GOT GREAT SEND-OFF

BARRIEFIELD, June 9.—The camp population is beginning to change. Men are coming in every day from various parts of the division, and now they have commenced to go out. To-day the camp parted with fifty men of the 8th C. M. R. The big, brawny Mounted Riflemen marched out of camp amid music and cheer. Their faces were wreathed in smiles as they turned their steps towards the road leading to the bridge and the city. They have gone to reinforce the Strathcona Horse, and to fill up the ranks into which gaps have been ploughed by German shell on the blood deluged field of Flanders. There was the usual pang of pain at parting. The unit was broken. Men who had enlisted in the Mounted Rifles together, drilled together, chummed together, were now being separated. They would have felt different if they could have faced the enemy together. Then the parting even by death would be sweet, but comrades hate to be separated in this way. However, it is one of the cruel fortunes of war, and whatever the soldier might feel, he is too good a soldier to express. Everybody joined in giving the draft of the 8th C.M.R. to-day a parting that will carry in their memories until recollection fails further to record or reproduce events.

The departing soldiers were accompanied to the station by the whole 39th Battalion, including three bands, the Pipers Band, the Trumpet Band, and the 39th Brass Band. The men were given a great send-off at camp.

END OF THE "Y" CANVAS

Yesterday's Effort Brought the Total Up to $7,520.50 and Committee Is Working Hard To-day to Reach the Goal

YESTERDAY'S REPORTS

Wednesday's canvas for the Young Men's Christian Association campaign brought very fair results. Had to. There were good and energetic men on the job. Forty or fifty of our best and most public-spirited citizens —citizens every one. The citizen is the man who does something for his fellows, young or old.

Supper was served, as usual, and was fine. The labourer is worthy of his hire. And that along with a sense of satisfaction at a duty well done, is about all that the workers gain. There was a cheerful spirit of optimism among the gathering. Certain of the workers wore smiles. They had found some rather unexpected pickings which helped to swell the amount.

After supper the daily returns were announced and posted. Things brightened up. Mr. Beatty of the Auburn Mills Co., gave a substantial amount for the Company, and followed it with a good sum on his own account. Alderman J. J. Duffus was more than liberal and his two-figure contribution helped. Major Hall sent in a fine amount. Mr. G. N. Gordon did not forget that the "Y" needs the money. The canvassers who visited Mr. Breyfogle, gained a fine contribution form the Company and then the heads of departments fell to and subscribed a sum in the total that made the callers smile. There were others equally helpful and acceptable.

Thursday is the closing day. Already it is known that a few large sums were looked on as good as given, are in the coffers, having been made good. So to-night's meeting will bring some surprises. It looks as if the amount asked for will be realised.

The daily report sheet is as follows:

President Wilson Rests His Cause on Note to Germany

Will Not Answer Bryan's Explanation of Reasons Why He Resigned, But Will Depend on His Message to German Government to Justify His Position.

OBJECTS TO METHODS

WASHINGTON, June 10.— President Wilson will rest his cause in the Germany-American controversy on his note, to be handed to the Berlin foreign office late to-day. He believed the note will entirely justify his position. Consequently neither he nor his friends will answer ex-Sec'y of State Bryan's explanation of reasons why he resigned from the Wilson cabinet. The President is understood to have taken the position that it was not the killing of 115 Americans that made the Lusitania incident the cause of the note of May 13, but rather the methods by which they were killed. The United States in its original note of Feb. 1 emphasized that if Americans were sacrificed as victims of the German submarine policy, this government would hold Germany to "strict accountability." In pursuance of that announcement the note of May 13 was despatched. The President considered the German reply unsatisfactory and the note now believed to be in Berlin plainly says so.

SHELL KILLED TWO PETERBORO' MEN AS THEY SLEPT IN TRENCH

Pte. Chas. Mongour, Wounded by the Same Missile, Describes the Incident in Letter to His Mother---Shell Struck Roof of Dug-out, Came Through and Exploded--Corp. Carpenter Evidently One of the Men Referred to by Wounded Peterboro' Boy.

In a letter to his mother, Mrs. A. Mongour, 414 Dublin street, Pte. Chas. Mongour, of the 57th detachment, tells how he was wounded, and also tells of the killing of two Peterborough men whom he does not name. One of them referred to as "a sergeant in the 57th" was evidently Corp. Bert Carpenter, who held a sergeant's rank in the Rangers. Who the other Peterborough man killed was, is not yet known here.. Corp. Carpenter is the only Peterborough member of the 2nd Battalion officially reported killed since the Langemarck battle.

..... May 26th.

Dear Mother:—Just a few lines to you, hoping to find you all at home well, as it leaves me pretty fair. I have a nice wound about four by four on my left leg. I won't be able to go back for quite a while, as it is pretty sore. Well, I am lucky to be here to tell you the tale. There were four of us in the trench in a dugout, and a big shell lit on the roof and came right through and exploded. It killed two of them, and wounded the other two. The other poor fellow is just full of holes in his legs and arms and shoulders. There were two Peterborough fellows killed, one was a sergeant in the 57th. I got a bruise on my left side right about my heart. When I was struck there I thought I was done for. I was gasping for wind.. I was only in the trench two hours. We were all having a sleep when the shell came. I am just able to sit up. We are treated well.

I was only two days getting to England.. When I got hit I went under an operation in France and had the shrapnel taken out. It is about one inch by an inch wide, so you can guess what kind of a hole it made. Then they cut it after that. I am keeping the piece for a souvenir. You will have to excuse this writing as I am pretty shaky . . . . We've got some good nurses. Well good-bye.

From your loving son,
CHARLIE.

THE REASON.

Our business is growing so rapidly, showing a steady increase month after month is: Because our work is dependable, our glasses are unapproachable in quality, our prices are absolutely fair, and, because we are prompt. Tait Optical Co., 410 George St. ts-135

ANOTHER LOCAL BOY FOR FRONT

J. L. Kennedy, Son of Mrs. Wm Kennedy, Thomas St., Enlists—Dave Bradshaw Is Going

The Sudbury Star gives an account of a farewell supper to a number of Sudbury men leaving for overseas. Among them are several well-known here, including J. L. Kennedy, a son of Mrs. Wm. Kennedy, 280 Thomas Street, Peterborough. Speaking of him the Star says:

"Jack" Kennedy of McKinnon and Davidson, grocers, is a native of Lakefield, near Peterborough. He is prominent in amateur dramatic and other social circles, widely known and well liked. His sister, Margaret, is a teacher in the Separate School, Sudbury, and is an ardent Red Cross worker."

Another volunteer mentioned by the Star is "Dave" Bradshaw, formerly of the Royal Bank, here, and who played right wing for the Peterborough Hockey Club the season before last. He is described by the Sudbury paper as follows:

"Dave C. Bradshaw is a Stratford boy, but has been for several years accountant in the Royal Bank, Sudbury; popular with the younger set, a good hockey and baseball player, and a good fellow."

Pension Granted To Pte. R. Levoir

Who Was Invalided Home From Salisbury Plain

Notice was received from Ottawa to-day that a pension had been granted to Pte. Levoir, a member of the local quota of the 1st Contingent, who was invalided home from Salisbury Plains some months ago.

Pte. Levoir has been a patient in St. Joseph's Hospital for the past couple of months, but is now at his home. He will be incapacitated for life.

This is the first pension granted in this district in connection with the present war. The amount of the pension is $37.00 per month.

PTE. STAN KELLY IN THE HOSPITAL

Attended Business College Here—Enlisted While Working in Toronto

Tuesday's list of casualties contained the name of Pte. Stanley Kelly, of Fenelon Falls, who attended the Peterborough Business College during the fall and winter of 1911-12. He is reported to be in the hospital suffering from shock.

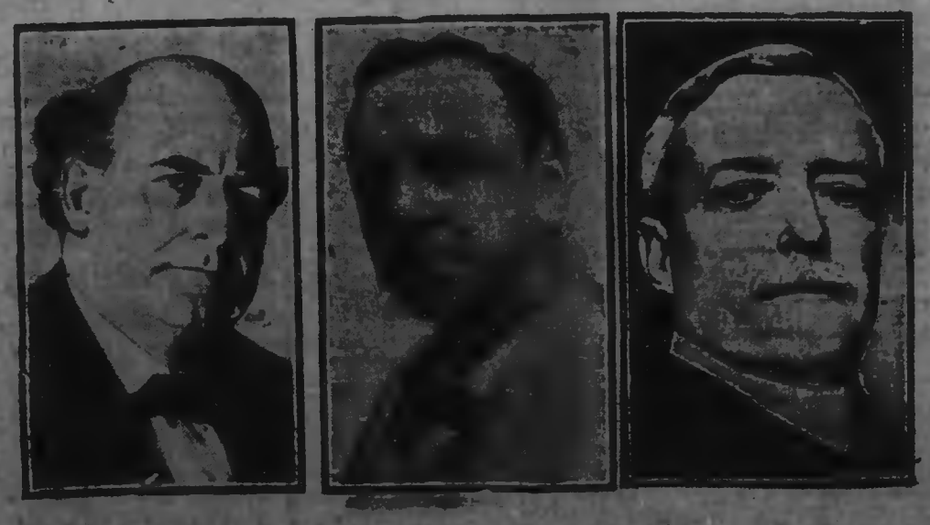
Pte. Kelly is a son of Mr. Chas. Kelly, blacksmith of Fenelon Falls. After completing his course in the Business College here, he went to Toronto and was employed there at the time of his enlistment. He is a member of the Third Battalion.

Forest Fires In the North

Mr. George Keith, 281½ Water Street, has returned home from Field, Ont., where he was employed as cook with a lumber company. Owing to the recent outbreak of forest fires it was found impossible to continue the work under normal conditions, so that the men employed in the camps were assigned to the task of fire fighting. Until conditions become normal Mr. Keith will remain in Peterborough.

Rains Had Good Effect.

Reports coming in show that very heavy fronts have been suffered in the northern districts by forest fires. The fires raged at a distance of seventy miles along the line of the Transcontinental. Several hundred prisoners of war at Kapuskasing got out and fought the flames. That camp was threatened. The heavy rains of Sunday night had a good effect in quenching the fires.



THE CRISIS IN THE UNITED STATES CABINET.—William Jennings Bryan, retiring Secretary of State; Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, who may also resign (he is a bosom friend of Bryan's); and Robert Lansing, Counsellor of the Department of State, who is now acting-Secretary of State, and may become the permanent head of that Department.

WHAT WE SHOULD LOSE.

We need to keep in mind what the success of the German Kaiser's mad idea of world domination would mean. It would mean the fixing upon us of the German cult of militarism and all that leads up to it, and all it involves. Freedom of thought as associated with freedom of speech would be denied every citizen. A German in Saskatchewan has written to the Winnipeg Free Press, a letter, which was published. The letter defends German methods even to the use of poisonous gas and the sinking of the Lusitania, and roundly abuses everything British. If a Englishman or a Canadian, domiciled in Germany, had sent a like letter to a German newspaper, the letter would not only not have been printed, but the writer looked up and locked up and doomed to spend a long time in jail if, at war time, especially, he had not been stood against a wall and shot. This is cited to show the contrast between the liberty we enjoy in Canada, and the tyranny and despotism that the militarism of Germany imposes upon its people. The German people may like it, or rather tolerate it, for they have been schooled to it so long that the present generation doesn't know what freedom is. There is no democracy in Germany; that is, no free people, not tied down with thousands of despotic restrictions and "limitations," with manhood rights, as we know and have them in Canada. These things are what we are fighting against; things we would have to exchange for our free happy conditions, if the German dream of world domination should be realized. And it will be realized if the allied nations, including ourselves, do not prevent it. This is why we are making so great sacrifice to avert the demonic danger that threatens us. But the sacrifices we are making, and what we must yet make, would be as nothing to the sacrifices we should have to make if we came under the domination of German ideals and the conditions they lead to.

OUTLAWED.

If one thing more than another justifies Mr. Secretary of State Bryan in getting out of harness, and shows his lack of grasp of the situation, it is his proposal to avert war by arbitration, and the associated idea that Germany would be bound by the finding of an arbitration commission. The only successful appeal that can be made to Germany is to take her by the throat—she will be bound by no treaty, no agreement. We have had example of that in her "scrap of paper" attitude regarding Belgium, we have example of her dishonouring her signature to The Hague Convention, and breaking every code of fair war to which she set her hand. Germany has forfeited every claim to be trusted. Italy knew her well, and refused to regard any guarantee Germany offered of advantages if Italy would remain neutral. Germany cannot consistently keep her word while she is true to her policy that the end justifies the means; that every law of God and man, and nations, must be swept aside if it interferes with her designs of conquest and domination. Recent demonstrations of German or Prussian disregard of promises, is only a repetition of history; a sequence of traditional policy for a hundred years. In 1814 the Grand Duchy of Posen was taken over by Prussia. The rights and liberties of its inhabitants were solemnly guaranteed, and at once trampled upon. In 1864, when the duchies of Schleswig and Holstein were annexed, the Danes of North Schleswig were guaranteed the right to reattach their districts to Denmark by a plebiscite. That was never permitted. In 1871 Germany signed the treaty of Frankfurt, a clause of which guaranteed free intercourse between France and Alsace and Lorraine. This was not kept. Now Germany, hag-ridden by the Prussian spirit of militarism, strengthened by half a century of preparation, for breaking her pledged word with impunity by the employment of force, would be less inclined to keep faith if she became a party to anything of the nature proposed by Bryan. Germany is outlawed among nations, and can only be dealt with by methods meant for outlaws. She has made the word "German" stink in the nostrils of the decent world, as a synonom for lying, spying, breach of faith, cruelty, inhumanity and barbarism. The world would as soon expect a wolf to respect an agreement to keep away from a flock of sheep, if it got hungry, as to expect the Germany of the Kaiser and the war lords, to respect its pledged word when it would consider the breaking of it an advantage to herself.

PLAIN SPEAKING.

The following is from the Toronto Telegram, a staunch Conservative journal. Its fidelity to the party has been pretty well strained by the war contract scandals that have been connected with Canada's discharge of its duty. The following is what the Telegram says:

"New York is to-day infested by Canadians, some of whom have lived by their wits. Others lived off the country. A few weeks ago some of these Canadians could not have raised sufficient money to take a box of paper collars out of pawn. To-day these personages are unanimously housed in palatial apartments. They are approached with difficulty. Cards have to be sent in by Canadians soliciting contracts. The amiable, confiding weakness of Sir Robert Borden has allowed a horde of middlemen to fix themselves in as high-priced intermediaries between European Governments that wish to place orders for war supplies and the Canadian manufacturers who wish to fill these orders. Let Sir Robert Borden prove himself as big as his opportunity and the whole race of contract jobbers will be scourged out of the line of communication between the demands of the Allies and the factories of Canada. . . . Is Sir Robert Borden or the Canadian Manufacturers' Association content that Franco-Russian contracts should be given to a small army of Canadian middlemen, who never owned a factory, and jobbed out to the Canadian manufacturer who does the work on the basis of twenty-five per cent. commission to the middleman?"

If the above had appeared in a Liberal newspaper, no condemnation would have been too severe, in the view of the Conservative party press. Coming from the Telegram the party journals cannot deny that the conditions described have had some existence. They cannot be dismissed as the vaporings of party prejudice. The Canadian Manufacturers' Association, anxious for the good of the country, and the good name of manufacturers, gave its warning to the Borden Government before the wrongs that originated the scandals were committed. Sir Robert Borden refused to make their protests public. In view of the results of the Government's disregard of its warnings, will the Association, which is in session now, have something to say publicly about the war scandals and their discredit to the manufacturing guild?

PULP PROSPERITY.

The expansion of the pulp and paper export trade is one of the most cheering features of Canada's trade statistics. The paper-making industry of the continent is gravitating to the North because of Canada's possession of unlimited raw material and water power. Already the exports of paper amount to over fifteen millions a year, a most creditable amount, besides over nine millions of pulp for paper-making.—The Globe.

Put Fireproof Clothing on Child

The following article is by Chas. F. Pabst, formerly coroner of Brooklyn, N.Y. He says:

In the course of my duties while coroner's physician in Brooklyn I was deeply impressed by the large number of deaths among children caused by their clothing catching fire while they were frolicking around bonfires or playing with matches. In one period of 16 days I attended 21 children who were burned to death in this manner.

I have compiled the statistics for 1914, which shows that there were 185 deaths from accidental burns in Brooklyn alone, and at least 20 per cent. of these cases resulted from carelessness. I sought for a means of preventing accidents of this character, and the following description of my plan shows how this can be accomplished without trouble or expense.

Remedy is Simple.

There is an easy and efficient method of fireproofing the clothing of children which everyone should know. Many tragedies can be averted by fireproofing the children's play suits, as well as lace curtains and such other articles of an inflammable nature as may easily come into contact with fire and so cause serious accidents.

A solution of ammonium phosphate is used for this purpose and can be made quickly and easily. Dissolve one pound of ammonium phosphate in one gallon of cold water, and a clear solution is formed in which the fabric to be fire-proofed should be soaked forfive minutes. The garment can then be taken out and allowed to dry, after which it may be worn with perfect safety, as it is absolutely fireproof.

Material Not Harmed.

The solution produces no more harm to the material than would the same quantity of ordinary water. It will keep indefinitely, is non-poisonous, and can be used for several suits. Ammonium phosphate is a common white crystalline powder, not patented in any way, and sells for about 25 cents a pound at any drug store.

Any articles fireproofed by this method will remain non-inflammable until washed or drenched with rain. The use of this solution is a safety measure which should be employed for pageants, carnivals and receptions where flimsy draperies play an important part in the scheme of decoration. It should also be used for scenery and properties in theatrical productions and as a safeguard at all amateur Christmastide and New Year displays.

GOOD PROSPECTS OF TRADE REVIVAL THROUGHOUT DOMINION

TORONTO, June 9.—That trade in Canada has passed the period of greatest depression and already exhibits signs of a sound revival in many lines, appears to be the opinion of the majority of representative business men throughout the Dominion who have contributed their views to a comprehensive survey of conditions which has just been completed by the C.N.R. Less than ten per cent. of those responding, confess to a gloomy outlook; more than ninety per cent., numbering more than two thousand, report themselves as optimistic as far as the immediate future is concerned. Practically all are agreed that trade conditions will rapidly return to normal after the restoration of peace. A large number are convinced that if the harvest of 1915 is up to expectation, domestic business will be satisfactory in all the provinces.

In the survey, all classes of enterprise as defined by the last Dominion Census are reported upon. The provinces have furnished the latest information regarding the 1915 production of the agricultural, mining, fishing and lumbering industries. Country towns and villages as well as the large commercial and industrial centres have been covered, and officials of the C.N.R. are inclined to accept the views reported as frank statements of present trade and its future prospects.

The reports indicate that business in the Dominion, as a whole, is from 15 to 20 per cent. below the normal of one year ago. Exactly two-thirds of the informants report a volume of trade as good, or better, than it was last autumn, while 12.03 per cent. state they can not compare present business and last autumn business is always brisker with them at one season than during the other. Apparently trade in the Maritime Provinces is affected least. In the Prairie Provinces it is not nearly as brisk as it was last year, but optimism is reviving under the influence of excellent crop prospects. Business in Quebec is slow, but apparently improving, and in Ontario it is gradually returning to normal condition. Broadly considered, the reports show that business in the towns and villages located in well-settled, fertile agricultural districts is practically normal. Dealers in all lines report that collections in such centres are generally normal, and that activities have not been curtailed to any extent. The chief falling off has been in the large industrial centres. When reductions in staff were made by manufacturers and by business houses last autumn, retailers were forced to curtail credits to customers thrown out of work, and in turn wholesalers were obliged to scrutinize carefully all credits extended to retailers. The people generally continued to purchase necessary lines of food-stuffs and essentials in other branches of trade as well, but dealers discovered that goods not falling within that classification were in danger of becoming dead-stock upon their shelves; however, as Canadians arrived at a better understanding of actual conditions, a certain amount of confidence returned, and retail sales were gradually extended to take in the usual lines of goods. The distribution of orders for war materials also exerted a favourable influence where it brought about a renewal of employment in several of the industries in the large cities, and trade credits released to a proportionate extent. Collections, despite the altered conditions, appear to have continued fairly good in the large centres, and seem to be steadily improving.

If the public cherished any doubts as to the value of the teaching of art and music in the city schools, these were quickly dispelled in the minds of that part of the Peterborough public, as is represented by the parents of the pupils attending the King George School, Ashburnham, who had an opportunity last evening to witness some of the very creditable achievements of the scholars along these lines. At the invitation of the pupils, a large number of the parents and friends visited the King George School, where in one room, had been very carefully arranged, the art work of the various classes. Starting at one end was that done by the children of the kindergarten, and moving along one saw the advance that is made in each class, in the accomplishment of more difficult work, until the highest form is reached. In the kindergarten flowers, little baskets, and such like, are very cleverly made in plastine. Passing into the higher grades they learn to draw the same in crayon. It would not be fair to make any discrimination as to the individual work of the scholars, as this was not a prize contest. Boys and girls in the third and fourth hoog rooms show wonderful ability in the really difficult subjects that they have attempted with considerable success. Sketches of landscapes, drawings of ladies' heads, and Indian heads, were noticed, and impressed one with the fact that the development of the boys and girls of the Public Schools along artistic lines, was certainly not being neglected. Particularly of interest was a blue-print war map by one of the senior boys. It was the subject of much favourable comment.

Various articles made by the boys in the manual training classes were exhibited as was also the collection of wild flowers by several pupils. In this last regard prizes were presented to Girth Pretty and Isabel Taylor, who are in Mr. M. Park's room, for the best collections. Myrtle Sucee, Mae Newman, Helen Carruthers, Roberta Rightmeyer, Hettie Record, Elma Kerr, Elva McIntyre, Kenneth Anderson, Earl Maniece, Fred Doupe, Stanley Curtis and Lionel Lipsett, were given honourable mention.

The Programme.

After viewing the exhibit, Inspector Mowat took the chair and after welcoming the parents and referring to the object of the gathering, announced the singing of several choruses by the pupils of different classes. The training of the pupils in a musical sense, is a splendid innovation of recent years, and the rendition of numerous choruses last night amply proves the same. These young peoples' voices have been carefully trained, the effects achieved being wonderful, reflecting great credit on the teachers. Principal Maurice Park and Assistant Principal O. M. Steer, were heard in a vocal duet, "In the Garden of My Heart," and so insistent was the applause an encore number, "Barcarolle," from the Tales of Hoffman, had to be given. Miss Rannie, musical directress of the city schools, acted as accompaniste.

Mr. Park and his staff, who arranged the exhibit, are due considerable thanks for the opportunity afforded the parents to witness the work being accomplished by their children

This very successful affair was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

TWO GREAT GAMES IN CITY LEAGUE SATURDAY

With all four teams evened up the City League games on Saturday promise to be of unusual interest, and undoubtedly the biggest crowd of the season will be on hand. The Classics fresh from their victory over the East City team will tackle the Empires in the first game. Art. Johnston is now at the head of the Empires, and it will be a rejuvenated team that will do battle with the Classics on Saturday. The second game will bring together the East City and the Thistles. The latter, after losing their first two games, have won the last two, and are coming strong. The game with East City should be a corker. Kirn will pitch for Dan McCabe's team, while the Thistles will present their soldier battery, with Lieut. Huycke pitching and Lieut. Hill catching.

BASEBALL

The Inter-Catholic League games scheduled for Tuesday night of next week will be played to-morrow night instead. The games will start at 6:45 o'clock. The Sacred Heart team vs. Immaculate Conception team at Riverside Park, and Knights of Columbus vs. St. Peter's at Sacred Heart grounds.

Voice of The People

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—I have not seen or heard anything of the controversy which elicited "Heron's" criticism of the letter of "Common Sense," which he says appeared in the "Examiner," and therefore I have no desire to take part in the discussion. If, however, "Heron" is right in saying that the Rev. Mr Armitage told his congregation on Sunday that Sunday, the first day of the week, is observed in commemoration of the completion of the creation of the earth instead of Saturday, the seventh day of the week, then he must know, and the latter does know, that there is no Biblical authority for such a statement. He also ascribes to the reverend gentleman the statement that the seventh or Sabbath day and the resurrection of Christ or the last day, are the one and the same day of the week, contrary to the teaching of the Bible. If, when the Lord's day Alliance sent out their agents on a begging expedition, they would also send a statement of their receipts and expenses, people would know what they were subscribing for and what became of their money. We need all our money just now for the great war crisis we are now up against, instead of subscribing to any scheme that may come along.

Yours, etc.,

Consistency.

CHILDREN AND THE WAR.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—Like many other parents, I have deplored the sight of boys of school age being trained and encouraged to think of war. That our boys should have to be brought up under the influence of those mascular ideals that develop the hideous ideals of war, seems anything but Christ-like. How are children to be taught to be followers of Christ and at the same time to inculcate in them this spirit of war?

Even the fondest parent who brings up his children in a home atmosphere saturated with a detestation of war and of all that war means, will find it a most difficult problem to combat the tendency of our schools to impart a war-like spirit to the scholars.

In cities, in towns, in the villages, those little warriors are operating with toy pistols and toy guns, and with swords of tin and wood. In a few years, they will forget their boyish war games and parades, but something of their enjoyment will remain through life, will influence their feelings and their attitudes of mind. The early impressions of human beings are likely to be the deepest.

Just now, it is safe to say, that there are millions of children, far from the war zone, who, in spirit, are actively engaged on the firing line.

Is it right to encourage this spirit? Do boys love it because they are boys, or because they are encouraged to think it is right by their parents and school teachers?

I know there are some conscientious fathers who are deeply concerned about this matter. My own opinion is that it is all a very grave mistake, this cultivating of the war spirit in our children.—Yours, Enquirer.

THE LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—You will kindly pardon me for occupying further space in your paper, but in view of the fact that the writer in last night's issue takes exception to the remarks of "Common-Sense," 'I wish to emphasize what was said by the latter when he showed the absurdity of the Lord's Day Alliance trying to secure a day of rest for workingmen. "Common-Sense" was right. What is the necessity of the Lord's Day Alliance trying to "secure" a rest day for men who are resting not only 2 days a year but 150 days a year. It seems to me that they have rest days enough. I say again with "Common-Sense" that if the Lord's Day Alliance had as much interest in workingmen as they pretend they would make a tour of Canada, trying to get work for them instead of rest.

But when this Sunday rest is analysed thoroughly it will be clearly seen that the reason why the Lord's Day Alliance is trying to enforce it, is not because the want a rest day for the worker, but because they are anxious to make laws regulating religion. And when we touch this aspect of the question it makes it all the more serious. No person should be forced to be religious. That makes hypocrites. If a man becomes a Christian he must do it of his own voluntary choice and persuasion. But if he is compelled, he may make a profession, but it is all on the outside. Another thing, religious compulsion brings about persecution like the Dark Ages. It was only when the Church sought help from the State that she resorted to the rack and other tortures. Christ wants no help from Cæsar or the civil power, and when ministers of Christ are running after human power to compel people to be religious, it proves that they no longer have the power of God to persuade. You never heard of the Apostles running around after parliament getting their religious views enforced. They tarried in prayer until they got power from on high, and many thousands were converted even in a day. We would suggest that the Lord's Day Alliance do the same thing. If the ministers can't get people to church on Sunday let them seek the Lord, like the Apostles. The power will be given them and they won't need civil law then. It is a shame and disgrace to Christ and His religion to have His ministers seeking human laws to help him out, and this is what the Lord's Day Alliance ministers are doing. This is a great menace to Canada's religion and will eventually revive the inquisition. So let us see to it that we will discourage enforced religion We will obey Christ and keep His day voluntarily and not by force.—Yours truly,

Christian.

OVERWHELMING MAJORITY FOR CHURCH UNION

KINGSTON, June 9.—By a vote of 361 to 84, the Presbyterian General Assembly has adopted the recommendation of the Committee on Church Union to submit the question of organic union of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational Churches to a vote of the presbyteries and congregations and to have the vote reported to the meeting of assembly in June, 1916.

Nearly the whole of the morning and afternoon sederunts were devoted to the discussion of this great question. Those opposed to union had their case ably presented by Rev. Dr. McLeod, Barrie; Rev. Dr. Fullerton, Charlottetown, P.E.I.; Rev. Dr. Campbell, Montreal, and others. The union cause was championed chiefly by Rev. Dr. John Neill, Toronto; Rev. Dr. Harridge, Ottawa; Rev. Dr. Bryce, Winnipeg, and Rev. Dr. W. J. Clark, Montreal, chairman of the committee, who closed the debate briefly. It was a foregone conclusion that the vote in favour of the committee's report would be large, but the actual vote was somewhat larger than the expectations of the most sanguine union supporter.

A committee was named by the Moderator to prepare the voting papers to be submitted to the presbyteries and congregations, so that the question would be more thoroughly understood than on previous occasions when votes were taken.

Dr. Herridge, in supporting the sending of the question to the people, stated that unless the vote was larger and more decisive than the previous one, he would be the first to move that the assembly go no further in the matter.

Rev. Dr. Campbell raised objections to the basis of union because it did not carry out what is contained in the Confession of Faith. He held that denominational differences were not a stumbling block in the way of Christianity.

Rev. Dr. Bryce, Winnipeg, made an appeal for the West, where, he claimed, union would be of great benefit. Judge Farrell, Moosomin, said he had travelled all over that province and his observation, of union churches showed him that those churches gave no more money to ministers or to pastors. The spirit of parsimony prevailed.

Dr. McLeod declared that the union bombs President Falconer had brought from Toronto had failed to explode, and that the non-unionists were not afraid of them. Both he and Dr. Fullerton made it clear that no matter if a union church was forced the Canadian Presbyterian Church would continue. Dr. Fullerton dramatically declared that "a Presbyterian I was born, and a Presbyterian I will die."

Rev. Dr. John Neill, Toronto, said that if the assembly thought a change in the Church would further the interests of Christianity, it should vote for union. He thought union would do this, and that was why he was supporting it. Dr. Neil hoped that the best of feeling would prevail in the discussion. "Let us bring to bear upon it all our horse, foot and artillery, and our aeroplanes and our submarines, too."

A voice—"And gas?"

Dr. Neill—"Yes, and gas, too." (Loud laughter).

"I hold in my hand the names of over 700 worthy ministers and laymen who are pledged to hold the minority together," said Rev. F. B. Wilson, Trochu, Alberta.

After the vote was taken, Rev. Dr. R. F. Scott, Montreal, moved that the taking of the vote by presbyteries and congregations be referred to the next assembly in view of the present war conditions and because so many members of the Church were fighting overseas. This resolution was lost by a vote of 38 to 74.

At the evening sederunt, the Board of Social Service and Evangelism presented its report. In connection with it, addresses were delivered by Miss M C. Ratte in rescue work among girls, and by Rev. Principal John MacKay, Vancouver, on "Political Graft."

Garbage By-law Has Been Amended

As the Property Committee of the Peterborough City Council has frequently discussed the advisability of amending the garbage by-law, the following changes as adopted in Toronto will prove of interest:

Street Commissioner Wilson, of Toronto, has drafted a new garbage by-law, which will mean some radical changes in the city's scavenging system. The commissioner proposes to abolish the practice of placing cans on the boulevards. The scavengers will go on to the premises and carry the cans out to the waggon. This is the practice in Rosedale, where there are no lanes The commissioner, however, will draft a new regulation for the collection of garbage in that section, fixing a limit of the distance from which cans are to be taken. The by-law will provide that cans be placed within three feet of the front angle of the house, and they will be restored to the location from which they are taken. The commissioner also proposes the adoption of regulation receptacles for garbage and ashes. Exclusive of a few minor amendments, the garbage by-law has not been changed in twenty years.

In Peterborough it is customary to place the cans on the boulevards, where they are frequently upset by small boys and dogs.

Although the United States refines more nickel than any other country practically all of the ore is imported from Ontario and New Caledonia.

Military and Patriotic Year at the Canadian National Exhibition

The Canadian National Exhibition which will be held from August 28th to September 13th, will mark a great epoch in the history of the patriotic service. This year is essentially a patriotic year, and every event that marks its progress must breathe the spirit of patriotism and imperialism.

When the smoke of battle is passed away and the great guns have ceased belching forth their message of death, and the wave of peace has settled on the surface of the world, when other years and other times have changed the strong spirit of national hatred to national understanding, the year 1915 will still be engraved upon the memories of the people of the world.

As this year is destined to become historical, so every event connected with it must also be historical. For many years one of the greatest institutions of this country has been the Canadian National Exhibition, when people from every part of the Dominion and from the United States spend two weeks of enjoyment, of enlightenment and amusement in one of the finest beauty spots in Canada.

At the Exhibition this year will be exhibited for everyone to see all kinds of evidences of German Kultur from the helmets of the much vaunted Uhlans to the barbarous device, the asphyxiating gas bomb. Big guns that had done their deadly work before they fell into the hands of our soldiers; shells of every calibre; helmets and uniforms taken from the bodies of dead Germans; in fact all that Krupps have been able to create will be shown at the Exhibition this year.

Grand March of Allies.

The most brilliant and spectacular episode ever staged before the grand stand will be the review of the troops at Calais, and the grand march of the Allies. In the former the visitor will see the armies of France in the [illegible] the litoral will be the Commanders of the allied armies and the Sovereigns of the allied countries. Soldiers from Russia, France, Great Britain, and her Dominions, Italy, Serbia, and Montenegro, dressed in their national uniforms, will march in one great phalanx before men who today are making history and changing the map of the world.

When this great military aggregation has passed in review order before Kings and Generals, a wonderful vista will open before the eyes of Great Britain led by the latest super dreadnought, the Queen Elizabeth, and followed by twenty-six battleships, battle cruisers, torpedo boats, and submarines. In his Flagship the Lion, Admiral Sir David Beatty will lead the total fleet before Sir John Jellico, the Admiral Commanding, in his Flagship the Iron Duke, who will review the fleet amidst a salvo of broadsides. Then at a given signal the whole fleet will be brilliantly illuminated and amidst the strains of Old Hundred, will vanish over the horizon.

Creatore's Band.

The engagement of Guiseppe Creatore and his famous band will largely increase the popularity of the evening scenes on the plaza. This brilliant Italian conductor is undoubtedly one of the outstanding men of the musical world to-day and his reputation extends over two continents. He comes from a country rich in the art and noted for the musical geniuses it has produced Every member of his band is an accomplished musician, and music-loving Canadians have a treat in store for them.

Model Military Camp.

In view of the fact that so many of our Canadian soldiers are fighting on the battlefield of Flanders, the model military camp, which will be one of the special features at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, should attract thousands of visitors, a great many of whom, no doubt, have sons or brothers at the front. In this camp will be seen a detachment of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, artillery, Royal Canadian Engineers, Royal Canadian Regiment, as well as machine guns and armoured cars. The work of the A. M. C. Transportation Corps, A. S. C. and field kitchen will be an interesting feature. The camp, which will vividly portray life under active service conditions, showing even trench digging and the landing of hydroplanes with headquarters staff and field telegraph complete, will be situated west of the Transportation Building.

LUSITANIA PUT END TO PEACE TALK AMONG THE ALLIES

NEW YORK, June 9.—After passing six weeks in England and at the French battle front, Mr. Henry Pindell, proprietor of the Peoria Evening Journal, once appointed Ambassador to Russia, who arrived here aboard the St. Louis, of the American line, declared Great Britain and France were stirred up to such an extent over the torpedoing of the Lusitania that they will never consent to any "patched up peace." He said if Americans could see the thousands of wounded he saw in Boulogne and other places in France, they would keep out of the war, except as a last resort.

Mr. Pindell, who is at the Vanderbilt Hotel, said the soldiers of Great Britain and France were different men since the sinking of the Lusitania. In England, before the destruction of the vessel, he stated, there was talk that something ought to be done to put an end to the war. The British then were not haters of the Germans in England, and they did not want to destroy Germany. But since the Lusitania tragedy Britons believe the war must go on until there is a decisive victory for the Allies, Mr. Pindell said, and France also feels the same.

That there has been a complete transformation of the Frenchman since the war began is the opinion of Mr. Pindell. He said he found the soldiers of the Republic in excellent condition, cheerful and inbued with the idea that they are carrying a great responsibility and determined to fight until there is a successful termination of the war for the Allies.

EXPECT VICTORY BY AUTUMN.

"They are fighting with great courage, are those Frenchmen," he said. "The flower of French manhood is at the front and men who have been accustomed to every luxury amilingly and unflinchingly are taking their places as ordinary soldiers in the trenches. They are battling against what they call the menace of nearly half a century. And they are so hopeful of victory that they believe Germany will be beaten decisively by the autumn. I was at Nancy and at Pont-a-Mousson. The soldiers were well fed and well equipped. I tell you that this war seems to have changed the Frenchman. He is a calm, calculating person of robust health, and he believes himself invincible and scoffs at the idea of the Germans breaking through.

"It is an abnormal war and one that can't be judged by average standards. Americans ought to help the President to maintain peace if it can possibly be done. I have not yet been able to read Germany's reply to Mr. Wilson's note, but the horrors of the war are before us—the thousands and thousands of wounded in the hospitals and aboard the hospital ships — and we ought to make a stand for peace until the last ditch. American history teaches every man that the United States never has accepted insults and that we always have insisted on our rights, but if we can keep out of the war with honour it should be done. By doing so we can render a far better service to humanity. Even the Allies don't want America to declare war.

"I have been through the desolated villages left by the German advance last year, and I have been to the second line of trenches, and have talked to soldiers and officers and to citizens of the French Republic. This war may last six months and may go on for three years. Who can tell?

WHAT ABOUT RE-COVERING THOSE SHABBY CHAIRS?

Items That Are Good To Know About

OUR DEPARTMENT OF Women's outer apparel has never before had such a representative showing of all the new season's latest modes. It has also been observed here that to dress in the height of fashion this season costs a little less than formerly. Come and see if our magnificent display does not give you the same impression.

IF YOU WANT TO GIVE the really smart touch to your outing or sports costume, you must finish off your collar and hat with a big loose bow—of plain or striped silk. We are showing a big range of these fashionable ties in bias stripes, plain shades and polka dot effects. They are priced at 50c.

Are There Not Some In Every Household?

They may have merely worn or faded covers, or they may be actually decrepit with weak backs and legs and "bony" springs, but in nine cases out of ten they only need the attention of an upholsterer to make them as "good as new".

Perhaps even you may be the fortunate possessor of chairs or sofas with walnut frames, and though they show a combination of graceful lines and good workmanship, these species—and mark you they are increasing in value every day—may have been relegated to some attic just because they are shabby.

If that be the case—just send them to our upholstery department to be re-finished and re-upholstered with a suitable covering and you will be amazed at the transformation. We employ experts in this sort of work—and our charges are very moderate.

The choice of fabrics is very large, and includes Velours, Brocades, Silks and the most delightful of Chintzs, Shadow Cloths and Printed Linens at a wide range of prices.

On receipt of a card or 'phone message, a representative will be sent to your house to give an estimate free of charge on any upholstery and refinishing you may have in view.

Lance Corp. McNab Describes Voyage of the Cyclist Corps

Peterboro' Boy in Interesting Letter to His Father, Gives Incidents of the Corinthian's Trip—One Man Arrested Under Suspicion of Being a Spy

Following is a letter received by Mr. A. McNab, G.T.R. agent, from his son, Alan McNab, formerly of the Signal Corps of the 57th Regiment under Lieut. Ackerman, and now attached to the Div. Cyclist Corps, Kingston platoon, second contingent, lately arrived in England. His letter gives an interesting account of the voyage of the good ship "Corinthian" on which the Cyclist Corps, in command of Colonel Denison, Toronto, crossed the briney, in company with other units of the Second Canadian Contingent.

Dear Father,—I intend to write this letter day by day, as we progress, and will mail it the first chance I get to do so, in order to give you all the news, and that as soon as possible.

Sunday, May 16, 1915.

Arrived from Toronto about 10.00 p. m., last night, and we went directly on board our ship, and to our berths, which were all in readiness. Awoke this morning at 6.30, and immediately realized that we were in motion. In going on deck I found that we were then about 40 miles from Montreal, having left there at 4.00 a.m. It was a beautiful day, and we thoroughly enjoyed it all, as we forged ahead down the placid St. Lawrence, and admired the changing scenes along the shores. The country is very low lying, until we drew near the old city of Quebec, where it commences to rise considerably.

At Quebec, where we arrived about 4.00 p.m., we put off mail and took on a new pilot. After leaving Quebec we saw many high snow-covered peaks which, with the sun just setting behind them, made one on the most beautiful scenes I have ever looked upon. I took a snap with my "Ensign" and will send you a print if it develops well.

Monday, May 17th, 1915.

Another beautiful day. We passed Father Point at 4.00 this morning, dropping our last mail, and our pilot. We are running close into the south shore, and the north shore was very indistinct all morning, passing out of sight completely at noon.

By 7.00 p.m. the south shore had also faded from sight, and Anticosti was showing dimly on our port bow. It has been a very fine day with no winds or waves.

Tuesday, May 18th.

Still bright and warm. Anticosti disappeared, and we then had Newfoundland on our port bow for the better part of to-day. The coast presents rather a dready appearance, with only one village to be seen all day. Sighted quite a fleet of fishing craft on our starboard about noon, also two or three whales and a couple of icebergs.

Wednesday, May 19th.

Dull weather, and rather windy to-day, with the sea rising considerably. As a consequence many of the fellows are beginning to have trouble with their cargoes shifting. Mine, however, has given me no trouble so far, and I feel fine, except when I go to the stern of the boat, when I experience some "sensations."

The wind rose during the afternoon and it rained considerably. Later we ran into fog banks. About 4.00 p.m. a sailing craft passed us going down the wind, towards Newfoundland, and she sure was travelling. Had all sail crowded on, and scudded by us in a flash. Made one think of the ghost-ship stories we had read in school days. We were in very heavy fog all the night, the horn was sounded incessantly, and once or twice we stopped altogether. We have a careful old skipper of 36 years' experience, without an accident booked against him, so no one is uneasy on that score.

Thursday, May 20th.

Dull, and windy again. Felt rather crocky this morning, but after presenting my breakfast to the fish, felt quite ship-shape again. The old ship is heaving and rolling in fine style to-day, but I have got my sea legs now, and stay on deck as much as possible. My favourite spot is right in the bow, where I can get the full force of the wind, and see the cold ship plough through the big combers, which are a fair size now. Quite a number of bergs have been passed to-day, but none were very near us. The rumour has got about that the Carpathian, and Empress of Russia are on either side of us, just out of sight, and that the Scandinavian is ahead of us.

Friday, May 21st.

Still dull and with higher winds, which, however, have shifted, and now directly in our wake, so we should make good time to-day. The lads are talking of how badly the ship rolled last night, and some say they were nearly thrown from their berths, time and again, but I slept through it all and am feeling fine. The Steamship Company are not getting ahead of us, in regard to meals, so far, even if I did give one to the fish.

We have a big escort of sea gulls with us now, which we picked up yesterday, and it sure seems strange to have them away out here, a thousand miles from anywhere, and apparently always on the wing. 5.00 p. m.—The wind is rising, and so is the sea, and our ship is commencing to roll pretty badly. Expect it will be a rough night.

Saturday, May 22nd.

In spite of the promise of last night, this morning broke fine with the sun peeping through from time to time. We are now entering the eastern reach of the Gulf Stream, and the weather is becoming milder. About 8.30 this morning a cruiser appeared on the horizon to the south of us, but after takin ga short survey of our ship, she disappeared again, evidently satisfied that we were alright. Later in the day we passed a small tramp steamer, and a freighter, both going west. We had not been keeping to the regular trade route thus far, but apparently are now getting back to it.

This afernoon we had boat drill. We have all been told off to our separate boats, and each man has his life belt at the head of his bunk, so that everything is in readiness for any emergency.

Our whole platoon, with the exception of two men, are in one boat, on the starboard side. It is number 5, and is situated about amidships.

Sunday, May 23rd.

Awoke this morning in the gulf stream. It is a perfect day. We had divine service at 10.00 a.m., with one of our men for parson. He is a Mr. Trivitt, and had just received his D. D. last spring. He is a good fellow through and through and is always ready for any kind of sport, and is somewhat of a boxer.

We ran into a school of porpoises during the morning, and they kept us amused for some time. They kept leaping out of the water around the ship, and especially around the bows. They are about four feet in length, and have very sharp snouts. Are of a greenish brown colour, with light stripes on each side, from head to tail. Sighted one liner away out on our starboard this p.m.

Monday, May 24th, 1915.

Very bright and warm, with light north-east wind. This being Victoria Day, all the troops on board ship were drawn up in review order on deck, while the bugler sounded the royal salute, and then we sang "God Save the King." the afternoon sports were indulged in, the chief event being a boxing contest. There were about twelve bouts in all, with usually two or three rounds to each bout. "Cycle Corps" was well represented, having men in five of the events, and winning in three of them. Our parson was one of the entries and we have named him the "fighting parson." The light breeze has grown to a stiff Nor'wester, and waves are breaking over the forward deck. We are now in Lat. 48, Lon. 21. Passed two three-masted schooners, and two steamers to-day. One of the schooners was a Frenchman. She came in close, and signalled to report, having seen her to Lloyds. The crew gave us a great cheer when they made out who we were. I got a snap of her, and hope it turns out good, as she was a beautiful sight when seen under full canvas.

Tuesday, May 25th, 1915.

Bright, with stiff Nor'west winds, which kept the spray flying. The boat's crews have been busy all to-day, getting the lifeboats in A1 condition, filling casks with fresh water, stowing biscuits in each boat, and putting everything in readiness for instant use. There are about thirty lifeboats in all, including a large collapsible one, which has been opened, and is standing ready on deck. So, we are ready for the torpedo boats of the German, if they put in an appearance. It is understood we will land on Thursday morning if all goes well. The sunset this evening was glorious.

Wednesday, May 26th, 1915.

Warm and bright. We passed the Scilly Islands about midnight, and all have been on the lookout for signs of land. Up to noon there was no sign, however, and then a fog began to settle down on the sea, which was very calm. I had just gone on deck, after dinner, when looking to the north I observed two shapeless blurs in the fog about a quarter of a mile away. Before I could speak of it these shapes cleared the fog, and all saw them. They were two torpedo boat destroyers and bore down upon us at a great speed. After some palaver, No. 2, the "Linnet" proceeded with us, while the other dropped behind until lost in the fog. Our siren is sounding constantly to-night because of the fog, but we expect to make port to-morrow morning.

One man was arrested last night on suspicion of being a spy. He had persisted in hanging around the wireless room, and had opened his port hole wide, after it had been blinded for the night. Do not know what the outcome will be yet.

Thursday, May 28, 1915.

We are docking now, at 10.30 a.m., and I am going to post this as soon as I land, so good-bye for this time, and don't worry, as all is well. We have had a very fine voyage, and hope to have as good a time in "Old England" for a while. We land at Plymouth. Jerry and Gray both well.

Your affectionate son,

ALAN.

Tenders For Street Paving

City Engineer Parsons Will Report to the City Council

Tenders for street paving have been received from the following companies: Sandard Paving Company, formerly known as the Foley and Gleason Paving Company, Warren Paving Company, Toronto, W. A. Taylor, Port Arthur, Murphy & Madill of Montreal. The following local men tendered for concrete paving: J. E. Hayes, John Carroll and R. Sheehy. The tenders have been referred to City Engineer Parsons, who has promised to have a report ready for the City Council in the course of a week or ten days.

CONCESSION STREET WILL BE RE-NAMED ARMOUR ROAD

Board of Works Endorse Proposed Change—A Number of Other Streets to Be Re-named—Sewers to Be Constructed

A deputation representing the Ancient Order of Foresters waited upon the Board of Works last evening with the request for permission to erect a banner across George street advertising an excursion to be held on July 1st. The request was granted.

Renaming Streets.

Robert Reid asked to have Brown street in the North Ward changed to Auburn street. He pointed out that there was more than one street of a similar name in the city, which resulted in confusion.

A petition endorsing the proposed change has been placed before the Council. The Board of Works will recommend that the request be granted. Alderman Weir moved that Concession street be changed to Armour road. This was seconded by Alderman Evans and endorsed by the entire Board. Alderman Evans suggested that a street in East City, known by the dual appellation of Dale avenue and Engleburn avenue, be called Engleburn avenue, be substituted for Dale avenue. The matter will be looked into in time to be incorporated in a by-law concerning a number of other streets that are to be renamed.

View Obstructed.

The Grand Trunk Railway Company reported that the view of the gateman at the Sherbrooke street crossing was obstructed by a number of trees. The matter was left in the hands of City Engineer Parsons with power to act in the matter, also any others of like nature.

Sewers to Be Constructed.

The Board will recommend to the City Council, the construction of a sewer on Maude street as per the request of the Board of Health. A similar work will be undertaken on Lafayette avenue. A piece of sewer will also be constructed on Wescott street.

Sidewalk Extension.

The chairman will report on the proposed extension of the sidewalk on the east side of Park street to the south side of King, so as to serve a couple of houses that are at present isolated so far as sidewalk facilities are concerned.

Pavement Wanted.

The Board considered a petition for a pavement on Weller street from Park street to Monaghan Road. The Board was of the opinion that the work could not be undertaken this year. Alderman Duffus suggested that petitioners for street paving be required to specify the nature of the paving desired. It was pointed out that such a course was not feasible as it would encourage wire pulling on the part of agents representing paving contractors. The matter was laid over for future consideration.

Stoney Lake Breezes

Improvements at Kawartha Park, and McCracken's Landing

Kawartha Park has growing-pains. "Woodside" is spreading out on all sides. The store has expanded in southerly direction, as well as a trifle to the west; in other words, Mr. David Charlton, who purchased the property last fall from Miss Bertha Brown, of Penticton, B.C., has been making several additions to his plant.

A new two-storey cottage, 29 by 34, has been erected between the "boarding house" and Dr. Morrison's cottage. It contains twelve bedrooms and will be used for sleeping accommodation exclusively; the small "annex" has been moved slightly to the rear, and the dining-room of the other cottage will be made more commodious for the thirty-odd guests he expects during July and August.

A new section has been joined to the store to provide better facilities for the post office department.

Over at McCracken's Landing Mr. Choate's new store is assuming rather pretentious proportions.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. McKinney, of Orange, N.J., expect to spend their vacation at the Victoria House.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Knapman spent the week-end at their cottage, "Forest Home."

Mr. and Mrs. Ivor Brock, Miss Pearl Brock and Mr. Thomas Pickett, of Toronto, came up to Stoney Lake on Saturday in their motor boat, the "Perlebe."

Mrs. Fred Norrish spent a couple of days in Peterborough this week.

The "Stoney Lake" is bringing up large quantities of freight each trip.

Mr. Dunford and Mr. Ivan Butler spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Norrish.

Mrs. W. F. Nelson and Miss Isobel, Mrs. Jas. Dixon and Miss Fannie Dixon are enjoying a short vacation at "Trafalgar Lodge."

The water in Stoney Lake is now twenty-one inches below high-water mark, and is still about three inches above the Juniper Island wharf. The highest level for this season was around the twentieth of May. We may expect it to go down soon for the lumber-jacks are on their way.

FIRST DRAFT ON MONDAY

Twenty Recruits on Roll for New 59th Battalion to Leave Them—Recruiting for 8th C.M.R.

Recruiting for the Peterborough detachment of the new 59th Battalion is continuing satisfactorily, and there are now twenty men on the roll. The recruits are drilled each morning on Central Park by Lieut. Harold Hill, and have made great progress. The first draft will leave for camp on Monday next, so that any other local men who want to get away with the first quota should apply at once at the Armouries. Recruiting will continue until further notice.

Lt.-Col. Johnston, officer commanding the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, is taking on recruits for the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles to replace the men that have left for the front to reinforce the Strathcona Horse. Several recruits have accepted so far. The recruits taken on will join the 8th C.M.R. at Barrichfield.

Manufacturers Met in Toronto

Two movements, the one to increase the trade of Canadian firms in the home market, and the other to afford facilities for expert trade with British and foreign countries, were discussed at meetings held in connection with the forty-fourth annual convention of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association at the King Edward Hotel yesterday, at which Messrs. B. F. Ackerman and W. R. Breyforle are in attendance. Both the proposal to continue the "Made in Canada" campaign and that to organize the Export Association of Canada, Limited, were received with approval by the great majority of the manufacturers present. The speakers only were inclined to oppose the continuance of the "Made in Canada" propaganda. One suggested that it might be inopportune at the present time and that it might be construed as a campaign of selfishness; the other thought that the duty to purchase goods of domestic manufacture should be taught in the schools rather than by the methods adopted by the association. These objections were met by the argument that by increasing the consumption of their goods the manufacturers were placing themselves in a position to give employment now to Canadian workmen. Finally the meeting decided to continue the campaign and endorsed the proposal to adopt and copyright a "Made in Canada" label to be used under restrictions which will make it "a hall mark of quality or value, as well as a certificate of origin." The members heard statements as to the objects and plans of the Export Association of Canada from Messrs. F. C. Armstrong and J. M. Young, who have been engaged in organizing it. They heard from the latter also an appeal to the manufacturers to start a movement to encourage their men to enlist for active service in the war. Already 225 members have registered for the convention which will be in session to-day and to-morrow.

Stoney Lake Pioneer Passes Away

It is with sincere regret we chronicle the death of Mrs. Robert Rogers, which occurred last week at her home, 62 Shannon Street, Toronto. The deceased did not long survive her husband, who passed to his reward two years ago. Ever since his death she has been in poor health, and her friends noticed, last summer, with sorrow, the tell-tale evidences of the shades closing in on the valley of the shadow.

For twenty-four years Mrs. Rogers had been a resident of Stoney Lake. Her husband was an ardent admirer of its enchanting shores, and during his life he spared no pains in providing for the comfort of his family while living the life in the open. The first five or six years of their vacation days were spent on Juniper Island, the balance at their summer home, "Chicopee."

Those left to mourn the loss of mother and father are two sons: Harold and Clifford, and a daughter, Hilda. Mr. James Acton, of Toronto, and Mr. R. J. Colville, Y.M.C.A. secretary of St. Thomas, are relatives.

How will the $12,000 be Spent--this is what many good Peterborough People are Asking

THE ANSWER IS ALL READY. IT IS:

In consequence of the Patriotic Campaign last year, the Association did not make a full canvass, so that we were left with a deficit of	$3,000
For 1915 we require for maintenance as usual.....	$3,500
For an Extension and Improvement Fund, to be used in the re-arrangement of the Boys' Department, and in the addition of 15 Dormitories, thus increasing the annual revenue by $2,000	$5,500
	$12,000

An additional $3,000 is needed for Permanent Repairs. It has been decided not to ask this at present, unless the response to this appeal, on behalf of our Citizens is sufficient to warrant us in doing so.

THE "Y" is really a Civic Institution—much as the Public Library is.

The burden of its upkeep cannot, however, be imposed on the City's Taxes. It remains for Private Munificence and Membership Fees to liquidate each year the Cost of Maintenance.

Peterborough would be infinitely poorer if it had no "Y". This Institution enriches Civic Life to-day and to-morrow. It makes MEN—the finest product (except Women, God bless them!) of creation and civilization.

When you support the "Y" your money is transmuted into manhood. No better investment offers under heaven.

When the Canvassers call—try and do better than you can. You will rise to it. Sure Thing! Consider what the Empire, the Dominions and Canada are doing. Did not think it possible two years ago.

So you can do a substantial amount to keep the "Y"; your "Y"; Peterborough's "Y".

CHANDOS MEN PLEAD IGNORANCE OF TIMBER LIMIT OWNERSHIP

Charged With Trespass and Theft of Seven Trees From Peterboro' Lumber Co.—They Reply That They Believed Them On An Old Rathburn Estate.

Gordon Reynolds and Robert Peters, Chandos men, charged with cutting seven trees on Peterborough Lumber Company limits, in that township, offered as their defence that they thought they were on old limits of the Rathburn Company.

Gordon Reynolds.

Examined by his Counsel, Mr. Gordon, witness said he had lived in Chandos about 34 years. He owns a farm and works out some.

"You live near what the Peterborough Lumber Co. thought was their limits?"

"Yes; my farm is on lots 1 and 2, Con. 16."

Some time ago Reeve Bullied wanted to get some timber for a Township bridge across Elk Creek. The Reeve told him not to cut on the McDonald and Peterborough Lumber Company's limits."

Witness said he got the timber on the old Rathburn limits, which had not been worked during the past ten or twelve years. He knew the property as he had worked for the Rathburn Company when he was quite a young man.

Reeve Bullied told me we could get timber from Government land for County purposes, by paying certain dues.

Where witness had cut the timber the Peterborough Company had never owned a limit, he said. After the logs had been cut and were at the outlet, witness met Mr. Alfred Dane, Peterborough Lumber Company's agent, who said they must not be removed until they were paid for. Witness had replied that they were not taken from the Peterborough Lumber Company's territory.

Mr. Dane said he was sure some of them had been taken from their limits.

Witness said he would not have cut the timber on the limits of the Peterborough or McDonald Estate Companies if he had known they were their limits.

The logs, after being cut, were floated down past Mr. Dane's house to the bridge. Nothing was done to hide the hauling or any part of the work. The work was done in the day time.

After the Dane interview witness and Reeve Bullied came to Peterborough and met Mr. Davidson. The latter would not make any terms.

The mark "20" on a boom stick must have been 28 years old. It was the old Elliott mark before they sold to Strickland.

To Mr. Hatton.

Under cross-examination Reynolds told Mr. Hatton he had taken precautionary measures before cutting the timber. He asked Mr. Kidd as to the old limits of the Rathburn Company, which witness said he understood to have been abandoned.

Mr. Hatton—"This isn't the first time you had cut over limits you had no right to cut on?"

"No, sir."

Witness trespassed once on a Rathburn limit.

He had never cut before on the six square miles of limits under question.

You mean to say you didn't know these six square miles were under license to the Peterborough Lumber Company?

"I don't understand that."

"Do you want to answer it?"

"Repeat it again, please."

"Living within 3 1-2 miles and practically 34 years there, you did not know these limits belonged to the Peterborough Lumber Co.?"

Reynolds said he thought the Company's limits were a little farther west.

Robert Peters.

The next witness, Robert Peters, said he had lived in Chandos about twenty years. Reynolds told him he needed help to get some timber and offered witness $1.50 a day. He did not offer him any share of the profits.

Witness said he had not known that the Peterborough Lumber Company had limits on that side of the lake. He thought the limits belonged to the Rathburn Co.

"You had some trouble with Dane?"

"Yes; he pulled me out of a rig and kicked me around the road. He had to pay $10 and costs for that."

The trouble was over witness' cutting hay on some marsh land. Dane said it was a Peterborough Lumber Co. limit.

In regard to the limits under discussion of the Court, witness said he did not know who owned them. If they were Crown lands he understood he could go on them without asking permission.

Wm. Tucker.

To Mr. Gordon witness said he had been in the County Council five years. He had known Reynolds and Peters for about thirty-five years. They had grown up together from boyhood.

What is the reputation of Peters' and Reynold's as to honesty?

"Good."

"What do people say of them?"

"They speak well of them."

"Knowing them as you do, would you expect them to steal timber from limits?"

"No."

Frank Neven.

Frank Neven, Clerk in the charge of timber licenses in connection with the Department of Lands and Mines, testified as to the location of the Peterborough Lumber Company's limits in Harvey. The Company has been in possession of the cutting rights of the limits since April 7th, 1908. Witness did not corroborate the evidence of Mr. Dickson Davidson, who was of the opinion that the ownership was vested in the Crown, and that the Company merely had cutting rights.

Crown Attorney Hatton read a copy of the evidence that was given by Gordon Reynolds, one of the accused, at the preliminary hearing. In the evidence, accused denied knowledge of the actual whereabouts of the Company's limits.

THE VALOUR OF CANADIANS WAS DEATH-DEFYING

TORONTO, June 9.—That the Canadians displayed wonderful courage, coolness and heroism in the battle of Langemarck and, that practically every man who took part in the memorable battle is deserving of a Victoria Cross, was the statement of Lieutenant J. Murray McKinley, 4th Battalion, 1st Brigade, who returned to his home, 16 Brunswick Avenue, this morning. Lieut. McKinley, who was shot through the left chest, has been granted permission to return to Canada to recuperate and was a passenger on the Megantic, which arrived yesterday.

"That fight was beyond description," said Lieut. McKinley this morning. "It was hell, that is all that can be said to describe it. Our regiment under Col. Birchall, was on the extreme left of the Canadians at the Pole-Chapelle road. . . . . Col. Birchall was killed, being struck before I was wounded. The Germans had mounted machine guns in some buildings, and they caused terrible destruction among our men. After the first day's fighting only 247 answered roll call out of 1,600 the day before."

Didnt See Birchall Die.

Lieutenant McKinley did not see Col. Birchall when he was struck, but learned of it at the time. He had been fighting about 10 hours when he was struck in the left chest by a bullet. After lying for some hours, he was carried into cover by his comrades, and later taken to the rear where he was attended in a field hospital. Three weeks were spent in a hospital in Boulogne, France, and he was transferred to Guy's Hospital, London, from which place he was permitted to leave for Canada.

It is impossible to try to recount the feats of courage and heroism displayed by our men," said Lieut. McKinley. "There were thousands of them happening every instant. Every man who took part in that battle is deserving of a Vicoria Cross. We talked it over in the hospital and all those present who took part in the engagement agreed that the conduct of the Canadians was magnificent."

Lieut. McKinley was reluctant to give details of feats of daring and heroism on the part of his comrades, but told of one case which he considered typical of the Canadians.

Typical Canadian Heroism.

"A private who had been shot through the neck was bleeding terribly," said the lieutenant. "He started for the rear for medical attention and on his way back passed a colonel who was lying on his side, shot through the shoulder. Without a moment's hesitation the wounded private, weak from loss of blood and in a bad condition himself, stooped over and managed to get the colonel on his back. He staggered along with him until they reached the rear and were able to have some medical treatment. Both were in a pretty bad state. It goes to show the kind of men who were engaged in that awful struggle. Their conduct was simply wonderful. Cool, courageous fellows they were equal to any emergency."

Lieut. McKinley, who joined with the Halton Rifles, expects to return to the front about August 1. He stated that there were about six or eight officers on the Megantic, but very few passengers. So far as he knows he was the only Toronto man aboard the steamer.

Messrs. Henderson and Company's monthly circular issued from Colombo, Ceylon, states: "A feature of the market was the record prices paid for flavory teas. The oldest members of the tea trade in Ceylon could not remember such high prices being realized before." The Salada Tea Company have determined that no matter to what prices tea goes, the public will get exactly the same quality in their packets. They will of course, be compelled to charge the enhanced prices that teas fetch, but they will keep to their standard of quality.

"Talk about your long hours. I know a couple of hands in a factory that never stop, day or night, all the year round." "Impossible! Where?" "On the factory clock."

A Systematic Campaign Urged By Grand Jury

Presentment to His Honour Judge Huycke Contains Some Pointed Remarks Concerning "Native Canadians"—Reference to Major Bennett and Others

HIS HONOUR'S REPLY

The Grand Jury's presentment to the June sitting of the County Court over which His Honour Judge Huycke is presiding, was made this morning shortly after the opening of the Court. The report is a little more voluminous than usual and deals with each public institution in detail. It closes with a reference to the crisis through which the Empire is passing and intimates that Canada as a nation, has not yet learned to realize the urgency of the call for men and that the appeal has not been adequately met by those who owe the Empire this service. The report contains the following:

To His Honour, Judge Huycke—

We the members of the Grand Jury of the General Sessions of the Peace for the County of Peterborough beg to submit the following report:

We have already reported on and returned to your Honour the indictments which you submitted to us.

The Grand Jurors appreciating their responsibilities in the matter of visits to public institutions as set forth in the charge made to them by your Honour were desirous of carrying out their duties in the matter of these visits and while they appreciate the honour done them in selecting them for this service the jurors are unanimously of the opinion that more fitting conveyances should be provided by the authorities for the making of these visits—such conveyances would not only be more creditable but also more economical.

Our report of visits made is as follows:

House of Refuge.

We found the building and management of this institution most satisfactory and cannot recommend any alterations of benefit except in the matter of the men's lavatory on the entrance floor, which should be made more attractive to the public view. This could be done at small expense and would add considerably to the appearance of the institution.

House of Providence.

The appointments of this institution are most excellent and the Sisters who undertake, free of charge, the management, are deserving of the highest recommendation.

The St. Joseph's and Nicholls Hospitals.

These are excellently equipped in every particular and the management of both institutions are to be congratulated on the efficiency of the staffs and assistants.

The Protestant Home.

This institution is also to be commended for the equipment and management which in our estimation is very superior, and the ladies of Peterborough who give their services as management council without remuneration, are to be sincerely thanked and commended for the excellent and necessary philanthropic work which they are accomplishing.

The Gaol.

The institution we found in excellent condition. The prisoners confined in it at present are few, numbering but nine, among whom are non committed for any but minor offences. The jailer, Mr. Nesbitt, seems most painstaking in the discharge of his duties.

Court House.

Referring only to the outer appearance of this building which occupies one of the best and most beautiful locations within the limits of the City of Peterborough, it is sadly, in fact, altogether out of harmony and keeping with its surroundings. Set as it is to form the background of Victoria Park its unsightly appearance sadly mars the vista. The whole front of this building in our estimation requires renovating. The dilapidated old board fence to the north of the building should be removed and replaced with a stone wall which would be more in keeping with the main building. The slope outside the fence should be thoroughly cleared of burdocks and other weeds and kept properly sodded.

Your Honour referred in fitting terms to the terrible crisis that our Empire is passing through, unprecedented in the pages of the world's history. We quite agree with your Honours' remarks and to the strong terms you used in your reference to it for we feel that our country of Canada has only commenced to realize what the outcome of this war may mean to us, for if there was a time that Canada should recognise and act up to her duty it is at the present time. The call for men is heard throughout the length and breadth of our whole Empire. We in Peterborough in common with all Canada have responded in a measure yet so little have our own people realized the urgency of the call for men that the appeal has not been at all adequately met by those who owe the Empire this service. True we have furnished our quota in numbers from this city, yet it is to be regretted that of those enlisting here, comparatively few have been of Canadian birth. This we feel sure is occasioned not by any weakness or cowardice on the part of our native born but by the fact that as yet the full realization of the dire need of Canada and the Empire has not forced itself on their intelligence. That the Canadian-born are equal in courage and endurance to the best has been amply proved by our handful of native Canadians—some of them citizens of Peterborough, who so gallantly fought and willingly died on the fields of Langemarck and other battle fields for the freedom of the nation and the glory of the Empire. We feel certain that our Canadian youth will rise to the occasion and show that we as Canadians realise our duty to defend our Empire. You refer, sir, to the hundreds of our young men who can be seen on the streets at night frequenting all places of amusements. We are of the opinion that a systematic campaign should be inaugurated in order to imprint on the minds and hearts of these the serious obligations and duties resting upon all in this time of crisis. Every young man cannot go, some are not physically fit, others have obligations to dependents that prevent their going. As Mr. Justice Riddell said recently: "If a man's decision not to go to the war is based upon the thought that by remaining at home he may make more money for himself, do more good to himself, he is as bad as the coward, he is a shirk and will richly earn the contempt he is sure to meet. He will not be able to look in the face of the returning heroes in khaki." We wish to place on record our high appreciation of the noble sacrifice made by Major George Bennett and other members from this district in yielding up their lives for the cause of freedom and express our deep sympathy with the sorrowing relatives of these brave men.

We hope that in due course and at the proper time a fitting memorial will be erected in this city to commemorate the noble conduct of the brave men who have already fallen and those who may yet fall to secure the cause of freedom.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

His Honour's Remarks.

His Honour Judge Huycke in dismissing the Grand Jury said that he was pleased to note they had so much to commend and so little to condemn. He concurred in the opinion of the jury that the grounds surrounding the House of Refuge might be made more attractive at small expense. He also regretted that the County Council had so far ignored previous recommendations of Grand Juries respecting the gaol, the appearance of which would be considerably improved by the removal of the old board fence at the north side and the eradication of the burdocks referred to in the report. He knew of few, if any, court houses that were better situated. He agreed with the Grand Jury that the officials of the County Gaol were most considerate and attended strictly to their duties.

In referring to the jury's remarks concerning nativity of the men enlisting for overseas service, His Honour said: "You point out what is true, particularly with the first contingent. Subsequent contingents have shown a higher percentage of men of Canadian birth. I do not think that Canadians are cowards, but it needs to be impressed upon them that their most supreme duty is to their homeland, not only in Canada, but across the seas. This war is a war between two ideas or ideals. One ideal represents the centralisation of autocracy and despotism, and the other ideal is one of liberty. We are confident that the issue will be in our favour, but we cannot hope for much if, as I said the other day, we continued to fight with one hand. Those who cannot go can perform a service at home."

His Honour concluded by thanking the Jury for their services and hoped that their recommendations would receive the consideration of the proper authorities.

NEW YORK, June 8.—It is the spirit of the new France which appears in the letter from a private soldier of the French army, a veritable philosopher of the trenches, which has just been received in this city by Mr. Frederic R. Coudert. Under the stress of war, it is written with a martial swing which shows how men can work and suffer and be resolute through it all!

"Nothing is wanting to us but a little sun," he writes, "but it is overcast about two-thirds of the time. And our trenches insist upon remaining full of water. Fortunately everybody is well equipped, so that it is rather now a question of morale, for one gets accustomed to a great deal which in normal times might well be called privations. So you see we hardly merit the high praise which everybody is bestowing upon us. Man is in fact an animal who adapts himself. How many things appeared impossible ten months ago which to-day every one does quite as a matter of course! This war will have taught us that, after all, life itself is very simple and that discipline and method are very necessary to it, that existence has both value and interest.

"War, indeed, will have impressed upon us that life is not the haphazard race which we had come to believe that it was, and which we were all running more or less, but that it is necessary to take time to love one another and to say so, and that it is better to scratch the surface of things. Just as only those who are ill understand the blessings of health, so only the eye that is closed can appreciate all the glories of the day. And do we ever know in the morning of our awakening what eyelids of the living at the rising of the sun will at twilight be sealed for ever? Thus more or less clearly, more or less deeply, every one of us here in the trenches considers within himself what fate has in store for us and for our dear land of France. Simple souls in daily contact with whom one lives at times speak those words which open great windows on their inner lives and show what has been wrought within the souls of men.

"A new France is being made in these trenches, and those who will return from them will certainly have a stronger and more disciplined sense of what life holds for mankind. How could those who remain regret their sacrifice if, at last, it be the means of gaining so much for their country and for the world!"

Prince and Wife Parted by the War

LONDON, June 9.—The pronounced pro-Germanism of the Prince Christian has led to the Prince and Princess entering into a deed of separation.

The Prince since the outbreak of the war has openly expressed his sympathies in public and private with his native country, and his son, Prince Albert, of course, is fighting on the German side.

The Princess, who is a daughter of Queen Victoria, and whose sympathies are entirely with England, has found her position almost intolerable for some time past owing to the pro-Germanism of the Prince.

Her Royal Highness was on the original committee chosen by Queen Mary in connection with the management of Queen Mary's found, but it was intimated to Queen Mary that every other lady asked to serve on it would resign if the Princess remained on it and Her Royal Highness therefore retired from it.

Apart from the social ostracism which the Princess has been subjected to on account of her husband's pro-Germanism, Her Royal Highness for the same reason found herself the object of a certain suspicion still more intolerable in official quarters. Most of her correspondence is censored, her movements are constantly shadowed and she has been from time to time prohibited from going beyond the five-mile limit from London. The Prince to these restrictions and inconveniences is quite indifferent, but by the Princess they are strongly resented. To end them, at least in part, the Princess has entered into a private deed of separation from the Prince.

The King consented to this course last week. The Prince will occupy Cumberland Lodge at Windsor and the Princess will be provided with room at St. James' Palace by the King. After the war the Prince will go back to Germany and the Princess will continue to live in England.

The Princess has an annuity of 6,000 pounds per annum settled on her by the State, at her marriage. This is the whole income at present of the Christian household, as the Prince cannot receive any income from his German estate, which amounts to about 4,000 pounds per annum, until the war is over. The King has therefore agreed to advance him 1,000 pounds per annum until then and the Princess will allow him another 1,000 pounds per annum.

Local Red Cross Will Send $550 To Headquarters

Interesting Meeting of the Peterboro' Branch Held Yesterday

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Red Cross Society, was held at the Y. W. C. A. on Wednesday afternoon. The President occupied the chair. Miss Peacock of the Publicity Committee, reported much interest aroused at a large meeting at Warsaw and a large parcel of supplies from Hall's Glen.

Parcels have been received from the following and forwarded to headquarters: Peterborough Progressive Club, 403 surgical dressings, valued at $40.

"Doctors' wives," bale valued at $50.00.

St. John's Women's Bible Class, a bale valued at $40.

The Treasurer reported receipts from Tag Day, with several small donations since, as $1,225.23.

One box, No. 10, is still out; it is hoped it will be sent in at once.

It was decided to send $550 to Headquarters, this month, fifty dollars of this amount having been given to endow a cot at Cliveden Hospital.

The Branch has affiliated with the Local Council of Women and hope all those who are in any way desirous to learn about Red Cross work will go and hear Mrs. Plumptre, who will speak on the work of the Red Cross Society at the public meeting to be held on Tuesday, June 15th, in the Y.W.C.A. gymnasium.

A most interesting letter was read from Major B., with the first contingen at the front, who gave a vivid description of the battle of Langemarck.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

British Birth Rate Lower

LONDON, June 10.—Disclosures in the Registrar General's returns on births and deaths in Greater London show the number of births every week is between 400 and 500 below the average for corresponding weeks in the last five years, allowing for the growth of population. There also is an increase in infant mortality. Children for the last thirteen weeks have been dying in London at a rate of 200 a week in excess of the number of the corresponding weeks last year.

Moreover, this is not peculiar to London, Returns dealing with ninety-five other great towns in England and Wales show that increased mortality among children is general throughout the country.

Much of this heavy toll of children is directly traceable to the war. In Mageh there was a virulent outbreak of measels, which has not yet run its course. Infants are getting less care. There are fewer doctors and nurses, and they are very much over worked.

MISS S. B. McEWEN.

On Friday evening, May 28, 1915, there came a visitor to the Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, and on departing carried that spirit of Miss S. B. McEwen to her eternal home.

Miss McEwen was the daughter of the late Rev. John McEwen, so well and so favourably known in Ontario as a Sabbath school worker. She was a noble type of womanhood, possessed of rare qualities of mind and heart.

During her residence in the manse, Lakefield, she did much to advance and to encourage all Christian work, yet her particular interest centred in the work of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, of which society her mother was an efficient and valued Presbyterial president and she a life member.

Always frail, she took up life's duties one by one as they came to her, and worked them out in a cheerful, faithful, loving, optimistic spirit. The bright and the humorous side of life constantly appealed to her. No unworthy motive, no unworthy thought found lodgment or expression in her presence.

She had a particular faculty of calling out the best that was in one. Her life was an inspiration to all with whom she came in contact. She had a rare and remarkable faculty of making friends and what is more rare and more remarkable of retaining these friends. A favourite expression was: "A faithful friends is the best boon of heaven to mortal given." Her heart's desire was: "God make me worthy of my friends." Her friends, her looks, her many and varied interests in life made her happiness.

During the past three years she had her home in Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough. Here physicians, nurses, patients and friends vied with one another in ministring to her comfort. This she amply repaid by her love, her brightness, her kindness, her unvarying cheerfulness, her interest in other patients and her interest in life in general. She fulfilled to the letter the Scripture injunction, "Rejoice with those who do rejoice and weep with those who weep."

In her room—which was always fragrant with bud and bloom — and which resembled a home, rather than an invalid's room, resorted weary ones to be rested, discouraged ones to be encouraged, burdened ones to lay their burdens down, happy ones to share their happiness. Every bright, interesting fact in connection with the life and work was not fully enjoyed until shared with Miss McEwen.

When strong enough to visit other patients, her tact, her courtesy, her unwavering faith, her trust in God's presence and goodness, was a benediction to many a sorrowing, heavy-laden one.

Her loving, sympathetic nature responded to the call to help provide comforts for our soldiers. She plied the knitting needles as skillfully, as faithfully, and as energetically as her strength permitted. Her unfinished knitting must go out to other hands to finish. It is no too much to say of Miss McEwen that no nobler woman ever trod this earth. She had a creed and she lived it.

"I would be pure for there are those who trust me,
I would be true for there are those who care,
I would be strong for there is much to suffer,
I would be brave, for there is much to dare.

I would be friend of all—the foe—the friendless,
I would be giving and forget the gift
I would be humble for I know my weakness.
I would look up, and laugh, and love, and lift.

Land Forces Are Also Making an Attack---German Zeppelin Sinks Two Small Fishing Boats.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

ATHENS, June 11.—The Anglo-French fleet at the Dardanelles has been bombarding the Turkish forts almost without cessation for forty-eight hours. Mytlene despatches to-day said an attack by the Allied landing forces on the Gallipoli Peninsula is being made simultaneously, but that the result of the action is in doubt.

SANK TWO FISHING BOATS.

LONDON, June 11.—The German Zeppelin which was reported yesterday by scout ships, bombarded and sank two small English fishing boats, the "Walfate" and "Laurestina," in the North Sea off the coast of Holland. The crews were rescued by a Dutch steamer. The Zeppelin avoided the British coast.

DOESN'T MATTER TO BRITAIN.

LONDON, June 11.—During the months of January, February, March, and April of this year, British ports show the following returns, notwithstanding submarine blockades: Imports, 281,676,312 pounds sterling; exports, 116,770,328; re-exports, 31,729,362. This brings British trade for four months to over two billion dollars, although the chief European customers were involved in war. The returns show an increase of $115,000,000 over the corresponding period of last year.

CHOLERA SMITES VIENNA.

GENEVA, Switzerland, June 10.—News has reached Geneva by way of Innsbruck and Buchs, Switzerland, which tends to confirm previous reports that cholera has broken out in Vienna. One report refers to twenty-six cases, and another to forty-six cases of this disease in the Austrian capital. Several deaths have been reported.

The disease is believed to have been brought to Vienna from Galicia by wounded soldiers. The authorities are taking all precautions to prevent its spread. A cholera quarantine camp is being hastily constructed outside the city.

Hero Describes How He Destroyed the Zeppelin

LONDON, June 10.—The Daily News has the following from Northern France:

A conference on the staff of a northern France journal, Le Telegramme, had the good fortune yesterday to meet Lieutenant Warneford, the navy aviator, after his return safe and sound from his splendid hawking of the talk. Warneford was delightfully modest, and did not want to say much about his exploit, which he declared just happened to come his way in "the fortune of war."

A most charming, very young gentleman in this Sub-Lieut. Warneford, says the journalist in a brief pen picture of the hero. He was most prudently reserved and spoke as men of action speak, with no wealth of words. He said that three of them, Lieut. J. P. Wilson, J. S. Mills and himself, set off the night before upon an air reconnaissance. They started in the dark, and only their compasses to guide them. At about half-past three in the morning they found themselves in the vicinity of the north of Brussels. Coming down a little lower they were able to distinguish a big Zeppelin hangar at Evere.

A Hangar Destroyed.

"My companions, Wilson and Mills," said Warneford, "then rose a little higher until they were exactly over the hangar, then one after the other they let fly with their bombs. Several found their mark and I saw a long flame shoot out from the hangar, jetting up in the air to a great height, but whether there was a Zeppelin inside or not I could not say. Having thrown three bombs my companions continued their flight, turning high in the air and making for their own camp.

"I reserved myself and my ammunition for futher adventures. I proceeded on my journey at an increased height. It was just 3 o'clock in the morning when all of a sudden I perceived on the horizon about midway between Ghent and Brussels, a Zeppelin flying fast at a height of about 6,000 feet. I immediately flew towards it and when I was almost over the monster I descended about fifteen metres and flung six bombs at it. The sixth struck the envelope of the ship fair and square in the middle.

"There was instantly a terrible explosion and displacement of air around about me so great that a tornado seemed to have been produced. My machine tossed upward and then flung absolutely upside down. I was forced to loop-the-loop in spite of myself. I thought for a moment that the end of everything had come. In the whirl I had the pleasure of seeing my victim falling to earth in a cloud of flames and smoke. Then by some miracle my machine righted herself and I came to earth in the enemy's country. I was not long on the ground, you may be sure. I speedily put myself and my machine into working order once again. Then I set the engine going, but now," continued the young man, with a quick little smile, "I can say no more for here is my lunch and I am hungry."

As stated elsewhere in this issue of The Globe, Sub-Lieut. Warneford received yesterday the Legion of Honour decoration from France. He received a Victoria Cross from Great Britain on Monday.

GEN. MacKENSEN'S ARMY DEFEATED----DRIVEN BACK FOUR MILES

Russians Smashed MacKensen's Front in a Twelve Hour Battle Near Moscika---Russian Armies Are Now On the Offensive.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PETROGRAD, June 11.—General Mackensen's army, marching on Lemberg from the west, has been defeated with heavy losses, and driven back nearly four miles in the direction of Przemysl. The Russians smashed Mackensen's front in a twelve-hour battle near Moscika.

A second Austro-German army, advancing on Lemberg from the south-east has been halted and driven back behind the Stanislau-Lemberg railway, along the left bank of the Dniester. In the fighting north of Stry, the Russians have taken 2,000 prisoners and eight machine guns.

At practically all points our armies are now either on offensive or maintaining their positions, said an official statement from the War Office.

The German losses in the fighting along the Przemysl-Lemberg railway are extremely heavy. Military men here to-day were enthusiastic over the check administered to the Austro-Germans marching on Lemberg, and declared the Russians will have ample time to reinforce their armies guarding the front. The fighting along the Dniester River, south of Lemberg, was equally fierce, though smaller forces were engaged.

General Von Linsingen, Austro-German commander, in person witnessed the defeat of a body of his troops that crossed the Dniester at Zaravno.

Saw Mill Employee Seeking $1,500 For Injury to Right Hand

HOW ACCIDENT OCCURRED

Had the Workmen's Compensation Act been in force on December 19th, 1914, John E. Clark of Havelock and Campbellford, would not have been forced to sue for $1,500 damages through the County Court from his late employers, Spencer Brothers of Havelock, in whose lumber mill the power of his right hand was seriously impaired by a circular saw.

Albert and Ernest Spencer are proprietors of a small lumber and shingle mill, situated a mile north of Havelock. While gathering shingles off the floor beside the big saw which was in motion, Clark pushed back a sliding table with his left hand, and, apparently to balance himself, placed his right hand against a spring board in front of the saw's teeth. A deep cut across the "heel" of his hand severing important nerves, was the result.

F. D. Kerr represented Clark, and G. N. Gordon appeared for the Spencer Brothers.

Clark's Evidence.

Under examination by Mr. F. D. Kerr, Clark told his story of the accident. He resides, at present in Campbellford, and was engaged as a labourer by them on August 17, and had performed many different kinds of work about the mill.

Going home at noon on December 19th Alfred Spencer told him to fire up and also clean up in the shingle mill, on the lower floor. On returning he packed three bunches of shingles and about another bunch remained on the floor. The only light that entered this room was through the cracks of the wooden wall of the building. Further obstruction to the light was offered by piles of lumber, etc., as a result of which there was very little light where witness was working. At one side of the room was a circular saw, three feet in diameter, which was so connected to the shafting that it was running all the time. That is, there was no attachment to cut off the power when he saw was not required.

About 3.30 that afternoon, while he was cleaning up this room he was picking up second grade shingles to pack them. They were on the floor, some near the saw. Witness was on his knees at work.

Some shingles had dropped under a sliding table. He reached toward it with his left hand, apparently to retain his balance, and thrust out his left hand against a spring board. There was only a light spring behind this board which slowed is hand to press against the saw.

Witness exhibited his right hand, which bears a long scar across the heel of is palm. Tendons were cut, destroying the power of naturally moving the finger joints nearest the palm. The sense of touch was destroyed on the front and on almost half the back of the hand and fingers by the severance of nerves.

To Mr. Gordon.

Cross examined by Mr. Gordon, Clark recounted recent employments, with Findlays, of Norwood, also as a livery stable hand, and as an employee of a New Ontario pulp mill.

Witness said he had no one to depend upon him. He first said he was not married and then added that he would not swear to it.

Mr. Kerr objected that this was irrelevant evidence.

Mr. Gordon replied that he had stumbled upon something which aroused his curiosity. However, he did not press the question.

Witness had not worked since December 19th.

Spencer Brothers asked me to come back for a few days in January.

I said I could not do any work.

Witness admitted that he might be able to drive a team. He could not work a "joiner." He was living with his brother who told him not to hurry, until his hand was fully recovered. Witness said he would accept a position to team for any and will accept Sencers'.

When Offer Was Made.

To Mr. Kerr he said that a few days after the notice of the law suit they "came across" with an offer of work for a few days. It was not until they faced a law suit that they approached him.

He had not worked since his hand was injured for the reason that work was scarce even for a man with two hands. Witness admitted that had he stood up to push the sliding table he would have been in a better position to see the saw. As it was, while kneeling, he could see it behind the "spring board."

"Then why did you put your hand against the board?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"I didn't think about the spring board."

Dr. Kindred.

Dr. Kindred of Havelock, Warden of the County, described Clark's injury. The grasping power of the hand was destroyed beyond repair, although light work could be performed.

The Court adjourned at 5.40 p.m.

Jurymen Challenged.

The Jury on this case consists of J. Worboy, H. Mowry, D. M. Minnicola, W. A. Robertson, W. A. Thompson, Jas. Robertson, P. McMillan, Albert Nicholls R. W. Wilson, Fred Board, Wm. Cavanagh and Thomas Stevenson.

In the selection of the Jury Mr. Kerr challenged four of the petit jurors called, and Mr. Gordon turned back three. Evidently the compensation features of the case actuated the opposing counsel in the selections.

Girl Accused of Stealing Ten Cents Ends Life

NEW YORK, June 11.—Unable to stand the stigma of a theft accusation, Margaret O'Toole, fourteen years old, drank poison and killed herself in Paterson, N.J., late Tuesday afternoon.

Soon after Margaret returned from school for her home at No. 143 Jackson street her sister, Miss Ella O'Toole, nineteen, accused her of taking ten cents from a purse. The girl was so horrified by the accusation that she fled from the house and for two hours walked the streets.

At half-past five o'clock she purchased five cents worth of poison in a drug store in Main street. From there she walked to St. Joseph's Hospital. On the steps of that institution she drank poison and she ran into the hospital calling to the sisters that she had swallowed acid.

While physicians were working on her, Margaret said she never before had been accused of theft and that she could not live with such an accusation hanging over her. She died half an hour after entering the hospital.

Her sister said later that she did not mean to accuse Margaret of taking the tencents, but believed that by frightening her she could learn what had become of it.

Thin People Can Increase Weight

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it turns the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten, into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive.

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

He had thrown himself away from the driver with his left leg bent and his left elbow restin' on his knee. His right leg was straight and his heel pointed at the driver. His hand rested on his hip, and all of his vitals were protected.

Tom Smith had things so much his own way that I was beginnin' to feel like an intruder when I happened to notice Big Jeff crowlin' toward the gun he had dropped, and I shot him through the arm. Tom Smith whirled on me and snapped his gun, but it was empty, and while his left hand was gettin' a fresh one off his hip, I spoke to him gentle and he recognized me.

Big Jeff, however, was still feverish. He reached for his gun with his left hand and I kicked him in the forehead so enthusiastic that he straightened up, then I banged him on the temple with the barrel of my forty-five, and he drowsed off.

Just at that minute the riders from the west came into sight around the curve, and I grabbed Big Jeff by the collar and dragged him inside. "Fetch in the girl, Tom Smith," sez I, and he helped her to her feet, put an arm about her waist, and led her inside. While I was waitin' to bang the door shut and slam in the bar, I had a little sour grin all to myself at the way Fate divided things up: Tom Smith paid his attentions to the girl, me to the mule; Tom Smith put his arm about her waist, I dragged in Big Jeff by the collar.

By the time I had barred the door, and thrown Big Jeff into his bunk, the four men on hoss-back had rode up, and had halted at a little distance lookin' at the tired broncbos who were still asleep, and at the body of the driver which had been plumb ruined. "Do you know those fellers?" sez I to Tom Smith.

"What breed are they" sez I.

"Yaller and mean," sez he. "They took me for a harmless pigeon unless I had drink in me, and have rawhided me constant."

"Well," sez I with a grin, "havin' a gel about does you full as much good as havin' a drink. Do these fellers know about her?"

"I reckon they do," sez he.

Just then one of them hailed the shack to know what the trouble was. "Tell 'em you had to settle things with Big Jeff," sez I, "and that you'd be obliged if they'd put some fresh ponies to that buckboard and give you a start."

Tom Smith told it to 'em; but they only scoffed at him mirthful, and told him if Big Jeff was out of the way they were willin' to play poker with him for the gel, but that was the best they had to offer. The gel's eyes tightened at this, but after lookin' at me and Tom Smith, they loosened up again.

"Have you any folks out this way, Miss?" sez I.

"My father," sez she in a low tone. "He is miles and miles from here in a small cabin on the Canadian River. We expected to meet my brother there, but a Mexican brought word that my brother was injured and could not come to us. My father has been weak for some time, and was not able to make the journey; but he said if I would not go he would, and the Mexican said it was not more than a half day's journey. He promised to stay and care for my father."

I thought rapid and after seein' my way clear, I sez: "Can you ride, Miss?"

"Not very well," sez she, "but I'm willin' to do my best."

"I noted a saddled bay with a blazed face in the corral as I came in," sez I. "Whose might it be?"

"It's Big Jeff's and a good one," sez Smith. "It's gentle enough for the lady to ride if we could just get to it."

"Your saddle's down there, too, I reckon," sez I.

"Yes, but I shus miss my first three throws and by that time the ponies 'd be millin' around the corral and these fellers 'd know what we were up to."

"As a rule," sez I, "I can lay my rope over a pony's neck without much fuss, and what if they do find out what we're up to? I'd just about as soon chance those four in the open as stay in here much longer. Big Jeff is beginnin' to stir and grunt, and he'll need some more tendin' to purty soon, himself. I'll slip out this window behind and get things ready and then come back for you."

"The's a draw from the south that leads right back o' this house," sez Tom Smith, "and if you could get the hosses to the top o' that, I believe we could get away without any fuss."

"Stir 'em up every once in awhile," sez I, "and you'd better tie Jeff's hands while you're restin'. I'll leave you the shot gun and my blessin'."

The buffalo gun was a short-barrelled Sharps with a saddle scabbard, and I took it along in case it might be useful, and also a few cartridges in my vest gun. While Tom Smith was dickerin' with the four fellers in front, I opened the shutter to the back window and got out without a bit o' noise and the gel fastened it behind me.

I dropped the rope from Tom Smith's saddle over a buckskin pony that looked about the best in the corral, and had the saddle on him in a jiffy. Then I shortened the stirrups on the other saddle by cutin' the thongs and puttin' in some new ones that I noticed on the top rail of the corral. I'd purt nigh sooner be shot at than to fuss with a stirrup when I'm in a nervous hurry. Then I put the rope around Big Jeff's hoss and takin' the two outside the corral, I got on the buckskin as quiet as I could and overlooked a few playful pranks he started to entertain me with. When I got to Bradin's hoss I hung the buffalo gun on my own saddle and started back for the draw which I found without bother.

After plantin' the hosses, I stole down the draw and had to scratch on the shutter some time before the gel would open it, and then Tom Smith stood ready with his shotgun, for he had figgered it would take me just about twice as long. Tom Smith had tied Big Jeff purty nifty, and I slipped in an Injun gag as we didn't care for any of his remarks if he did come to. The four fellers had got off their hosses and were squattin' about sixty feet from the door, callin' out silly invitations from time to time.

"Tell 'em that Big Jeff is comin' to, and they don't need to wait any longer," sez I.

Tom Smith he told it to 'em, but they laughed right out and said they reckoned they'd stick around and see what he had to say. We were all ready to start when the thought struck me that the girl couldn't nowise be comfortable without her baggage, so I told Tom Smith to step right out and get it. The mustangs hadn't moved out of their tracks since they'd stopped.

I knew that little Barbie would put the whole Diamond Dot in a mess if one of her doll dresses got mislaid, so I sez to the girl: "Are you sure there's nothin' in that hand grip that you set store by, Miss?"

"One or two little keepsakes," said she winkin' her eyes; "but I don't want you to risk anything extra on my account."

Tom Smith stepped out, grabbed the bag, and stepped in again, just like one, two, three. "That's right, have her dress up in honour of the occasion," yelled one of the men.

They didn't know that I was there at all as the ponies had hid me when I was tendin' to Big Jeff. Well, we slipped out of the window, as quiet as mice and got to the hosses without hearin' anything suspicious, me carryin' the shotgun and Tom Smith the hand grip. The gel was wearin' a stiff cloth hat with a little plume in it, and it was a mighty cute trick, but noticeable. "Do you set much store by that hat, Miss?" sez I.

"Why?" sez she.

"'Cause if you was to turn it down all around, and tie it on with a cloth of some kind, you wouldn't be so easy recognised next time by those who might happen to see you this time," sez I: "and besides it wouldn't be all the time blowin' off."

Was Troubled With Choking Spells and Shortness of Breath.

When the heart becomes affected, there comes a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, and dizziness and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

Many men and women drag along with weary step, and become worn out and haggard, when otherwise they could be strong and healthy if they would only pay some attention to the first signs of heart or nerve trouble. On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be given a fair trial and you will find that they will soon correct both these orgins.

Mr. James Leard, Tryon, P.E.I., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had choking spells, and was troubled with weakness of the heart and shortness of breath. I tried three doctors but they all failed. A neighbor recommended me to try your pills, so I got a box and they helped me so much I have taken six boxes. I highly recommend them to all who are troubled with their heart and nerves. I was not able to do any work for over two years; now I can do quite a bit."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Word "Despatch."

It was Dr. Johnson who was largely responsible for the bad spelling of the word "despatch." Although the mistake never occurred in his letters and for 225 years the word had been written correctly, it appeared in his dictionary as "despatch." Until 1820, however, the wrong spelling did not become general. Then people began to look upon Johnson's work as a standard one, and British government departments and various newspapers changed the proper "dispatch" to "despatch."

On the Wrong Side.

A temperance missionary in Glasgow left a few tracts with a young woman one morning. Calling at the same house a few days after, he was rather disconcerted to find the tracts doing duty as curl papers on the head of the damsel to whom he had given them. "Weel, my lassie," he remarked, "I see ye have used the tracts I left wi' ye, but," he added in time to turn confusion into merriment, "ye ha' putten them outside instead of inside your head."

Acres and Bible Letters.

It has sometimes been stated that there are more acres in Yorkshire than there are letters in the Bible. A person hearing the statement for the first time is inclined to doubt it, but it is true, all the same. Authorities differ as to the exact acreage of the county, one giving it as 3,032,046 and another as 3,771,343. But the number of letters in the Bible is said to be 3,566,480, so the acres beat the letters, with something to spare. — London Notes and Queries.

An Odd Gypsy Custom.

In Hungary when the question of the baby's future comes up for discussion among the gypsies there is no time wasted in argument. A blanket is held by the four corners, and the baby is thrown into the air. If it comes down on its little stomach it is a sign that it is going to be a musician; if it falls on its back it is to be a thief, and the education of the child is begun as soon as possible in one of these two time honored professions.—Exchange.

From the Days of Abraham.

Damascus has strong claims to be considered the oldest city in the world. The place remains very much what it was before the days of the patriarch Abraham—an island of verdure set in the Syrian desert—and has martial and sacred associations extending through thirty centuries. According to Josephus, Damascus was founded by Uz, the son of Aram and grandson of Shem. It is first mentioned in Scripture in Genesis xv, 2, in connection with Abraham, whose steward was a native of that place.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Forged Deeds.

WHEN the train pulled into Los Angeles the next morning John Dorr's party got off and John left Ruth with Tom Kane while he went to engage an automobile to take them to Beverly Hills, a suburb recommended by Everett as quiet and restorative for shattered nerves.

As they stood there Wilkerson, Mrs. Darnell and Estelle also got off the train, still disguised, and were hurrying away when Wilkerson observed Ruth and called Jean's attention to her.

For an instant she was nonplussed. Then she said in a low tone: "So much the better. We can keep an eye out on them."

"I must find out where they are going to," Wilkerson returned. "I don't like the looks of it."

He soon came back with word that they had ordered the car to take them to Beverly Hills.

After some inquiry Wilkerson found the address of a hotel that seemed to answer their requirements, and they were soon on their way thither in a taxi. Within an hour the deft Estelle had installed herself and her mistress in a comfortable suit. Wilkerson took a room near by. Then came the question of their disguises.

"There is no need of wearing them any longer," Wilkerson stated. "It need be we can put them on again."

Mrs. Darnell laughed scornfully. "Yes, and all the hotel people saw us come in with our disguises on. What will they think if they see entirely different people occupying these rooms?"

Wilkerson had already started to remove his makeup. Now he paused. But his reckless nature got the better of him, and he laughed at her fears. So they both were soon their real selves and sat down to a hearty breakfast in Mrs. Darnell's rooms.

This ended, Jean took out the papers and spent an hour going over them carefully. Wilkerson smoked nervously, but did not interrupt her. When she laid the documents down he saw a queer glitter in her tawny eyes.

"So it has come to the old game, eh?" she said in a low voice. "I thought you had had enough of that."

"Enough of what?" he demanded quickly.

She smiled maliciously. She formed the word slowly and precisely: "Forgery!"

His dark face grew pallid, and his eyes flashed ominously. "I did it for you that time—and no thanks! But this is all right. These deeds are genuine."

"They merely assure the property to Thomas Gallon and his heirs and assigns. When you found Tom Gallon at last and had him ready to do anything you wanted just as the price of your silence I suppose it didn't occur to you to have him deed over the 'Master Key' mine to you, did it?"

"He wouldn't have done it!" he burst out furiously. "He shot me once. He would have shot me again to save the mine for the girl."

"Then what good are these papers?" Gradually he perceived the drift of her speech. He looked at her for a moment dumbly, as if for instruction. But she was ruthless. He must propose the crime himself. She handed him the papers.

He stared at them and then glanced across at Jean. She was waiting. He cursed her under his breath. She had always been waiting—waiting for him to break the law, to suffer that she might have comforts and jewels and keep unimpaired that beauty that had been his downfall. But the spell worked, as it had worked before.

"I'll have to go out and buy some blank deeds," he said laboriously. "I may have to look up some other points, too, about these papers."

"Estelle," she said languidly, "you may dress my hair. I shall go to a matinee this afternoon. If Mr. Wilkerson comes, tell him I am engaged till tonight."

Life at Beverly Hills was a welcome change to Ruth after the strenuous days that had passed since she left the "Master Key" mine.

There were not many at the hotel and the most prominent figure among the guests was a tall, carefully dressed Englishman, so typically the tourist that the old cook insisted on identifying him on the register.

"I ain't seen many of the new kinds of people," he explained. "I've been out in the mine so many years that the styles in real gents has kind of escaped me. I admire to know just what kind of birds I'm roosting with."

"Who is he?" laughed Ruth, as they gazed out at the rising hills.

"He's marked down as Sir Donald Faversham, and he's from the British Isles." Tom Kane rejoined. "He is here for his health, they say. I suppose that's why he has to wear them white ankle warmers on his legs."

"Those are called spats, Tom," said John, smiling. "That eyeglass is a monocle."

"Does he see through it?" inquired Kane, with apparent anxiety. "I reckoned he was near sighted, for I spoke to him a while ago and he didn't even see me."

Oddly enough, Ruth blushed at this Sir Donald had seen her, and she had been made aware of it instantly; not that Sir Donald had been in the slightest offensive. He had merely silently testified by respectful glances his appreciation of the arrival of a very pretty woman.

John Dorr saw the blush and interpreted it rightly. He, too, had observed the Englishman's sudden interest in the lovely girl. For the first time he felt a sharp twinge of jealousy. He had so long been alone in Ruth's regard that he had not analyzed his own feelings toward her. He determined that Sir Donald Faversham should not impose his company on them.

The very next morning, when Ruth and John came out from the hotel ready for a stroll, Faversham lay in wait for the old cook and asked him for a match for his cigarette. Tom reached into his waistcoat pocket and pulled out a bunch of block matches, which he handed out with an air of doing a service to some one he could not see. Sir Donald looked at the queer matches, not knowing the peculiarities of the western sulphur article, and in spite of himself Kane had to instruct him to pull off one of the matches and strike it. When Sir Donald choked and sputtered over an inhalation of brimstone Tom looked profoundly concerned.

"They're a leetle strong for some people," he remarked pityingly.

"Strong!" answered Faversham, wiping his eyes. "I should jolly well say they were!"

Their conversation had attracted Ruth's attention, and she and John both looked back. John smiled faintly, but Ruth was indignant.

"Tom did that on purpose," she said. "I'm ashamed of him."

How it happened only Sir Donald could have told, but within three minutes he was exchanging remarks about the scenery with them all. "And there's an awfully jolly bit just this other way," he said to Ruth.

The ice was broken, and Ruth promptly accepted the implied invitation to see this specially lovely scene and Sir Donald led the way, talking with her. After an instant's hesitation John and Kane followed.

The acquaintance thus made was destined to have a great bearing on the lives of both Ruth and John. It had ripened into a genuine liking on Ruth's part before the dance that night was over.

The next morning John and Tom met Ruth walking with Sir Donald about the hotel grounds, and the young man could not help showing in both voice and manner that he was little pleased that Ruth should have so suddenly taken up with a stranger.

"Remember, she's only a girl," Tom warned him, feeling his mood. "She's been brought up in the mountains, and she's as friendly as a pup. I don't like the way the man puts petticoats on his feet and I'm used to being looked at with two eyes, but Ruth is all right. You must remember that young as she is and inexperienced, she has a good lot of common sense."

"I suppose it's foolish of me," John answered, "But I'm used to activity, and this dawdling about doesn't suit me and that makes me generally cross and unreasonable. If I only knew what Wilkerson was doing! If Everett would only come!"

The wish was fulfilled that afternoon when George Everett turned up and was warmly greeted by both Kane and Dorr. After a few words he asked for Ruth.

"You can see that she's all right," John answered quietly, pointing to her as she came up the steps with Sir Donald. Both were in tennis garb, and Ruth was delightfully flushed.

Sir Donald made a few pleasant remarks and then excused himself. His quick senses told him that Everett had come on business and that he would be one too many.

"I don't know that I have anything new and startling to tell you," Everett told Ruth in answer to her question. "I know a dozen places where I can raise the money to finance your mine, but we must have the deeds, papers and surveys first. And they're gone, I understand."

"Yes," Dorr replied bitterly, "I suppose Wilkerson has them. I ought to have been on his trail long ago."

Everett glanced at Ruth and saw the discouragement on her face. He went quickly on: "However, I've made temporary arrangements which will relieve you of all trouble for the present, Miss Gallon. I'll talk over the business details with John and Tom Kane."

She brightened and laid one hand affectionately on John's arm. "I knew everything would come out all right when John took hold," she said softly.

For two days Harry Wilkerson worked steadily and secretly in his room. At last his task was done.

"No one can ever prove that old Tom Gallon didn't draw that deed himself," Wilkerson said triumphantly. "And it makes me the owner of the 'Master Key' mine, Jean. And, once in charge, I'll make us both worth millions! Then"—

"Now, what are you going to do?" she demanded, attempting to bring the conversation back into business channels.

He bit his nails savagely. "Drake is out, all right," he told her. "You see, Kane didn't turn up to prosecute the case, and they turned him loose. What do you say to my wiring him to go and take charge of the mine while we decide just what to do? He can see what's going on and warn us."

"Dorr and the rest are still at Beverly Hills?" she inquired.

"Sure!" he said scornfully. "They're tying up with some blooded Britisher they think has money. They figure on getting him to finance them on secken. And I happen to know that Sir Donald couldn't finance anybody. We needn't worry about Dorr."

Mrs. Darnell remained in thoughtful silence awhile and then agreed to the suggestion. Wilkerson immediately wrote the message:

Charles Drake, San Francisco, Cal.:

Go to Silent Valley at once and take charge of "Master Key" mine until you hear further from me. Am warning Tubbs, engineer, to this effect.

HARRY WILKERSON.

When he had sent this and a message to Tubbs he resumed his ghastly contemplation of his forged deeds. He did not see the look of burning scorn on Jean's face as she left the room.

"Why must I always have to use fools?" she murmured bitterly. "A lovely pair—Wilkerson and Drake!"

Drake did not hesitate when he received Wilkerson's telegram. He took the next train for Silent Valley and on arrival there procured a rig and drove to the mine.

On his arrival he was dismayed to see that no work was being done. The machinery was idle, and the miners were loafing about the streets or gathered in little sullen groups. They eyed him curiously, but when he asked for Tubbs they made no comment nor stirred any questions.

Following their directions, he soon found himself on the porch of what had been John Dorr's house. He knocked, and there was shuffling of heavy boots; then the door opened, and an unshaved, bloated faced man asked him gruffly what he wanted.

Drake produced Wilkerson's wire, and instantly the engineer showed relief.

"Come in! Come in!" he said. "Come in and have a drink!"

The interior of the cabin showed that Bill Tubbs had apparently been merely camping out in his new quarters without regard to the decencies. But Drake was not squeamish after his long trip and shared a drink with his host. A few words served to put the situation before him.

"There ain't no money to pay the men; the store's closed; the cook shanty ain't running; Wilkerson is away; Dorr hasn't turned up with the money he promised, and I'm just kind of sitting on the lid while the pot boils. I'm mighty glad to see you. Maybe you can do something with these fellows. I've done my best, and I can't do any more."

The words were hardly out of his mouth before there was the noise of boots on the porch, and Tubbs smiled in sickly fashion.

"I guess they spotted you right off," he said.

"What do they want?" demanded Drake as there came a pounding on the door.

Two miners entered, and Tubbs introduced them to Drake.

"This is the new boss, boys," he said.

"Who sent you here?" was the first question asked.

"Wilkerson," responded Drake.

"Humph!"

"I'm just here to take charge temporarily," Drake went on hastily, not liking the ugly tone of the man's voice.

The other man took this information and after digesting it said, "Going to start up and pay wages?"

"I'm not acquainted with the situation yet," was the evasive reply. "I'll go over things with Mr. Tubbs tonight, and then in the morning I'll see what is to be done."

"The first thing is to give us money and food," was the curt answer. The men stamped out, leaving Drake to look at Tubbs in some dismay.

The engineer was so relieved at having some one else to bear the burden of responsibility that he refused to be worried.

"Have another drink, partner," he said familiarly, "and forget it till tomorrow."

After a very poor meal which Tubbs scraped up, the two sat down and smoked. Tubbs' tongue gradually loosened under the influence of many more drinks, and before 10 o'clock brought up a waning moon Drake knew a great deal that made him uncomfortable. He resolved to shift the burden to Wilkerson's shoulders as quickly as possible.

The next morning did not bring cheer. His head ached from the fumes of Bill Tubbs' whisky, and the chill of the mountain air was not dissipated by a cold breakfast. And before the sun had risen above the peak of the mountain the miners had approached him with questions.

The story of The Master Key will appear each Friday and Saturday in the Evening Examiner, and will be shown in Photo Play at the Tiz-It Theatre on Monday and Tuesday of each week.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be cleared, otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these altering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure constipation, biliousness, sick headache, indigestion and kidney disease.

Queer Cases of Slit.

A well known novelist was once gifted by a girl who took exception to the inadequate punishment meted out to one of his fictitious villains. She declared that as he regarded vice with so lenient an eye he must himself be at heart a reprobate and unworthy of true love and that she must request that their acquaintance cease.

An eminent lawyer in his younger days met with a similar mishap. The lady to whom he was engaged, shocking to hear that he had delivered a most skillful though futile speech in defense of an arrant rogue, wrote, saying that she must decline to know one who could thus strive specially to screen crime. In return he pleaded the exigencies of the profession, but in vain. The lady was obdurate and some afterward, by the strange irony of fate, married a man who was ultimately convicted of gross fraud, mainly through the forensic eloquence of her former lover.

The Old Roman Ballot.

The ballot was first introduced into Rome in the second century B. C. This was the real Australian ballot. The voter received a sort of wooden slate covered with wax on which the names of all the candidates were scratched. He made holes in the wax opposite those of his choice and dropped his tablet in the box. After the downfall of the Roman republic popular government took a long sleep, and there was little use for a ballot till quite modern times.

GERMAN BRUTALITY TO WAR PRISONER

White Paper Contains Splendid Story of the Kaiser and the Irish —Cruelty Charges Proven

The published accounts of the treatment accorded to British prisoners in Germany are fully borne out by official evidence contained in a Foreign Office white paper. One of the most interesting documents is a report by Major C. B. Vandeleur, of the 1st Cameronians, who escaped from Crefeld. The following is his description of his journey into Germany from Douay after his escape:

All along the line we were cursed by officers and soldiers alike at the various stations, and at Moss Bergen I was pulled out in front of the wagon by the order of the officer in charge of the station, and, after cursing me in filthy language for some ten minutes, he ordered one of his soldiers to kick me back into the wagon which he did, sending me sprawling into the filthy mess at the bottom of the wagon.

I should like to mention here that I am thoroughly conversant with German, and understood everything that was said. Only at one station on the road was any attempt made on the part of German officers to interfere, and stop their men from cursing us. Up to this time I had managed to retain my overcoat; but it was now forcibly taken from me by an officer at a few stations further on.

A Second Black Hole

Finally we arrived at Cologne. Fifty-two prisoners were in the wagon with me when we left Douay. It is difficult to indicate or give a proper idea of the indescribably wretched condition in which we were in after being starved and confined in the manner stated for three days and three nights.

As is well known, one of these wagons is considered to be able to accommodate six horses, or forty men, and this only with the doors open so as to admit of ventilation. What with the filth of the interior, the number of people confined in it, and the absence of ventilation, it seemed to recall something of what one has read of the Black Hole of Calcutta.

On reaching the German-Belgian frontier, the French prisoners were given some potato soup. The people in charge of it told us that none was for us, but that if any was left over after the French had been fed we should get what remained. This is in accordance with the general treatment of British prisoners by the Germans who always endeavor to attend to our necessities last, and to put us to as much inconvenience and ill-treatment as possible. We subsequently got a little soup and a few slices of bread among twenty-five British prisoners in the same wagon with me.

I am strongly of opinion myself that this brutal treatment of British officers and men on their way to a place of internment is deliberately arranged for by superior authority with the object of making us as miserable and despicable as possible. The French officers were treated quite differently.

Barbarous Methods

I would especially call attention to the barbarous way in which British soldiers are being treated in the various lagers by the Germans. The information given below has been obtained from the British orderlies who came to Crefeld as servants, and also from English and French medical officers who had been in the camps, which in many cases were composed of tents.

The men all had their greatcoats—and in many cases their tunics as well—and their money taken away from them, and are in great need of clothing, and particularly underclothing. The men state that they slept on straw which had not been changed for months, and was quite sodden and rotten.

I was also informed by them that the feeding arrangements for the British soldier were very bad indeed, and as the men had no money to supplement their rations they were in a half-starved condition, which their appearance corroborated.

I also wish to state that ——, who arrived at Crefeld about December, told me that all the Irishmen at his camp were collected together shortly before he left, and were harangued by the commandant, who stated that the Emperor was aware of the downtrodden state of Ireland, and now wished that the Irishmen should be placed in a separate camp, where they would be better fed and treated differently from the Englishmen. He further stated that subsequently they went in a body to the commandant, and said they did not wish to have any different treatment from their compatriots.

The American Ambassador in Berlin bears witness to the ill-treatment meted out to British prisoners.

WOLF'S LIVER TO CURE COLD

Remarkable Prescriptions Handed Down to Present Age From Days of Superstition.

Pliny, the Roman writer, prescribed various remedies for coughs and colds. These include wolf's liver, dissolved in hot wine, honey mixed with the gall of a bear and powders made from rabbit skins and bullocks' horns burned and pounded together. Another is to wrap any of one's fingers in the skin of a freshly killed dog.

Tree frogs, too, are excellent for all forms of catarrh. Place one in the mouth for a minute, and when he makes his escape he takes that cough with him. No harm is done to the frog, for coughing and croaking are all the same to him.

For a cold in the head Pliny advises a simple yet infallible remedy—three kisses on the mouth of a mule.

In the spring the cuckoo's first call of the season formerly played a great part in love divinations. A common English belief was that an unmarried person hearing a cuckoo call and immediately taking off boots and stockings would find on the great toe of the right foot a hair, whose color would be that of the poll of the destined lover.

Another idea, mentioned by Milton, and persisting till this day, was that an unmarried man or maid would remain single for just as many years as the number of the cuckoo's calls when first heard in the spring.

How many stones in the Druidical circle at Keswick, Eng.? One antiquarian says 49, but other mathematicians give different and varying estimates. A favorite number is 38.

Superstitious natives declare that the lofty circle is haunted by fairies, who bring to naught the efforts of the profane to take a census of the megaliths. "They can't be counted," says the guide, "however long you try."

HORSESHOE CURRENCY.

Curious Shaped Money in Use on the West Coast of Africa.

Among the strangest coins in the world are those used in certain out of the way towns and villages in southwest Nigeria, on the west coast of Africa, and called "manillas."

In shape they resemble a horseshoe with the two extremities flattened out like a cannelon doot. Being made of solid copper, three-eighths of an inch thick, they weigh over eight ounces each. In "face value" seven of these queer coins are equivalent to one quarter, so that a dollar's worth would be an uncomfortably heavy load.

Not only are these "manillas" used among the natives, but white traders accept them as legal tender for goods sold at the various stores. At one time this strangely shaped money had quite a circulation in certain parts of the coast, but its use is now restricted to a few bush towns and one or two of the smaller seaboard places, including Bonny, Brass and Akassa.

"Manillas" are now very difficult to obtain, and curio collectors value them not solely by reason of their scarcity, but because of the novel serviette rings they make when silver plated.—Wide World Magazine.

Young's Impromptu.

To most persons Edward Young is the author of "Night Thoughts" and nothing more, but he was also a man of the world and a shrewd and caustic wit as well as the rector of St. Mary's church at Welwyn.

It was there in the garden of the rectory that he composed some of the best impromptu verses known. He was walking with two ladies when some one summoned him to the house. His companions were agreeable, and he was in no haste to leave them. Turning as he reached the gate, he said:

Thus Adam looked when from the garden driven
And thus disputes orders sent from heaven.
Like him, I go and yet to go am loath;
Like him, I go, for angels drove us both.
Hard was his fate, but mine still more galling;
His Eve went with him, but mine stays behind.

ENGLAND'S GREATEST RAILROAD WRECK—More than 200 British soldiers who were on their way to the fighting line in France, were killed and over 250 injured, in the train disaster which occurred two miles from Gretna Green, on May 22nd. A troop train en route for the coast collided with a local passenger train and the Scottish Express dashed into the wreckage. The express is one of England's fastest trains, and the result was terrible, the wreckage becoming an inferno.. Soldiers are here shown working with the doctors and nurses.

COOKS AT THE FRONT.

Tommy's Daily Food Bill Requires Four Thousand Men.

From letters which are being received daily from the front, it is evident that whatever other comforts "Tommy" may lack, he is being well fed. "We are living like fighting-cocks," says one man in the trenches, and our French allies have nothing but praise for the wonderful manner in which the commissariat department of the British army has been organised.

When it is considered that our troops at present consume well over a hundred tons of meat a day, and that there are something like 4,000 cooks at the front, who have to be kept supplied with foodstuffs for "Tommy," it will be obvious that the work of Quartermaster-General Sir William Robertson, who, by the way, is an ex-ranker, and who is responsible for the feeding of the army, is of a particularly arduous character.

Divided into one man's share, the following table shows exactly what the British "Tommy" is allowed each day: 1 1-4 pounds of fresh meat, or 1 pound of preserved meat; 1 1-4 pounds bread; 4 ounces bacon; 2 ounces cheese; 4 ounces jam; 2 ounces sugar; 1-2 pound fresh vegetables, or 2 ounces of dried vegetables; 5-8 ounces coffee, tea, or cocoa; 2 ounces tobacco per week, and fifty cigarettes.

The troops' favorite item is jam, of which many thousands of pounds in weight is consumed daily, and the ration of bacon indicates the decrease of several hundred pigs per day. Everything is being sent to France by the ton—sugar, cheese, and even pepper and salt; and when "French's contemptible little army" is swelled to a round million men, our commissariat will be faced with the task of producing each week approximately 3,000 tons of meat, 3,000 tons of bread, 240 tons of bacon, and 420 tons of vegetables.

At one time the army bought its food through various contractors or middlemen, with the result that in the competition for orders and the desire for huge profits many scandals occurred. Nowadays, however, there is a centralization of supplies ordered by the War Office, which are then decentralised in great food depots, from which they are distributed to the various units according to their demand. Flour is bought straight from the mills, and meat from the docks, after inspection and valuation by officials; and there are tons of thousands of health officers all over the country acting in connection with the Local Government Board, inspecting supplies all day long and analyzing the food in order that "Tommy" may have the best that can be bought.

TEMPTATION.

"Fight today's temptation as it comes" is good advice. And if it seems to be only trifling fight it the harder.

DOCTOR SAID SCIATICA—RHEUMATISM—LUMBAGO

But He Could Not Help Me, and Endorsed the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Wm. Parker, 105 Cayuga street, Brantford, Ont., tells in the following letter of his remarkable experience with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills: "My doctor treated me for some time for Sciatica, Rheumatism, Lumbago, but to no purpose, for I had to lay off work. The visiting officer of Sick Benefit called to se me and advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, stating that he had been cured of the same trouble by their use. I asked the druggist about them and he recommended them highly. Not being satisfied with this, I went back to my doctor, and when he said they were good I began their use. The promptness with which they enlivened the action of the kidneys and bowels was wonderful, and it was not long before I was rid of all my trouble.

"I was so bad that I could only walk by hanging on to a chair or the wall. My wife had to lace my shoes. Only those who have had this ailment can realize the way I suffered. I am writing this letter to let people who have my trouble know of these pills. You are at liberty to use this letter, and if anyone interested will call or write to me I will give every detail."

Write to Mr. Parker, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify this statement. He will do this out of the gratitude he feels for his cure and because he realizes how difficult it is to obtain the cure of these dreadfully painful ailments.

There are so many treatments recommended for rheumatism that you naturally doubt them all. Here is an opportunity for you to verify the cure and put this great medicine to the test. It will only cost you a quarter to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They get at the very foundation of rheumatism, and by removing the poisons from the system take away the cause of pains and aches.

For figured stuffs, particularly, this model is very charming and appropriate. The style is quaint and all those quaint, old time fabrics are being revived. The printed figures are very popular this year, in crepe de Chine, pongee, cotton voile, organdie and numerous other seasonable materials, any one of which would make up prettily in this style. A very inexpensive dress it might be, too, for there is no trimming except a little lace for collar and cuffs. The skirt is made of a succession of straight gathered ruffles, set on to an underskirt, but attached one to another, the highest being the most scant and the lowest the fullest of all.

The waist is very simple, gathered at shoulder edge in front, but plain in the back. Instead of a girdle there is a ruche of the material at the waist line, put on a little high. A girdle of silk or ribbon may be worn if preferred, but the ruche effect goes well with the gathered bandings of the skirt. The sleeve is plain, with turn-back cuff in the elbow length, or a straight cuff if the sleeve is made full length. The waist closing is surplice, and as the skirt placket is at the back the left side of the skirt must be hooked to the waist. For 18-year size 5 yards of 36 inch material would be required. The pattern, No. 7,156, can be obtained in four sizes, from 14 to 20 years. Price 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

SHACKLETON'S CIGAR.

And Why the Ship's Doctor Could Not Appreciate It.

Sir Ernest Shackleton was once a very junior officer on a passenger boat, and it happened that on one voyage Lord Rothschild was a passenger. He became quite friendly with the young "fourth" and one evening gave him a magnificent cigar. Shackleton knew better than to smoke that cigar. He wrapped it up in silver paper and a silk handkerchief and kept it as a cherished memento of his friendship with the great man.

On subsequent voyages he developed a habit of exhibiting his treasure to favored lady passengers, recounting at the same time how he and Lord Rothschild had been "quite pally, you know." The chief engineer, a dour old Scotsman, thought he would teach him a lesson, so he conspired with the doctor to steal the cigar and replace it with one of a much inferior kind—in fact, with a weed that had cost him twopence at the last port. They wrapped the imposter carefully in the silver paper and in the silk handkerchief, and they bore the real Rothschild smoke to the chief's cabin.

With a five-shilling cigar in their possession for the first time in their lives they found it difficult to decide who should have the smoking of it, and so they tossed a coin. The doctor won and bore his prize off in malicious triumph to his own room, there to enjoy it in solitary state. His triumph was, however, short lived, for in five minutes he was back again with the chief, woefully countenanced and swearing volubly. The Rothschild cigar was absolutely rotted, even worse than the one they had left in its place.

Somebody had been there before them!

Dust in Your Eyes.

The expression "to throw dust in the eyes" originated in the early days of Greece, for Epaminondas, wishing to surprise the Lacedaemonians, had 1,800 cavalry advance in front, causing a great dust, which the wind blew into the faces of the enemy, blinding them to the discovery of a flank movement he was executing in order to take the coveted heights in their rear.

A Humorous Thief.

A foreign paper relates a story of a banker and municipal treasurer in an Italian town who disappeared, leaving a deficit of $100,000. The authorities proceeded to break open his strong box, which was found to contain a piece of paper inclosing 50 cents and stating that the money was for the locksmith who should be deputed to break open the safe.

Started Early.

"I'm not surprised to hear that Grayson is a rich man."

"I understand you knew him when he was a small boy."

"Yes, and at a time when the rest of us wanted to go out west and hunt real live Indians the only kind of red man he cared about were those on pennies."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

USE COCOANUT OIL FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, the less soap you use the better.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greasless), is much better than soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Helpless Man.

The late Fanny Crosby, author of "Nearer, My God, to Thee" and innumerable other hymns, was blind, but this did not prevent her from seeing straight into the hearts of men.

A Brooklyn friend of the aged hymn writer was repeating some of her epigrams.

"A Brooklyn bank clerk," she said, "had stolen a lot of money and run off with a chorus girl. When I told Fanny Crosby about this she sighed and said: "'Every man becomes a fly when a web of lace is spread.'"

A Real Actor.

Mrs. Beaton was walking through the park recently when two ragged, dirty little boys, who were playing near by, stopped her.

"Say, lady," called out the elder of the two, "me kid brudder does fine imitatin' stunts. Give him a dime an' he will imitate a chicken for youse."

"What will he do—crow?" queried Mrs. Beaton.

"Naw," replied the boy, "no cheap imitations like dat, ma'am. He'll eat a worm!"—New York Times.

Cornmeal at the Toilet.

But few people realize the great value of common cornmeal as a toilet essential. Dampen a handful of cornmeal placed in the wash basin and rub the hands thoroughly with it for ten or fifteen minutes and see how it removes all dirt and smooths the rough and chapped skin, especially about the knuckles and base of the nails. It will not injure in the least the most delicate skin, and if used on white hands or the face the skin will take on a new life and appear pure and fresh. —Philadelphia North American.

In Every Drop of Water.

In every drop of water we drink and in every mouthful of air we breathe there is a movement and collision of particles so rapid in every second of time that it can only be expressed by four with nineteen naughts. If the movement of these particles were attended by friction or if the energy of their impact were translated into heat what hot mouthfuls we should have! But the heat as well as the particle is infinitesimal and is not perceptible.—John Burroughs in Yale Review.

Versatile.

It was at a reception, and the two friends had met.

"Do you know," said Ina, "it was as much as I could do to keep from laughing when Josephine was just telling us about her fiance being 'so versatile.'"

"Meaning Webb?" replied Kathleen, smiling. "Well, dear, he is rather versatile, you know."

"Nonsense!" cried Ina. "You know, Kathleen, he is a regular idiot."

"Yes," replied Kathleen, "but he's so many kinds of an idiot."—Detroit Free Press.

Old English Fines.

In the past if one Englishman called another a liar there was something to pay. The seventeenth century mayor, sheriff and city grandees generally were keen on this point of etiquette. The direct accusation cost 11s. 6d. ($2.76); the subtle hint 6s. 8d. ($1.60). And there was a reduction on repetitions.

Swearing, too, was promptly suppressed. In 1650 a law was passed laying down the penalty for a first offense. The fines were graduated. That for a lord was 20 shillings ($7.20), for an esquire 10 shillings ($2.40), while all "inferior persons" could have a "few words" for 3s. 4d. (80 cents).

AMBITION.

What would this world of ours do without ambitious people? Ambitious people are the leaven which raises it into wholesome bread. Without ambition the world would never get up. Wrong to be ambitious, forsooth! The men wrong who, with head back and sweating brow, cut the smooth road over which humanity marches forward from generation to generation!—James K. Jerome.

HE WAS A TRUE SPORT.

Even Though He Lost the Race He Was Thoroughly Satisfied.

In the "Memoirs" of Admiral Lord Charles Beresford the author tells of an occasion when the Prince of Wales, afterward King Edward VII., performed the ceremony of opening a new breakwater at Holyhead. The general proceedings were very formal and somewhat prosy, and his royal highness requested Lord Charles to do something by way of enlivenment.

"'Well, sir,' said I, 'I will run a hundred yards race with Lord ——. As he is Irish, he is sure to take me up if I challenge him.'

"Sure enough, Lord —— accepted the challenge, but on conditions. These were that I should race in full uniform, excepting my sword, while himself should 'take his wardrobe from off himself.' Lord —— then proceeded to divest himself there and then of his Patrick ribbon, coat, waistcoat and boots, which he confided to the care of the wife of a certain distinguished Liberal statesman. He dropped his Patrick ribbon into her lap, saying, 'Madam, will ye have a care now of me jewel, for there's no saying what twist this mad divvil might give me?'

"Entirely at ease, with the seat of his breeches patched with stuff of another color from the rest, he was wholly unperturbed by the laughter of the assemblage.

"Although attired in cocked hat, frock coat and epaulettes, I had the speed of him and waited on him. Then the devil entered into me, and when Lord —— drew abreast of a big plant of pampas grass I deliberately bumped into him, pitching him head first into the grass, not, of course, intending to harm him. But, to my consternation and sorrow, Lord ——'s leg was broken below the knee. I put the poor lord into his coach—he had a coach and four-in-hand—and drove him back to his hotel. That excellent and magnanimous sportsman was perfectly unconcerned.

"'You hit me a bad skelp, and I am destroyed,' said he. 'Never mind, they all laughed, annyway.'"

King on the Battlefield.

From earliest times English kings have loomed large in the military history of their country. William III., at the end of the seventeenth century, was perhaps the greatest military genius that has ever occupied the British throne. The historic and noble defence of the Netherlands which occupied his life is now only threatened with comparison by King Albert's heroism.

The Hanoverians saw this change in kingship firmly established. Yet in 1743 George II. accompanied his army in the field, and was the last reigning King of England to do so. Then, at Dettingen, in Bavaria, he personally led an army of English, Hanoverians, and Austrians to victory against the French, who were in superior force under the Duc de Noailles.

This was in the war of the Austrian succession—when Europe was plunged into war by Frederick the Great of Prussia breaking his word, pledged in a treaty, to help Maria Theresa to succeed to the Austrian throne.

Since then no reigning monarch has accompanied his troops in the field, though William IV., the sailor King, saw active service as a prince, and served under Admiral Rodney in 1780 in the naval battle off Cape St. Vincent.

Now, after a lapse of 171 years, George V., a reigning King, has been with his army in the field.

EXERCISE AND GRECIAN BEAUTY

WHAT IT MEANS

Many thousands of women are nowadays paying attention to physical culture and the proper exercise of their body muscles, where, thirty years ago or fifty years ago there was no thought expended on this science, which is quite necessary to physical beauty. The reason the Greeks, both men and women, excelled in beautiful and symmetrical forms was because of the attention they paid to the proper exercise. Then, too, they were untrammeled by corsets, shoes and the inconveniences of clothing. To the minds of some women the idea of physical exercise conveys only the idea of hard fatiguing work. Mild exercise continued day after day is best for the body and spirits and health. Without proper exercise there can be no health, and without health there can be no real beauty.

There is no stronger proof of the sound remedial value of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription than that it restores the wasted form to its wonted roundness.

It is a wonderful prescription prepared only from Nature's roots with glycerine, with no alcohol to falsely stimulate. It banishes pain, headache, backache, low spirits, hot flashes, dragging-down sensations, worry and sleeplessness surely and without loss of time.

RUSSIANS HAVE WON A GREAT VICTORY

10,000 AUSTRO-GERMANS CAPTURED

New Russian Offensive Saved Day in Galicia

At the One Point Where Enemy Had Succeeded in Crossing the Dneister River Czar's Forces Have Hurled Back the Enemy and Captured Thousands of Prisoners---Berlin Admits Withdrawal, Saying Russian Reinforcements Were Responsible.

FRENCH CONTINUE TO GAIN IN WEST

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, June 11.—A supplementary statement, issued by the war office, reported the capture of more than ten thousand Austro-Germans in the last three days, in the fighting west and south of Lemberg, and a complete check of the enemy's offensive directed towards the Galician town.

TORONTO, June 11.---The official statement from Petrograd to-day, supplementing the statements already received from Berlin and Vienna, shows that a great Russian victory has been won east of Stryji in Galicia, At the only point where the Germanic forces had crossed the Dneister river northwards, a great Russian offensive has saved the day, hurling the enemy back across the Dneister river, and capturing many thousands of men and several guns.

PARIS, June 11.---Moving eastward in an attempt to seize the Arras-Lille road, the French have captured several German trenches at the point of the bayonet. Further advances have been made in the Labyrinth southeast of Neuville. The war office this afternoon reported the capture of 100 Germans in the fighting around Hebuterne, south of Arras.

COMMENTS ON NOTE

LONDON, June 11.---The American note is not an ultimatum, but Germany will not fail to sense its firmness, the Evening Star declared this afternoon in a paragraph of an editorial devoted to the text of the rejoiner. "Berlin is not likely to mistake the urbane, philosophic tone of the American note for indecision," said The Star. "The iron hand is there even if it isn't sticking out at finger tips of velvet gloves." "President Wilson takes a stand on high ground of humanity in well chosen diplomatic language," was the Westminster Gazette's comment.

OTTAWA, June 11.—The Canadian casualties up till to-day total 8428, dead 1301, wounded 5523, missing 1604. Apparently there has been little activity in the Canadian division for some days.

ROME, June 11.—Savage fighting at the bridge over the Isonzo, five miles northwest of Goritz, and the repulse of new Austrian attempts to recapture the Freikopel pass, were reported in the despatches from the front to-day. For the past 24 hours, the battling near Goritz has been more furious than at any other point along the Isonzo.

STEAMER TORPEDOED

LONDON, June 11.---The Glasgow steamer Strathcarrion was torpedoed and sunk off Barry yesterday; the crew escaped in the boats.

VIENNA, June 11.---Via Berlin.---Austrian submarine No. 4 torpedoed and sunk a small British cruiser of the type of the Liverpool, 30 miles west of San Giovanni, on Wednesday. The submarine evaded six destroyers convoying the cruiser.

WEST ALTON, ILL., June 11.---Twenty five hundred horses being bought here for the British army, stampeded from their corral this morning and are now loose all over two counties. More than 200 were killed by train. The shipment is worth a half million.

OTTAWA, June 11.---Among the succsseful candidates in the recent entrance examinations to the Naval College at Halifax, were Kenneth A. McKenzie, Lakefield.

BERLIN, June 11.---The Russians are on the offensive in Kovno province along the Dubisha river, the war office admitted in an official statement this afternoon. They have attacked the German positions to the northeast of Ziagola but have been repulsed.

WORKED IN THE C.G.E.

Wounded at Langemarck, Pte. Fred Clarke of the 57th Regiment detachment in the 2nd Battalion, C.E.F., is now back in the hospital, having been wounded for the second time on May 30th. Pte. Clarke was one of the first to appear in the casualty list after the Langemarck fight. He was injured on April 23rd, but his wound was evidently not very serious as he was back on the firing line in a little over a month. Now he is reported wounded again, five weeks after his first appearance on the list.

Pte. Clarke's relatives live in Sheffield, Eng., but he had lived in Peterborough for some years, employed at the C.G.E. and was well known here.

The official announcement in regard to Pte. Clarke shows he has been more seriously wounded on this occasion. The report says: "Wounded May 30th, Gunshot wound; head and shoulder. Severe."

CAMPAIGN TO CONTINUE

Y.M.C.A. Canvass Raised $10,000 in Three Days—Committee Will Try to Get Balance Before To-morrow Night.

$500 IS PROMISED

As the team members and captains filtered through the doors of the Y. M. C. A. last night at 10 o'clock they knew that the combined efforts of the force had shoved the total contribution and subscription list of the fund up to the handsome sum of ten thousand and one dollars. Think of it — $10,001.00. Looks big, doesn't it? It is big; that's the beauty of it. But it is not symmetrical, and lacks the roundness and completeness of $12,000. And then falls short of that conjectural, $15,000, that was spoken of a few days ago. But it is very well. So well that the Committee has decided to keep the canvas open until Saturday night, and see if they cannot reach the declared contention to make the Fund $12,000. There is a subscription of $500.00, made by a good friend of all public enterprises, contingent on the sum being the last $500 needed to finish off the $12,000. That leaves only $1,500 to go to reach the goal. The Committee have determined to collar that last five hundred and two days' work should result in capturing the amount.

There is always money in the country when the proper inducements are offered. That such was the case is now verified. Several of the teams' members say that they have assisted in canvasses for the benefit of the Y. M. C. A. in the past, and that never before has the subscriptions been given so cheerfully, and in many cases, in larger amounts. That speaks well for our people. There seemed to be a larger and firmer realization of the good a real live Y.M.C.A. is to a city the size of Peterborough. For it is really a civic institution, just as the Public Library is; but the burden of its up-keep cannot, and very properly, too, be imposed on the city's taxes.

It remains for private munificence and such membership fees as are attained to meet the cost of maintenance. With the money now so generously contributed additions can be made that will nearly make the place self-supporting.

After supper there was a general "confession of faith". Each team captain told of the incidents of the day's work. Always interesting. Ever a relation of experience. A good day's work on the whole, for the total takings reached $1,491.00. Quite a respectable sum. It cheered all hands, and all hands cheered the sum. Sort of mutual admiration society. Among the fine subscriptions made were those of Mr. Richard Hall for $100; Mr. R. R. Hall, $100; Mr. A. W. Cressman for $60; a lady, (Mrs. W. Davidson), handed in $50 to Mr. Connal, who received the gift with large pleasure. There were quite a large number of $20 and $25 subscriptions, making up a fine total. Mr. G. W. Heaton deposited in the hands of the canvasser a cheque from the members of his family for $50. Quite acceptable. Mr. Aylmer and Mr. Meserve went to Toronto to

DEPENDS ON GERMAN REPLY

If Answer is Evasive or a Refusal of American Demands United States Will Sever Diplomatic Relations With Germany.

COMMENT ON THE NOTE

(By John Nevin.)

WASHINGTON, June 11.—"An appeal to reason with all threats skillfully concealed." That was the interpretation placed by official Washington to-day on President Wilson's rejoinder to Germany. They held it was couched in the friendliest terms, and it made yielding to the cardinal principle—recognition of the right of American citizens to be safeguarded everywhere on the high seas— very easy, if Germany desires. Pro-German circles were hopeful that Germany would accept the demand. They argued that to do so would prevent unnecessary criticism of the home government by the German people. There is not the least doubt, it was said, that the great mass of Germans believe Grand Admiral Von Tirpitz's under-sea campaign has seriously crippled Great Britain and that the announcement of its abandonment would seriously impair their confidence in their government. An announcement of modification, however, coupled with the explanation that such action will strengthen the German cause in neutral America, would be well received.

Officials here think it is this belief that is the only way of sunshine in a very black international sky. Should the German government take this view the critical stage has been passed and a way can be found out of a position fraught with the gravest consequences for both nations.

Diplomats of pro-ally sympathies declared that the note, although expressed in beautiful phrases, skillfully concealed an iron hand in a velvet glove. It is known that former Secretary of State Wm. J. Bryan who retired from the cabinet when confronted with the obligation of signing the note, entertains the same views. He considers the note the fulfillment of a policy of directness. To his mind it typifies "force that speaks with firmness and acts through the ultimatum." This then is the foundation of the American case. President Wilson is willing to discuss with Germany just what rules should be applied to submarine warfare. He is willing to act as mediator between Germany and her enemies in "anything that may bring about even partial accommodation of interests, or in any way mitigate the terrors of present distressing conflict." In doing so, however, he insists that the United States must be assured that its rights under international law are recognized and respected. Until Berlin answers, the President and his Cabinet, and the officials who are aiding him in every way will assume that the German reply will be friendly. There will be no war talk by any responsible official and no steps taken toward the next move by the President, although it is accepted as a fact that if the German reply is evasive, or refusal, there will be nothing left for the President to do but withdraw Ambassador Gerard and the American consular representatives from Germany, thus severing diplomatic relations. The President and his advisers are assuming that there is no reason to believe Germany will not see the logic of the American position.

TEXT OF THE U.S. NOTE TO GERMANY

PTE. J. E. RICH
Peterborough boy with the 39th Battalion at Belleville.

President Wilson Notifies the Kaiser That Laws Must be Respected—Demands the Safeguarding of the Lives of Americans.

WILLING TO MEDIATE

WASHINGTON, June 11. — The text of the American rejoinder to the German Government's reply to the note following the sinking of the Lusitania was handed out last night, and is as follows:

"The Secretary of State, ad interim, to the American Ambassador at Berlin:

"Department of State,
"Washington, June 9, 1915.

"American Ambassador, Berlin:

"You are instructed to deliver textually the following note to the Minister of Foreign Affairs:

"In compliance with your Excellency's request, I did not fail to transmit to my Government immediately upon their receipt your note of May 28, in reply to my note of May 15, and your supplementary note of June 1, setting forth the conclusions, so far as reached by the Imperial German Government, concerning the attacks on the American steamers Cushing and Gulflight. I am now instructed by my Government to communicate the following in reply:

CUSHING DETAILS LATER.

"The Government of the United States notes with gratification the full recognition by the Imperial German Government, in discussing the cases of the Cushing and the Gulflight, of the principle of the freedom of all parts of the open sea to neutral ships, and the frank willingness of the Imperial German Government to acknowledge and meet its liability where the fact of attack upon neutral ships which have not been guilty of any hostile act by German aircraft or vessels of war is satisfactorily established: and the Government of the United States will in due course lay before the Imperial German Government, as it requests, full information concerning the attack on the steamer Cushing.

AN UNJUSTIFIABLE ACT.

"With regard to the sinking of the steamer Falaba, by which an American citizen lost his life, the Government of the United States is surprised to find the Imperial German Government contending that an effort on the part of a merchantman to escape capture and secure assistance alters the obligation of the officer seeking to make the capture in respect of the safety of the lives of those on board the merchantman, although the vessel has ceased her attempt to escape when torpedoed. These are not now circumstances. They have been in the minds of statesmen and of international jurists throughout the development of naval warfare, and the Government of the United States does not understand that they have ever been held to alter the principles of humanity upon which it has insisted. Nothing but actual forcible resistance, or continued efforts to escape by flight when ordered to stop for the purpose of visit, on the part of the merchantman has ever been held to forfeit the lives of her passengers or crew. The Government of the United States, however, does not understand that the Imperial German Government is seeking in this case to relieve itself of liability, but only intends to set forth the circumstances which led the commander of the submarine to allow himself to be hurried into the course which he took.

LUSITANIA NOT ARMED.

"Your Excellency's note, in discussing the loss of American lives resulting from the sinking of the steamship Lusitania, adverts at some length to certain information which the Imperial German Government has received with regard to the character and outfit of that vessel, and your Excellency expresses the fear that this information may not have been brought to the attention of the United States.

"It is stated that the Lusitania was undoubtedly equipped with masked guns, supplied with trained gunners and special ammunition, transporting troops from Canada, carrying a cargo not permitted under the laws of the United States to a vessel also carrying passengers, and serving in virtual effect as an auxiliary to the naval forces of Great Britain. Fortunately, these

JURY RETURNED A NOT GUILTY VERDICT

In the Case of the Harvey Men Charged With Lumber Theft

As briefly mentioned in Thursday's issue a verdict of "not guilty" was returned yesterday noon in the case of the Crown vs. Gordon Reynolds and Robert Peters of Harvey Township. The defendants had been charged with stealing seven pine trees off the Peterborough Lumber Company's limits in Chandos. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defence and in summing, made a strong plea for the acquittal of the two men. Crown Attorney Hatton summarized the case, claiming that the men were guilty of theft for they had removed the timber after they had been notified by Mr. Dane, representing the Peterborough Lumber Co., that they had trespassed on and removed the trees from the Company's limit.

In his remarks to the jury, Judge Hayeks called attention to the fact that both men were charged with theft. They must then stand or fall together. The evidence showed that Peters was not a partner of Reynolds, but was only engaged by him to draw out the timber.

The Jury was out an hour.

TARDY COURAGE.

The Winnipeg Tribune devotes a good deal of space to glorifying the action of the Conservative members of the Provincial Legislature. It says that the Conservative members in a recent caucus, declared in favour of the Royal Commission investigating the stealing in connection with the erection of the Parliament Buildings, under the late Conservative Government, pushing the probe to the bottom, to the end that responsibility should be fixed, and to the end that the guilty may be punished. This is a proper attitude to assume, but much of the credit due these new-to-the-line Conservatives is removed by the fact, they have only declared for what was, or is, inevitable. The Liberal Government has declared, without any hint or suggestion, except their sense of duty, to adopt this very course. It has decided that the investigation shall be pushed till all sources of information may be exhausted, and the full truth brought out. The post facto demand of the Conservative members for full and exhaustive inquiry into the circumstances of the criminal carelessness of the government, is no particular credit to their anxiety for the extracting of the whole truth. It would have been more to the credit if they had made such a demand when the wrong-doing of the government was first made evident. They did not demand investigation to the truth till after it had been officially decided upon by the present Liberal Government, nor when such a demand, in face of res gesta, would not have been superfluous, if not ridiculously impertinent.

WAIT FOR AUTHORITY.

When a teacher in a public school sends the press a written notice of a coming school entertainment, and announces in it that there will be a short musical "program," is it not reasonable to assume that he or she is teaching children the employment of this corrupted form of spelling? And isn't it fair to question the right of any teacher to depart from employment of authoritatively recognized orthography? It is true that some great journals "thru" a desire to be or become leaders in spelling "reform," mutilate a few words by adopting an "improved" form of spelling by adopting the "program" way of spelling a few words, when if the caprice of reformers were consistently followed out, thousands of words could be treated to "reform" of spelling. Yet these pioneers in their field have no more right to corrupt the spelling of one word than of ten thousand words. The only proper way to reform our spelling, (if we admit that certain changes constitute improvement), is to leave the initiative to recognized literary authority. When some such authority practices an "improved" form of spelling, then the groundlings may warrantably follow the example set; but not till then. Unauthorized and capricious change of spelling mars the written or printed page with orthographical blots. The amateur succeeds in doing little more than deform instead of reform; he produces as congruous and desirable effect upon our language, as a woman would do in improving the decoration of a room, by plastering here and there a patch of the new wall paper over the existing covering. The very foundation of good citizenship consists in respect for authority, divine and human. Good membership in the literary guild consists in respect for standard literary authority. With every citizen making his own laws we should have hopeless confusion; with every callow litterateur making his or her own literary laws, or breach of literary laws, we should have similar confusion. We must respect recognized literary authority and await its dictum or example in the way of spelling reform, or to bit more exact, change in spelling. We had better "bear the ills we have than fly to others."

IN MIND ONLY.

To get a parallel to the German hate of Britain, one has only to call up the Toronto News' hate of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. It breaks into "songs of hate"—not metrical, for its diatribes against Sir Wilfrid have, usually, neither rhyme nor reason. The News in quoting with approval Australia's large expenditures in public works, to give employment, blames Sir Wilfrid Laurier for demanding unreasonable retrenchment on Canadian public works; and weakly asserts that "the Conservative Government of Canada keeps the welfare of the wage-earners in mind." The organ evidently feels that generalities are safest; if it went in to details to furnish proof of the Borden Government keeping "the welfare of the wage-earners in mind," it would have some difficulty to make good its declaration to this effect.

It wouldn't find many examples of employment on Public works, in Peterborough, anyway. Many moons ago with a good deal of parade of government laudation, a site was purchased for a combined post office and customs building. An appropriation of money for construction purposes was made. But in this year of unemployment not a hammer is lifted, not a stroke of work provided. It may be argued that Canada hasn't the money to spare. Canada can as well afford to have the Borden Government continue expenditure on public works to demonstrate its interest in the wage-earner, as Australia. The debt of Australia is about three times as great as that of Canada, and she has besides spent many foolish millions on a "separatist" navy, yet the News tells us Australia is at this moment in process of spending 20 millions in public works. The Conservative Government, its apologist avers, "Keeps the welfare of the wage-earners in mind." This must be meant literally, for it is only in its "mind" that the government does anything for the wage-earners. It doesn't do it by giving employment on local public works, which if needed, are not more needed than the employment their construction would provide. If work were put on on our new public building, it would give a good deal of employment, and afford more practical relief to the unemployed, than "keeping the welfare of the wage-earners in mind," and "in mind" only.

We have had a dry dock in "mind"—and in the air too, for a long time, and we haven't even got the site yet. According to rumour, we have in this site matter got another evidence of how "the government keeps the welfare of the wage-earner in mind," when a canal employee, who insists on fixing his own price on property for a site, is told that "the government has no further need for his services."

WHAT SCIENCE DOES.

Dr. Vaugh, of the University of Michigan, and recognized as an authority on vital statistics, states that the average length of life in the United States is now fifteen years greater than it was thirty-five years ago, while the death rate from tuberculosis has decreased 54 per cent. in the same period. This is a remarkable showing, and indicates what can be done by intelligent efforts to combat disease and lengthen man's sojourn on earth.—Exchange.

ONLY SURPLUS SHIPS.

A reassuring item in Winston Churchill's speech at Dundee was the statement that it was only the surplus ships that were being used at the Dardanelles. We know that the North Sea fleet has not been weakened, that a sorties of the Kaiser's navy drom the Kiel Canal would be met with the full strength.—London Advertiser.

Australia to Send 100,000 Men to War

John Christian Watson, who was premier of Australia in 1904, and who for many years was leader of the Labour party there, said recently in New York that Australia was planning to equip and send to the European war 100,000 soldiers, with many more held in reserve. He said that Australia was prepared to do more than her share in the present war, and explained that all parties in Australia were united in the determination to give the greatest possible support to the allies.

"Australia has sent out 50,000 men already," he said, "and we would have had more men ready except for the difficulty in equipping them thoroughly for service. The work of equipping takes time, as you well know, but the work is going on smoothly now and we expect to have 50,000 more men ready soon. Our population is more than 5,000,000 and we are prepared to put many more men in the field if necessary. And our men are hardy, loyal citizens, I want to add.

"We have been specially fortunate in having adopted a compulsory military service a few years ago. By compulsory service I do not mean a system such as Germany has, by which young men are taken away from industries. Instead we simply require the young men to spend to spend so many days a year in camp—which most boys like to do—and to undergo military training throughout the year.

"Furthermore, under our old militia system we made it a point to have our regiments almost doubly officered. The result is that we have an unusually large number of reasonably well trained officers. In addition we have established a factory for the manufacture of arms and another for turning out ammunition. While these factories are not as large as we wish now, yet that nucleus has proved a splendid start for the work we have in hand.

"In Australia the labouring men have always been in favour of military training, and were united at once in pressing the present war. I, myself, believe that the solid foundation of democracy lies in having every man not only trained in arms, but having them always convenient in his home."

Mr. Watson started life as a compositor. He has had an unusual career in Australia and has been an important factor in the politics of his country. He and his asociates had planned to start a new labour daily newspaper in Sydney but the project was halted temporarily by the war.

He said that he did not come to this country on business, but was simply looking around, studying various newspaper plants in preparation for the establishment of his new paper in Sydney as soon as the war is ended.—New York Sun.

FIGHTING AND WOUNDS CREATE CALLS UPON RED CROSS ACTIVITY

We are often told that women should take no part in war, and that they are a far greater hindrance than help on a field of battle. This statement may perhaps be true as a general rule, but there is one great exception. All nations recognize women's work at the seat of war in caring for the wounded. It is in this direction that their help is of supreme importance, and it is to the world's Red Cross Societies that we turn when we want to learn the extent and details of voluntary help, as this Society is the recognized channel by which the wounded are cared for in time of war.

The story of how the Red Cross Societies came into being is little known, and is well worth repeating. They were the result of a book written by Henri Dunant, a Swiss gentleman, who had been present at the battle of Solferino, when the terrible need for an international medical and nursing corps was forcibly brought home to him. His book made a great sensation and was translated into most European languages, with the result that the Geneva Society of Public Utility invited Monsieur Dunant to submit a scheme which would cope with the evil.

M. Dunant suggested that every nation should establish an efficient and voluntary corps of trained doctors, and nurses together with field hospital equipments, which would be guaranteed neutrality by contending nations in time of war. The Geneva Society called a convention to consider his suggestions and fourteen nations sent representatives. The following year (1864) twelve of these nations signed the convention which made neutral all medical service whether rendered by the Army Medical Corps or by voluntary Red Cross Societies, and since that date the scheme has spread so widely that at the present day the only countries that have no Red Cross Society are China, Mexico and Brazil.

The question of an international badge was raised at the Geneva conference, and it was decided to adopt a Red Cross on a white ground, out of compliment to Switerland, where the idea took shape, and whose flag is a white cross on a red ground. The preliminaries over, all countries began to organize, and the results are seen in the splendid work which is being done to-day.

Already a large contingent of nurses has left Canada to work under the Red Cross banner in the hospitals of the Old Land, where they will give their time and experience to the great work of attending to our wounded and sick Canadian soldiers. It is a labour of love, and Canada should feel honoured that such a splendid body of women have given up, in many cases, splendid positions, to do their share for Canada and the Empire. What a tribute we must lay at the feet of the women of Canada.

It is impossible to sufficiently impress upon our readers the importance of surgical supplies and other material that are sine qua non of a modern hospital where wounded soldiers are attended to. It is only necessary to glance over the casualty lists each day to realize the fearful toll of wounded and sick men that this terrible war is exacting. The amount of bandages alone that are used in one day in a base hospital is simply stupendous and, besides such surgical supplies as dressings, gauze, pads, compresses, gauze wipes, etc., all kinds of delicate and expensive surgical instruments are needed for operations.

The upkeep of a hospital, the running expenses, the salaries of the doctors, nurses and orderlies, and many other incidentals call for the expenditure of a large amount of money. The people of Canada have given to the needs of the Red Cross in a most generous manner, and have never failed to respond when they have been called upon to give to some specific purpose or to the general work of the society. As long as the war continues so will the need continue, and it will increase rather than diminish. Many lives will have to be sacrificed before the object for which we are fighting has been accomplished. Many thousands of wounded will have to be nursed back to health and strength. It is the duty of every citizen of Canada to do something for the great cause and whatever may be the sacrifices, duty to our country comes before everything.

In many cases a sum of money is of more value than a pair of socks or a dozen shirts, for the money can be spent upon something that is badly needed in connection with the work of the hospitals. We have enjoyed our years of prosperity and pleasure, we are now suffering for the sake of humanity, and we are living in times of distress and grave national crisis, when not only the life blood of the country is needed, but the sacrifice of those who cannot take their place on the battlefield.

An Orator's Call to Italy

D'Annunzio the Italian Poet Thrills a Large Roman Crowd

The Rome correspondent of the Paris Temps telegraphs the text of an admirable oration delivered extemporarily by the Italian poet d'Annunzio in Rome to a large crowd, says the London Times of May 15. The crowd had awaited him at the station, and escorted him to the Hotel Regina opposite the palace of the Queen Mother. In reply to cheers and demands for a speech, d'Annunzio appeared on the balcony, and said:

"Romans, Italians, brethren in faith and in axiety; my friends of to-day and my comrades of yore; It is not to me that you address this greeting of ardent courtesy, of generous recognition. Not me do you salute, but the spirit that guides the love that inspires me, the idea which I serve.

Italy's Proud Destiny.

"Could he, Garibaldi, the Liberator, descend fror the Janiculuu, would he not brand as cowards and traitors, would he pot set the seal of infamy, on all those who to-day in secret and openly work to disarm our Italy, to debauch the country, to thrust her again into servitude, to nail her anew to the cross, or to leave her agonizing on her bed, that seemed at times an open bier?

"Can we allow aliens, those in our midst and those without, can we permit the enemies at home, or intruders, to impose this kind of death on a nation, which but yesterday in a thrill of power raised by her sea the symbol of her most exalted epic, the statue of her true will which is the will of Rome? As yesterday the pride of Italy was wholly turned towards Rome, so to-day towards Rome is turned Italian anguish. For three days I know not what adour of treason has begun to suffocate us. No; no will not be a morgue, no hotel a summer solace, a horizon painted with Prussian blue for international honeymoons; a pleasant market for buying and selling, haggling and defrauding! Our genius calls us to put our stamp on the fused and confused matter of a new world.

"Across our heavens passed again the breath that inspired the prodigious lines in which Dante represents the flight of the Roman eagle, O citizens! the flight of the eagle, it is yours!

"Let the strength of Rome overthrow the tables of dishonest traders and forgers; let Rome find anew in the Forum the daring of Caesar crying, 'Alea jacta est' on the ruddy table of the earth.

"I saw the fire of Vesta, O Romans, lit yesterday in the great steel works of Liguria, around the forges which flamed ceaslessly night and day. The fountain of Puturna, O Romans, I saw its waters run to temper armour, to chill the drills that hollow out the bore of guns. Let Italy arm not for parade, but for mortal combat. Too long she has heard the sighs of those who far away suffer bodily hunger, hunger of the soul, shameful out rages, every torture!

Memories of Garibaldi.

"Fifty years ago this evening at this very hour the Thousand of Garibaldi fell asleep to awaken at dawn for the onward march, not against Destiny, but towards the destiny which for them was fused with the light of the rising sun into one sole splendor. Let Rome awaken to-morrow in the sun of her need, and shout the cry of her right, the cry of her justice, the cry of her claim to all the earth that awaits her as an ally against barbarism.

"On which side is victory? asked our young poet Mameli, who fell under your walls, while he ardently desired to die on the Eastern Alps with his face to the Austrian foe. Youth of Rome! Believe what we believe, believe above all and against all that God indeed created victory to be the handmaid of Rome. As it is Roman to do and to suffer strong things, so it is Roman to conquer — (A Voice: 'Or to die!')—and to live in the eternal life of the mother country. Sweep, therefore sweep away all filth; cast into the sewer all that is putrefying. Long live Rome without shame! Long live Italy, grand and pure!"

TOM W. JACKSON'S ALONG THE ROW.

More Proof.

Miss Mary was a pretty girl
With hair of golden hue;
She used a want ad for a job,
And Mary got it, too.
The boss he fell in love with her
And she became his bride,
A motor car, soon after that,
Jumped on him and he died,
And Mary got a million plunks—
The third of his estate.
Said she: "It pays to advertise
No matter what the rate."

The Government of Hawaii has set aside 600,000 acres of forest reserves and will experiment with planting eucalyptus for firewood.

For keeping a man's head cool there has been invented a fan to be so suspended inside a hat as to vibrate as its wearer moves about.

This picture shows the troop train burning fiercely. Many poor unfortunates who were pinned down by the wreckage were slowly burned to death. All but six of the casualties were British soldiers. Their comrades worked heroically, but were handicapped by the flames, and the terrible nature of the wounds received.

WAR'S SCARS SEEN IN LIFE OF VIENNA—MOURNING WOMEN AND WOUNDED IN THE STREETS

VIENNA, June 9.— Austria is an anachronism. An eighteenth-century nation amidst twentieth century neighbours. It struggles under an archaic system of government full of the faults of non-representative administration directed by a short-sighted bureaucracy.

When it was divorced from the dominance of the church the governing power took to itself what in the past had been the privileges of Papal authority. This system has continued to be a jealously guarded sinecure.

But it is the destiny of all decaying governmental institutions to pass into oblivion. Such is the fate that overhangs Austria.

What adds to the handicap of the nation is the fact that the ruling class lacks the qualities of leadership. An assassin's hand destroyed the man with a mentality known to be large enough to vizualise the future of Austria. And many of those of the brilliant throng attending the magnificent funeral of the murdered Heir Apparent, when they murmured the prayer for the repose of his soul, breathed a sigh of relief as an Amen.

Race Without Iron.

They are a race without iron. Political ends must be gained by compromise and trimming. Among themselves they jeer at their uncounted nobility. Even the sacred and senile Emperor is not safe from criticism.

With the call of war the military clique has sprung into the saddle to ride rough-shod over the discontented but inert masses. On these does all the misery of war fall more heavily. Soon it will be rare that a family of the common people cannot show a crippled or mourn a dead member.

One of the methods of duping the populace is to feed them with predigested news.

The Viennest Press, that the people may not be discontented with their own short rations, "plays up" lurid and wholly false statements of hunger strikes in Russia. Russia going hungry with her enormous wheat yield shut up within her ports, with her egg supply glutting the home market; could any affirmation be more ludicrous. The note is varied by long and detailed accounts of the failure in execution of the vodka-drinking prohibition. The Austrians are assured that the Czar's ukase, instead of stopping the consumption of vodka, has increased it. And so it goes ad libitum.

Bread Cards Given.

The first practical intimation of war that strikes you upon arriving in Austria is the bread card. This is handed you when you reach your hotel. It is good for 210 grammes of what passes for bread here. It is checked into three divisions, each of which is good for 70 grammes, the allowance per person at each meal. And one of these divisions you must give up wherever you may dine or sup. If you forget your bread card when you go out in the morning you must go without this "luxury." It is, 'Nicht ubertragbar!" "Sorgfaltig aufbewahren!" and "Nachdruk verboten!"

The bread itself, which is a glutinous brown mass brought to you wrapped up in white paper like a picnic sandwich, is almost edible if cut in thin slices and toasted.

The first impression of Vienna is that it is normal. Crowds block the narrow streets, which hum with the bustle of city life. When you analyse the crowd you see the red scars of war. Past the towering opera edifice shuffles a squad of cripples. Of the eight, four have one or the other foot amputated. This is the toll of the cold in the Carpathians.

One of the volunteer doctors is authority for the statement that frostbite was so common amongst troops in the mountain war zone that it was not unusual for him to perform 100 amputations a day. The other wounded carry their arms in slings; one has an empty sleeve. Is it odd that one becomes cynical of our vaunted civilization when, after studying these piteous figures in their gray uniforms still stained with the grime of the trenches, we lift our glance from the thin yellow brown faces and dull eyes to the bill on the door of the Opera House to see that to-night will be given a gala performance of "Electra." Electra! Austria, beware your Robespierre!

Women in Mourning.

As you walk the Ring it is not one, but some half-dozen women who pass, all in deepest mourning. In the park the children play, not as in other countries at war, as soldiers, but their customary games of peace. They even wear on the sailor caps of youth the letters, "H.M.S. Inflexible," "H.M.S. London," "H.M.S. Renown." And there is no riot. Imagine what a scene of carnage would result if a child appeared in Green Park wearing a sailor's hat stamped "Von Sedlitz."

And the nurses sit knitting, not comforts for the men in the field, the soldiers who suffer to keep this shell of government intact, but fancy work in white linen and lace. Beyond the fountain bedded in hyacinths and tulips sit an officer and his wife. A black silk sling support his left arm, but his colour and appearance show that he has suffered only a minor wound. They seldom speak, this couple. He stares into the silver spray of the fountain, and he, with eyes that cannot hide the dumb misery at her heart, looks only at him.

Back in the street again a jangling motor lorry, with two trailers loaded with ancient bath tubs, boilers and bird cages, rushes past. Another follows, filled with a twisted candelabrum of ancient date, old kettles of copper, and rusty railings. On a hoarding you read a yellow bill, which explains this strange sigh. It is metal collecting week.

With the same spirit that the housewives of the Civil Wars melted down their pewter mugs into bullets so do the Viennese women of to-day ransack their homes for ageworn metal that may be made into modern cartridges. This is only an indication that a shortage of metal is expected. What the resources of the country are in this matter is difficult to estimate.

Not Well Organized.

Austria was not nearly so well organized as Germany, so it is certain that here the first pinch of exhaustion will be felt. And she must share such raw material of war as is found within her borders with her Teuton ailey. So the leaders of the nations of the Entente must watch Austria that here the first pinch of exhaus- closely for the first signs of economic exhaustion.

Down on Schwartzenburg Platz is a figure that suggests another picture of the effects of war. It is a huge effigy in wood of a mailed warrior. The figure stands some fifteen feet high, carved to resemble a knight in armour, cap-a-pie, helmet, breastplates and sword. Being wood you wonder why it is called "Der Wehrmann im Eisen."

Soon a youth climbs the steps leading to the plinth and drives a tack into the leg of the knight. Now you see that the warrior is studded with such tacks. For the privilege of driving in this tack the youth, or any one who so wishes, pays the sum of one kroner. As the proceeds go to a fund for the widows and orphans of the soldiers killed in the war I used the hammer several times myself. So thick were the tack heads that I could hardly find a place to nail. Thus the wood was rapidly being coated in iron.

The idea of "The warrior in Iron" comes from an old custom of Vienna. A tree once stood at the gates of the city where all who left Vienna with the hope of bettering their fortune in the world beyond drove a nail in the bark before setting out on their journey, that it might bring luck on the enterprise. The trunk of the tree still existe, crusted with iron.

Among the personages one may see in Vienna to-day there are three of exceptional interest. First, the former Khedive; second, Grand Duke Carl Stephan, and third, Baron Sir Rudolph Slatin Pasha.

The Khedive looks sleek and fat and little perturbed by his calamities as he sits in the restaurants or cafes-chantant. Rumour says that he has lost all save his fortune. It might have been worse.

Hopes To Rule Poland.

That the Grand Duke Carl Stephan may some day be King of Poland is the hope of the nobility of Austria. This is a plan of the future.

Sir Rudolph Slatin is well known in England. The romantic story of his adventures in the Soudan has thrilled both old and young. His administrative work in Egypt highly appreciated in Government circles in London. As a loyal Austrian when hostilities commenced he offered his sword to his native country. He had left the Austrian army as a lieutenant, and proposed to enter again with that rank, or at the highest a captaincy—modest enough request for a man of Sir Rudolphs calibre and experience. But he was told his services were not needed. Such is the short-sightedness of the military clique.

It is difficult for a simple traveller in Austria at this time to arrive at a correct estimate of the industrial strikes in Trieste, but I have learned in this war to put a faint credence in local gossip. From what I have myself seen, the crops are flourishing. Not an acre of available soil is uncultivated.

After crossing the country from border to border, I am of the opinion that except for some extraordinary weather set-back, Austria can count on a normal harvest. Coal, wood, and oil are being carefully husbanded, the amount of fuel expended on the account of civilian necessities is each day less. These economies largely increase the military reserve.

Except in the matter of lubricating oil, I judge the supply to be ample for present needs. While the danger is imminent, there is reason to believe that in time there will not be produced more than enough lubricating oil within German-Austrian boundaries to serve military purposes. This means that the locomotives which move the supplies for the civilian population must stop. At least fewer and fewer trains will run, and the distribution of food will become more and more difficult.

On the whole, it cannot be said that beyond the curtailment of flour consumption there is as yet any serious indication that a shortage of aliment exists in Austria. Food is abundant and reasonably cheap.

SUMMER SKIN TROUBLES

Sunburn, blistering, and irritation are the commonest form of summer skin troubles, and Zam-Buk ends these very quickly. It works in two ways. As soon as applied, its antiseptic powers get to work and kill all the poison in a wound, a sting or a sore. This generally ends the smarting and the pain. Then Zam-Buk begins the healing process, and fresh healthy tissue is built up. For sore, blistered feet, sore hands, heat rashes, baby's heat spots, sore places due to perspiration, etc., you can't equal Zam-Buk. It also cures cuts, ulcers, abscesses, piles, and all inflamed and diseased conditions of skin and subjacent tissue. Druggists and stores everywhere sell Zam-Buk, 50c. box. Use Zam-Buk Soap also, 25c. per tablet. All stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

How Sand Bags Are Made

Hundreds of thousands of sand bags are being used on the Continent to form cover for the soldiers along the tops of the trenches.

The best thing to make sand bags from is the material called Hessian, the same kind of stuff that is used to make very rough aprons. The most important thing to remember about the bags is their size, for if they are not of the regulation size they are useless.

The bags should be thirty-three inches long by fourteen inches wide. If they are made any larger they are too heavy to lift easily when filled with sand or earth.

Sand bags should never be sewn up with thread, for they have to stand exposure to all sorts of weather, and thread would rot very quickly, allowing the sand to escape.

The bags should be sewn with fine string, and a double piece of strong string should be left at the mouth of the bag so as to enable it to be closed when filled with earth.

BISURATED MAGNESIA

An absolutely harmless antacid in all cases of fermentation and souring and belching of food, gas, indigestion, etc. A teaspoonful in a fourth of a glass hot water usually gives INSTANT RELIEF. Sold by all druggists in either powder or tablet form at 75 cents per bottle.

An ingenious Frenchman has invented a mower to be fastened to the stern of a launch to clear water courses of vegetable matter.

'THE "PUSH AND GO" MAN

Business Expert Chosen By Kitchener to Increase Output of Shells

"We are on the lookout for a good, strong business man, with some push and go," said Mr. Lloyd George in the House of Commons. The man required was one who could superintend the organization of the whole of the engineering community for the purpose of increasing the output of munitions of war. A few days later it was vaguely announced that Mr. George Macaulay Booth had taken up his duties at the War Office, and was busily engaged conferring with manufacturers and others anxious to help in this direction. Naturally, people jumped to the conclusion that Mr. Booth is the "push and go" man the Government was looking for. Mr. Booth denied the soft impeachment but there is no doubt that in him the Government found a particularly able lieutenant.

Son of Mr. Charles Booth, the philanthropist author whose investigations into life and labor in London and research into such questions as poverty in the big communities and old-age pensions are well known, and grandson of Macaulay's brother, Mr. Booth is a partner in the great shipping firm of Alfred Booth and Co., a director of the Booth line, and a cousin of Mr. A. A. Booth, the Cunard chairman. Like many other giants of the commercial world, little is known of Mr. Booth personally. But those behind the scenes have long recognised him as one of the most up-to-date business men of to-day.

Not that he is a stranger to Government departments, for he has done a good deal of work for the Board of Trade in connection with labor problems, and in particular has made a study of the conditions of the tailoring trade.

Mr. Booth is a striking example of the pushful young man of to-day. He is only thirty-eight years of age, and some idea of the high esteem in which his business qualities are held may be gathered from the fact that shortly before he went to the War Office he was elected a director of the Bank of England.

That Mr. Booth realized that he was faced with a formidable task was evident from his remarks to an interviewer concerning his work at the War Office. "We are going," he said, "to make a special attempt to increase the labor available for munitions of war. Our work is the one problem of concentrating on the output of guns and shells. It may be we shall find an opportunity of concentrating labor which is withdrawable from other work, and we shall have to see what we can do to increase the labor available for making these things. Our committee has just got its own little job, with which I am more or less connected at the moment. Our work does not include any of the other big problems, such as clothing and the like. It would be entirely wrong to describe me as the man of push and go."

GENERAL DMITRIEFF

Commander of one of the Russian armies. He conducted the siege of Przemysl, and after capturing the Austrian fortress had almost immediately to face the combined Austro-German attack to re-take it. Dmitrieff is a Bulgarian by birth.

Could Hardly Straighten Up For The Pain in Her Back.

Many women suffer from an excruciating pain in the back. They are not even able to look after the common duties of their housework, and cannot even walk at times.

The whole trouble is that the kidneys have become affected, and when the kidneys get "out of kilter" the whole system becomes deranged. On the first sign of a weak, lame, aching back you should not neglect it, for if you do, you may be sure that some serious kidney trouble will follow.

What you want is a kidney medicine, for kidneys only. This you will find in Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's Kidney Pills know nothing but kidney disorders, because they're made for kidneys only.

Mrs. George Craigie, Rose Valley, P.E.I., writes: "I am writing to tell you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills did for me. I was suffering with a lame back, and for several days I could hardly straighten up for the pain. I had used quite a lot of other kind of pills, but received no relief. Just then my sister told me about what "Doan's" had done for her, so I decided to try them. I used three boxes and I am completely cured. I do not hesitate to recommend them to all."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c a box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

SECOND BATTLE OF YPRES ONE OF GREATEST IN BRITISH HISTORY

Began With the Great Stand of the Canadians and Lasted for Nearly Three Weeks—British Infantry Proved Their Superiority Over the Enemy.

The most interesting account of the great battle of Ypres, which has yet reached America, appeared in the Lonon Morning Post of May 24th, and was written by "A Special Correspondent at British General Headquarters."

It reads as follows:—When the battle of Ypres can be written in detail it will yield one of the finest stories of heroism and endurance in the history of the British Army.

It is a story of sacrifice and dogged resistance against overwhelming odds; of fragments of battalions refusing to abandon seemingly impossible positions; of individual acts of courage which cannot be surpassed, and the success of a series of "forlorn hopes" which checked an over-confident enemy and saved Ypres. Above all, it is the story of a "soldiers' battle"—a battle fought under new conditions, which demanded all the initiative and self-reliance of the men who held the salient. The terrors of gas and the greatest bombardment yet experienced failed to demoralize them, and they went through the seeming chaos of a new fog of battle coldly determined and undismayed.

In this way the second battle of Ypres, which began on April 22 and lasted for nearly three weeks, was a British victory, although the shortened salient on the map may make it look like a defeat. It again proved the superiority of the British soldier over his enemy. Whenever the German infantry attempted to storm it was invariably thrown back, and only the employment of a vast number of heavy guns and the expenditure of an almost incredible number of high explosive shells, in addition to the use of gas, gave the enemy the strip of [illegible] line east and northeast of Ypres.

At no time did the Germans attempt a great infantry attack. Whenever their infantry came forward in the usual close formation our troops hurled them back again demoralized. They advanced without spirit, depending wholly on their great howitzers, and refusing to press forward when they saw men dropping on every side. Whenever our trenches were occupied it was only after a concentrated shell-fire had practically obliterated them from the line.

The Gas Experiments.

Apparently the Germans had not anticipated that their gas cylinders would play such an important part in this offensive. They experimented with the French along the Yser as they had already experimented in the Argonne, where the new weapon was a failure. It was not until they realized the havoc created in the French trenches that they decided to extend this mode of attack, with the result that the Canadians were "gassed" early on Saturday morning, the 24th.

A thirty minutes' bombardment, beginning at 3:30, preceded the opening of the gas cylinders against the Canadians. Then, the thick green mist came rolling over the broken ground from the enemy's empty front trench, several hundred yards away. It looked like vapour rising from a marsh, and the wind was strong enough to carry it rapidly towards the parapet of the Canadian line. One battalion had time to load and fire two rounds through the screen of gas before it came pouring over the sandbags, penetrating into every crevice of the dug-outs and choking the men who lay there. It was so thick at first that objects three feet distant were hardly recognizable.

Then the Germans tried one of their futile infantry attacks. While howitzers of every calibre and trench mortars raked the Canadians, the enemy's infantry could be seen massing in front of their trenches. When they came on—half-heartedly and with some of the men holding one arm in front of their faces — they were literally mown down by the waiting Canadians, who, although nearly blinded and suffocated by chlorine, still fired determinedly. The 8th Battalion the Winnipeg Rifles, known as the "Devil's Own," stuck to its trench, although many men were unconscious, and there they remained all day, although ill and heavily shelled.

A Territorial battery which defended the Canadian front was left in a wood, it being impossible to bring up the horses in time. The men remained with the guns until the Germans were only a few yards away, firing repeatedly, and, at the last moment, retiring with the breech blocks.

This was the beginning of the furious bombardment which pounded the Ypres salient for nearly three weeks. The next morning (Sunday) the enemy turned every available gun on the British position, and shells of all sizes from 17-in. to the sausage-shaped cylinders fired from minenwerfers poured a deadly enfilading fire into the entrenched infantry. There has never been anything like it. Officers who have had great experience of bombardments tell me that they could not have imagined such an extraordinary spectacle as that witnessed on the plain east and northeast of Ypres during the last week of April, and the first eight days of May.

Nine hundred shells of large calibre fell on one small field by two hours. "Lumpers"—sailing across the sky "with a noise like a tram"—bursting around the trenches at least every fifteen seconds. "Shell-trap Farm," a group of ruined buildings on the northwest of the salient of which more will be told presently, received 117 shells in forty minutes. Ordinary field batteries "grouped" their projectiles. The entire plain was thick with smoke and dotted with flame.

Hope of a Fight.

There was nothing to do but to sit tight and endure it day after day. The men crouched hard against the side of the trenches as best they could, or sheltered in the dug-outs. Frequently they were called to dig their comrades from piles of earth and overthrown sandbags. Acried fumes filled the air; the "stink shells," as one form of projectile is called, choked their lungs with gas, which, although not as deadly as that sprayed from cylinders, sufficed to weaken them. Yet they "stuck it."

Whenever the news was passed along the trenches that another infantry attack was impending fresh hope was raised that the Germans meant to fight. The battalions which were holding a position on the extreme right of the northern face of the salient actually got out of their trenches on one occasion, and cheered when they saw the enemy preparing for a bayonet rush.

"Come on, you blighters," they shouted, "give us a chance to get at you!" Every German who got within fifty yards of these trenches were killed; the others fled.

Not a single German infantry attack got home. One officer has told me how he watched them repeatedly forming up on the Grafenstafel hidge, 200 or more at a time, under officers who drove them forward in the attempt to profit by this incredible bombardment. The solid mass lumbered across the riddled fields until our men could distinguish every frightened face, and then, as great gaps were blown in the line, it wavered and was broken.

The occupants of the shattered British trenches watched these hesitating advances contemptuously. It was clear that the German infantry had no stomach for suddenly falling flat and trying to burrow into the soil with their hands. When a man fell dead or wounded, a comrade would use his body as cover. Some of them even dragged two or three helpless men into a heap and then crouched behind this impromptu shield.

Many showed abject terror. One middle-aged Wurtemburger ran blindly during the charge of his battalion until he nearly reached a trench held by the North Somerset Yeomanry, then knelt down and said his prayers. Men were dropping all around him. . . . The Somersets waited until he finished his prayers. . . .

After several infantry attacks had been repulsed with heavy losses, the enemy would redouble their howitzer pressure. You could imagine the fury of the German staff expressed in a sudden spurt of shelling. They threw away tons of ammunition as though animated by blind rage.

Men Against Guns.

The inevitable result was to blow in our trenches. Our men had to fall back, and the German infantry would advance to the destroyed position. Then the shattered British battalions would charge furiously and drive the Germans back to their own line.

Again they would charge, and again they would be blown out. So the unequal struggle went on, day after day. It was a contest of flesh and blood against a gigantic machine—of men against great guns. Whenever men met men, we won. Whenever the curtain of red-hot shells was dropping across our front, no living thing could pierce it. Shells, shells, shells—that is the story of the second battle of Ypres.

Gas did not play a decisive part in the operations after the first attack on the Canadians. There were subsequent attempts at gassing, but none of them succeeded like the first, even though the men at that time were without the means of combating it. They know the deadly nature of this new peril, but it never demoralized them.

THE COST OF KEEPING WAR PRISONERS GREAT

Britain Spending $500,000 a Week on Interned Men and When

The British admiralty and war office are not at all pleased over having to intern the 24,000 Germans of military age now at large. In spite of abuse for not taking such action sooner, which had long been a part of the anti-lilgeral propaganda of the conservatives and the yellow press, the government has interned few alien enemies able to support themselves. The government evidently put little stock in the spy scares of the yellow papers.

To intern 24,000 men means a cost estimated at a quarter of a million dollars a week, to say nothing of the soldiers required for guard duty who must be diverted from other service. Prisoners kept on nine internment ships are known to cost $100,000 a week to maintain, and it is assumed the big land camps must cost much more.

If the government carries out its proposed plan, however, some relief will be provided by the repatriation of 10,000 elderly interned prisoners, which will leave only 14,000 new ones to provide for.

A large proportion of Germans and Austrians caught in Great Britain at the outbreak of the war were waiters and hotel porters, entirely dependent on small wages. In Germany, the British interned are almost all tourists and students.

NEW LOCAL MANAGER OF A. McKIM LIMITED

Mr. C. T. Pearce, Formerly General Manager of the Daily News, Takes Important Position With Good-will of Every Canadian Newspaper Man

Mr. Chas. T. Pearce, until a few weeks ago General Manager of The Toronto Daily News, and who at the time disposed of his holdings in the paper, is to be the new Toronto Manager of A. McKim Limited, Newspaper Advertising Agency, in which business he will be interested in future. Mr. W. B. Somerset, who opened the Toronto office of A. McKim Limited some years ago, has been moved to Montreal, but will still give considerable of his time to the Toronto office.

Mr. Pearce is particularly well fitted to fill his new position, and A. McKim limited is to be congratulated on his association with the company. Formerly a manager of the Traders Bank he entered the newspaper field at the time Sir John Willison assumed editorial control of The Daily News. Mr. Pearce very soon demonstrated his ability as a newspaper manager, and has won a place for himself in the regard and estimation of the business men of Toronto.

During Mr. Pearce's newspaper experience his personality was most highly appreciated by all his associates. Among Toronto newspaper men he has always been most cordially liked; his intimate knowledge of the newspaper business in all its branches and his experience in advertising should prove a very valuable asset to the enterprising firm with which he has become connected. A. McKim Limited, is the oldest and largest advertising agency in Canada, with offices in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and London, England, and enjoys a reputation which is certainly not second to any other in its line of business. Mr. Pearce will enter upon his new work with the best wishes of every Canadian newspaper man.

MR. C. T. PEARCE.

"War Was the Will of God" Says Bishop of London

LONDON, June 11.— "God always has to let His people choose the gospel of the second best, and I believe with all my soul, I, Bishop of the Church of God, that the righteous war which we chose in August was according to the will of God, rather than an uprighteous peace."

This was the striking sentence in an address delivered Tuesday evening in St. Paul's Cathedral by the Bishop of London to three thousand of the City of London National Guard.

"War, said the Bishop, "was as ideally inconsistent with Christianity as slavery was, but even God could only get off each age the morality of which it was capable. God could only educate the world gradually. The Christian church had in itself all principles which make slavery impossible. But it took eighteen hundred years to abolish it. It had all the principles that made war impossible, but it would take another two thousand years to abolish war, and meanwhile God has to let His people choose the gospel of the second best.

"When I think of what Christ died for on Good Friday,' continued the Bishop, "it was very much like what our boys are dying for out there in Flanders. Christ died for freedom, honour, purity and love. Our boys out there are martyrs for the same cause as truly as St. Stephen was martyred, who fell after his captain. If God loves freedom, honour and chivalry, then I say the contest we are fighting to-day is on the side of God and will become God's holy war."

MAYOR OF BOSTON BECOMES GODFATHER

To Infant Son of Mr. J. T. Carter Formerly of Peterboro'

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 10.— James M. Curley, mayor of Boston, paid a visit to New Bedford. His Honour put aside all the business cares and worries that go with a mayor's job to be "sworn in" as godfather to John Patrick Carter, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Carter of 54 Liberty street, and formerly of Peterboroughborough. Mrs. William Hawkey of Toronto, Canada, was the godmother of the child. The ceremony took place at St. Lawrence Catholic church, the Rev. Fr. Staunton officiating.

It is not the lot of many youngsters to be blessed with the honour of having a mayor for a godfather, and undoubtedly Little John Patrick Carter will be proud of the fact in years to come. Although no prediction has been made as yet, it is the general opinion that Little John's parents and friends that he will become a financier. He was given a flying start by Mayor Curley, who presented him with a $10 gold piece.

Mr. John T. Carter referred to above was formerly connected with Peterborough Cordage.

DEAD SOLDIER'S DEVOTION

OTTAWA, Ont., June 10.—A splendid example of patriotic spirit and self sacrifice has been furnished by Private Neill Campbell, of the 10th Battalion of Winnipeg. He not only gave his life for his country but bequeathed to the Patriotic Fund all his estate. The amount of it is not known, and, any way, does not matter. What is commended is the principle that actuated the fallen soldier. Little is known of him, except that he was a Scotchman, who enlisted in the West. The nominal roll gives no next of kin. Private Campbell was wounded at Langemarck and died on May 25th. He left a will bequeathing all his back pay and the residence of his estate to the Canadian Patriotic Fund. His act is warmly commended.

Cheese Prices Are Back to 15 Cent Mark

Cheese prices have receded rapidly. A few weeks ago the highest quotations were almost at 19 cents. Gradually they declined to 17 cents, but yesterday's figures are an evidence of a complete route. Fifteen cents was the top price at Kingston, Brockville and Vankleek Hill. Brockville refused to sell at fifteen. Advices say that the market is in disorder. Heavy production knocked the slender props from under the big prices and with a continuance of favourable weather conditions there is apparently little hope for extraordinary prices.

All of Switzerland's glaciers are receding perceptibly, one notable one having shrunk more than 1,000 feet in the last ten years.

Mr. James Sutherland, who has conducted a grocery business at 323 George street for the past twenty-one years is about to move to 392½ Water street, where he will conduct a business similar to that which has characterized his efforts in the past. The store which Mr. Sutherland is about to vacate in favour of the United Cigar Stores of Toronto is well known to local citizens. It is situated near the corner of George and Charlotte streets and for years has been home and place of business to the present occupant. Both in business and private life Mr. Sutherland has always enjoyed the respect of the community and his dealings with the public have always been above reproach.

The change, which is due to take place on July the fifteenth next will obliterate the identity of one of the best known places of business on George street. Text of the U.S. Note to Germany are matters concerning which the Government of the United States is in a position to give the Imperial [illegible] mation. Of the facts alleged in your Excellency's note, if true, the Government of the United States would have been bound to take official cognizance in performing its duty as a neutral power and in enforcing its national laws.

GERMANY MISINFORMED.

"It was its duty to see to it that the Lusitania was not armed for offensive action; that she was not serving as a transport; that she did not carry a cargo prohibited by the statutes of the United States, and that if in fact she was a naval vessel of Great Britain she would not receive clearance as a merchantman; and its performed that duty and enforced its statutes with scrupulous vigilance through its regularly constituted officials. It is able, therefore, to assure the Imperial German Government that it has been misinformed. If the Imperial German Government should deem itself to be in possession of convincing evidence that the officials of the Government of the United States did not perform these duties with thoroughness, the Government of the United States sincerely hopes that it will submit that evidence for consideration.

"Whatever may be the contentions of the Imperial German Government regarding the carriage of contraband of war on board the Lusitania, or regarding the explosion of that material by the torpedo, it need only be said that in the view of this Government these contentions are irrelevant to the question of the legality of the methods used by the German naval authorities in sinking the vessel.

AN UNPARALLELED CRIME.

"But the sinking of passenger ships involves principles of humanity which throw into the background any special circumstances of detail that may be thought to affect the cases, principles which lift it, as the Imperial German Government will no doubt be quick to recognize and acknowledge, out of the class of ordinary subjects of diplomatic discussion or of international controversy. Whatever be the other facts regarding the Lusitania, the principal fact is that a great steamer, primarily and chiefly a conveyance for passengers, and carrying more than a thousand souls who had no part or lot in the conduct of the war, was torpedoed and sunk without so much as a challenge or a warning, and that men, women and children were sent to their death in circumstances unparalleled in modern warfare. The fact that more than one hundred American citizens were among those who perished made it the duty of the Government of the United States to speak of these things, and once more, with solemn emphasis, to call the attention of the Imperial German Government to the grave responsibility which the Government of the United States conceives that it has incurred in this tragic occurrence, and to the indisputable principle upon which that responsibility rests. The Government of the United States is contending for something much greater than mere rights of property or privileges of commerce. It is contending for nothing less high and sacred than the rights of humanity, which every Government honours itself in respecting, and which no Government is justified in resigning on behalf of those under its care and authority.

WHERE U. S. STANDS.

"Only her actual resistance to capture or refusal to stop when ordered to do so for the purpose of visit could have afforded the commander of the submarine any justification for so much as putting the lives of those on board the ship in jeopardy. This principle the Government of the United States understands the explicit instructions issued on August 3, 1914, by the Imperial German Admiralty to its commanders at sea to have recognized and embodied, as do the naval codes of all other nations, and upon it every traveller and seaman had a right to depend. It is upon this principle of humanity as well as upon the law founded upon this principle that the United States must stand.

WOULD ACT AS INTERMEDIARY.

"The Government of the United States is happy to observe that your Excellency's note closes with the intimation that the Imperial German Government is willing now, as before, to accept the good offices of the United States in an attempt to come to an understanding with the Government of Great Britain by which the character and conditions of war upon the sea may be changed. The Government of the United States would consider it a privilege thus to serve its friends and the world. It stands ready at any time to convey to either Government any intimation or suggestion the other may be willing to have conveyed and which may facilitate the early settlement of the present distressing controversy.

EXPECTS REPARATION.

"In the meantime, whatever arrangement may happily be made between the parties to the war, and whatever may in the opinion of the Imperial German Government have been the provocation or the circumstantial justification for the past acts of its commanders at sea, the Government of the United States confidently looks to see the justice and humanity of the Government of Germany vindicated in all cases where Americans have been wronged or their rights as neutrals invaded.

"The Government of the United States, therefore, very earnestly and very solemnly renews the representations of its note transmitted to the Imperial German Government on the 15th of May, and relies in these representations upon the principles of humanity, the universally recognized understandings of international law, and the ancient friendship of the German nation.

RESPECT NEUTRAL LIVES.

"The Government of the United States cannot admit that the proclamation of a war zone from which neutral ships have been warned to keep away may be made to operate as in any degree an abbreviation of the rights either of American ship masters or of American citizens bound on lawful errands as passengers on merchant ships of belligerent nationality. It does not understand the Imperial German Government to question those rights. It understands it also to accept as established beyond question the principle that the lives of noncombatants cannot lawfully or rightfully be put in jeopardy by the capture or destruction of an unresisting merchantman, and to recognize the obligation to take sufficient precaution to ascertain whether a suspected merchantman is of fact of belligerent nationality or is in fact carrying contraband of war under a neutral flag. The Government of the United States deems it reasonable to expect that the Imperial German Government will adopt the measures necessary to put these principles into practice in respect of the safeguarding of American lives and American ships, and asks for assurances that this will be done.

"Robert Lansing,

"Secretary of State ad interim."

WRITTEN BY PRESIDENT.

While the note bears the signature of Robert Lansing, Acting Secretary of State, the note was penned by President Wilson.

There was a general feeling of relief in Washington when the United States note to Germany was made public by the State Department at 6 o'clock last evening and the nature of its terms became generally known.

The note is less aggressive, less provocative in its language than the note of May 15.

NO HARSH PHRASEOLOGY.

There was no dissent from that view. The new note contains not a suggestion of bluster. There are no such phrases in it as "strict accountability" or "omit any word or act necessary," such as gave the note of May 15 a menacing character.

It was the absence of such threatening phrases which created the general impression that the new note gave assurance of a peaceable settlement of the issue between the two countries.

But there is no abatement of the insistence on the principles of the law which the President sought to uphold in his previous communication.

Funeral of A. Heslip Saturday Afternoon

The funeral of the late Andrew Heslip will leave the family residence, River Road, Auburn, at 2.30 p.m., Saturday, and proceed to the Bethany Tabernacle, where a short service will be held and thence to the Little Lake Cemetery. The ministers in charge will be Rev. Dr. Zimmerman of Toronto, and Rev. E. E. Johnston of Peterborough.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robt. Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia, or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

Jury Went to Havelock at Noon to Examine Saw Mill

Majority of Jurors Had a Misty Idea of How Saw Guard Operated and What Further Protection Should Have Been Provided.

When it was suggested to the jury in the Clark Spencer case that they might be assisted in their consideration of the evidence by a trip to Spencer brothers saw mill at Havelock, a majority of the twelve "good men and true" decided in favour of the trip. The jaunting jury consisted of J. Worboy, H. Mowry, D. M. Minnicola, W. A. Robertson, W. A. Thompson, Jas. Robertson, P. McMillan, Albert Nicholls, R. W. Wilson, Fred Board, Wm. Cavanagh, Thos. Stevenson.

County Constable Archie Moore was placed in charge of the jurors who were advised by Judge Huycke to inform themselves as to the mill conditions under which the plaintiff Clark almost severed his right hand on a circular saw last December. Mr. Kerr and Mr. Gordon, Clark and the Spencers accompanied the jury. His Honour decided that his own attendance at the mill investigation would not be required. Court was adjourned until 3.45 p.m. On this schedule the jury left the city about 11.30 this morning and on arriving at Havelock had to proceed a mile out of the village to the Spencer premises to examine the shingle department and return on this afternoons train. Several of the jurors stated that they understood the working of the saw and its spring guard, but others had a hazy idea of it and said so.

John Peeling.

When the court re-opened this morning Mr. Kerr called John Peeling, a sawyer of considerable experience in Ontario and Quebec. A few days ago he visited the Spencer mill and saw something he had never seen before. A jointer was delivering power to a button saw. The jointer was belted to the line shaft. Witness said the spring board in front of the saw should have had a block under it at the top or bottom. The board or guage would then be a perfect guard against the saw.

If they did not wish to use the saw they should have taken it off. This would only take twenty minutes. Peeling explained that the saw had a standard or frame alongside it. The guage or "spring board" could have been blocked where it met the frame at the top.

At this stage Mr. Kerr recalled Mr. Gordon's statement yesterday that he would have the jury examine the machinery and apparently decided that the present was the most preferable time.

The jury retired for a few minutes to discuss the proposal. Judge Huycke said he regretted the delay, but the time would be well spent if the jurors were enabled to clearly understand the conditions at the mill.

When Johnny Wants A Cold Drink

Another Problem For Mothers

After settling the pure food question for baby, and the pure ice question for the household, Mother has now a moment of leisure to decide what Johnny and the rest of the children should have when they want a cold drink.

Montserrat Lime Fruit Juice is the verdict. Tens of thousands of cases have been used in the British Navy this year, and the British Expeditionary forces. The reason is, it is healthy, quenches the thirst, and is a delightful summer beverage.

Montserrat Lime Fruit Juice is especially valuable in the country, where the chances are that the water is not pure.

Montserrat Lime Fruit Juice destroys the germ of Typhoid. McGill University Professors have proven this.

Montserrat, therefore, insures you against Typhoid, besides it is so refreshing, cooling and thirst assuaging.

Naval Correspondent Finds German Admiralty Has No Strategic Plan

Absence of Settled Policy is Attributed Either to Lack of Clear Conception of Method by Which it Might Attain its Object or to Loss of Initiative That Fell to Britain When War Was Declared.

LONDON, June 10—A naval correspondent writes:

Incidents of the sea warfare of a varied nature continue to follow one another at frequent intervals. One day it is an outpost affair in the North Sea; then a catastrophe like the sinking of the Lusitania. The chase and capture of a batch of trawlers follow, and then there are a destroyer attack in the Dardenelles, and the torpedoing of a battle ship. If he appalling and inhuman character of the destruction of the Lusitania is put on one side all these incidents must be regarded as skirmishes in their relation to the war. This is the way they must be considered in their proper perspective. Not a single one of the naval incidents of the last six weeks or so can be regarded as likely to have any material effect upon the progress of the great struggle. The anaconda grip of the British fleet grows tighter every day, and Germany, although she has the second strongest navy in the world, makes no effective attempt to relieve it.

An aspect equally interesting in connection with recent incidents is the very slight relation tha one has o another. This aspect has been characteristic of the occurrences and actions of the sea warfare. It is illustrative of the whole conduct of the German naval forces. The use of the great weapon forged by Grand Admiral von Tirpitz has seemed, from a strategical point of view, to be at haphazard—aimless and largely fortuitous. In deed, there re no indications of any settled plan for the use of the eGrman navy.

To a very large extent this may be due to the fact that the Germans lost the initiative at sea at the beginning of the war. They must been credited not only with having made considerable preparations and arrangements in advance, and with scientific method, but lso with having a strategical idea which could be materialized, in the popular phrase, by the pressing of a button. But all these schemes went away when the British fleets, in superior force, were found on the outbreak of hostilities to be at their war stations, and when the British fleets, in superior force, wer found on the outbreak of hostilities to be at their war stations, and when the British submarines appeared in the mouths of the Jahde and Elbe. If any plan existed for the utilization of the German fleet on a large scale, there has been no evidence of it.

If the so-called war of attrition is analyzed, it resolves itself into, firstly, an indiscriminate use of mines with no apparently settled object, and, second, a wasteful expenditure of zeal and energy, not to speak of material, in the use of submarines. No commensurate results have been achieved by this war of attrition, while the balance of material loss in effectives has been on the German side. So, too, in the war of commerce destruction. That the German plans were carefully worked on paper, and that a large amount of money was spent upon giving them a good foundation abroad may be accepted. When however, the time came to apply the projects in parctice there was utter failure. The mind of the German bureaucrat does not seem fitted to meet eemrgencies. The Anglo-Saxon, on the other hand, on both sides of the Altnatic, never shows to better advanage than when faced with difficulties and obliged to exercise invention and resource in order to meet obstacles in the way of the execution of his original conception. The varying phases of the war seem to bear out this estimate of the character of the German officials; it is visible in he moveemnts on land as well as at sea.

An instructive example may be found in the recent occurrences in the Straits. It was always predicted before this war began that the Germans would make a striking and immediate use of their destroyers, an arm of the navy in which Admiral von Tirpitz was specially interested. What German naval officers can do has been shown by the attack on the Goliath, for there can be little doubt hat the eight craft which carried out this enterprise on the night of May 12h were not only organized by Germans, but probably commanded by them. Yet in the North Sea there has been no bolt from the blue of this nature. Though Germany has a much larger and more effective torpedo flotilla than Turkey, she has not delivered a single successful attack on any of the squadrons or vessels of Sir John Jellicoe's fleet. Not only have her destroyers from Emden and Cuxhaven achieved nothing but they have never made an appearance outside their territorial waters without suffering considerable loss, and this in the Baltic as well as the North Sea.

Presently more light may be thrown upon this phase of the war afloat, which has attracted a good deal of attention among navl men. Up to the present, however, the only explanations put forward for the manifest lack of any coordination in the German conduct of their fleets and flotillas are two in number. Either they had no clear conception of the strategy by which their object was to be obtained, or, with the loss of initiative and the consequent breakdown of their original plan, they failed to find an adequate substitute.

ANGLICANS WOULD BAR LIQUOR DURING THE WAR

Strong Resolution Adopted by Synod of Toronto Diocese—Decided Aversion to Continuance of Traffic.

TORONTO, June 11.—The Anglican Synod had an earnest temperance debate last night, most of the speeches breathing a decided aversion to the continuance of the liquor traffic in these testing times. Archdeacon Ingles, presenting the report of the Committee on Temperance and Moral and Social Reform, moved a resolution chiefly calling for the shortening of hours. He explained that in committee opinion was evenly divided between what the resolution proposed and prohibition during the war time, and he gave his deciding vote in favour of the more moderate course, thinking they could not be unanimous for prohibition, even during the time of war. Rev. W. L. Armitage, Parkdale, in a thrilling speech, moved the more advanced resolution, and was seconded by Dr. N. W. Hoyles, K.C., who also made a powerful appeal. The Synod adopted both resolutions, and it was noted that Mr. Armitage's met with no serious opposition.

For Shorter Hours.

The resolution put forward by Archdeacon Ingles was in the following terms:

"That the newly-appointed Board of License Commissioners be requested to shorten the hours of sale in all bars by requiring them to close on each week day, except Saturday, at 7 p.m., and that on Saturday all bars and liquor stores be required to close at 12 (noon), remaining closed until 8 a.m. on Monday, and also that the sale or other disposal of liquor in taverns and shops be prohibited on every public holiday."

Prohibition During War.

Mr. Armitage's resolution, in part read:

"In view of the danger occasioned to the Empire by the ravages of this deadly and incidious foe to our race, and the vast importance to the Empire in this time of strain and peril of conserving all our forces of body, mind and purse for the great task before us, this Synod most earnestly advocates and approves of the policy of total prohibition of the liquor traffic during the time of war, and instructs the Committee on Temperance and Moral and Social Reform to take all steps in their power, in conjunction with other religious bodies, to procure legislation in order to achieve this result."

Mr. Armitage's Arraignment.

"I have seen the most disgraceful things night after night when it has been my duty to come home at 10, 11 and 12 o'clock, to see the soldiers of the King carried home on jitneys thrown on to the street fighting. Similar scenes were to be witnessed on the street cars. I was struck during one of these scuffles, and it was just through my own self-respect I did not throw one of them off the car." In these words the Rev. W. L. Armitage, Parkdale, opened his strong plea for closing the bars during the war and effectively negativing "these abominable institutions which are degrading our manhood, which are destroying our homes and frustrating our work to advance the Kingdom of God.

What Anglicans Could Do.

"I can tell you," added the clergyman, "as I have gone up and down the country speaking on behalf of local option, that when the Church of England said 'it will go' it went, and when it was said 'I am not going to take any part because it is a political dodge' the thing remained. It is to-day the Church that is on trial and not the liquor traffic."

Archdeacon Ingles, after Mr. Armitage had spoken, was not averse to withdrawing his motion

Fire Drill in Public Schools

Five Hundred and Twenty-Six Pupils Leave King Edward School in Fifty Seconds

Fire Chief Howard conducted his annual drill in all the city schools yesterday. He was accompanied by His Worship Mayor Buller, Alderman G. Walter Green, School Trustees J. H Smith, Mr. Andrew Brown, Adjutant McElhiney and Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr. Each of the gentlemen was accompanied by his wife.

The party left the Fire Station at 1.20 p.m. and made the round trip of all the schools in automobiles. It was a pleasing sight to see the children at the different schools marching out with real military step and in perfect order.

The principals and teachers are deserving of very great credit for the splendid time made, which is given below.

The ladies and gentlemen of the party were loud in their praises of the splendid performance on the part of the teachers and scholars.

Fire drill is conducted in all the schools at intervals throughout the year and occasionally the Fire Chief makes an odd trip to one or two of the schools all alone and according to his agreement with the City Council the Chief is compelled to make a regular annual inspection and conduct fire drill.

During the afternoon His Worship Mayor Buller and Alderman Green wished to test the efficiency of the Fire Department and incidentally the fire alarm system. The Chief was instructed to pull Box No. 14, at the corner of Westcott and Aylmer streets, and the firemen responded in the following manner: Chief's buggy arrived first, time 2 mins. 20 secs.; hose waggon arrived next, time 2 mins. 50 secs.; then came the hook and ladder truck, time 3 mins. 5 secs. His Worship the Mayor and Alderman Green were well pleased with the turnout.

Alderman Duffus, the chairman of the Fire, Water and Light committee and City Solicitor Gordon had intended accompanying the party, but through pressure of business was unavoidably detained.

QUEBEC & The Young FARMER

(1) An underground passage.
(2) The cheese class.
(3) Repairing agricultural machinery.
(4) Cheese making.
(5) Butter making at Macdonald College, St. Annes de Bellevue, P.Q.

SEVEN million dollars have been spent in providing the young men and young women of Canada desiring instruction in scientific farming and domestic economy with a magnificent building wonderfully equipped and staffed by over sixty expert teachers and professors. This is Macdonald College, situated in the pretty, historic village of St. Annes de Bellevue, twenty miles by C. P. R. from Montreal. Sir William Macdonald, its founder, wished to benefit especially the farmer's son and the farmer's daughter so that they should take a pride in good farming instead of drifting into crowded city professions. There are short courses and more elaborate courses for both sexes, and so splendid is the teaching that students come from the United States, South Africa and the West Indies to benefit by such facilities for education. But these have to pay, whereas the sons and daughters of Quebec are taught free how to make butter and cheese, dairying, poultry farming, fruit growing and all the arts that are helping to make Canada the greatest agricultural country in the world.

Last year 600 pupils were registered at this college, and twenty graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Agricultural Science at McGill; 3,000 farmers came to visit the college in connection with different agricultural excursions. Macdonald College also supplies lecturers for the "Better Farming" trains which the C. P. R. sends out each year to teach those who have to stay at home and organize short courses in various branches of agriculture throughout the Province of Quebec.

PETERBORO WON 10-4 IN OPENING GAME OF O.A.L.A. SEASON

Millbrook Led by 4 to 2 at One Stage But Petes Overhauled Them Before Half-time and Won Going Away in the Second Half—Wild Shooting Cost Goals Early in the Game.

The Peterborough Lacrosse Club got off to a good start yesterday when they defeated Millbrook in an intermediate O. A. L. A. game at Riverside Park, by 10 goals to 4. Millbrook, with a team composed mainly of youngsters, gave the Petes a warm argument in the early minutes and at one stage in the first period led by 4 to 2, but when the homesters warmed up and got going they were all over the yellow-jerseyed visitors. At half-time it was 4 to 4 and in the last two periods it was all Peterborough, the locals scoring six times, while Millbrook failed to find the nets. Only a small crowd saw the game and Millbrook probably had more supporters than the homesters. It is up to Peterborough sport lovers to turn out and encourage the club in its endeavour to put Peterborough back on the lacrosse map.

The Petes' team after the first half, played good lacrosse. Early in the game wild shooting threw away many scores and they should have had a lead at the half if the frequent opportunities had been taken advantage of. The marksmanship improved in the second period and the visitors never had a chance. The Peterborough defence checked effectively with the veterans Dillon and Mien showing the way, while Gilman performed well in the nets. Crough did some very useful work. On the attack Hamilton was especially prominent, his shifty work around the nets, and good shooting making him dangerous at all times. McCoy showed his old-time cleverness, and the veteran G. Robertson also did well, although both he and Dunsford had trouble in locating the nets.

For Millbrook, Hanley, the Captain of the team, and Fryer, the auburn-haired centre player, was the best. Hanley was brilliant in the first period, and although he got a bad crack over the eye, which bled profusely for the rest of the game, kept going all the way. Fryer had a fine turn of speed, and led many attacks on the Peterborough nets.

Mr. Richards of Millbrook was referee, and the teams were:

Great Programme For To-morrow's Ball Games

2 p.m.—Classics vs. Empires.
4 p.m., East City vs. Thistles.

This is the programme for to-morrow's City League double-header at Riverside Park, and with good weather the crowd should be the largest of the season. In the first game the rejuvenated Empires, with Art Johnston as Manager, will battle the Classics. The Empires will have Flaherty on the mound for them, while the Classics will pin their faith to Lorne Rose, who pitched such good ball for them last Saturday. In the second game the Thistles and East City teams will clash, with Huyoke and Hill as the battery for the Thistles, and Kirn and Swanson for the East City team.

A. Quinlan will umpire both games.

RUBE DENEAU IS NOW A TARGET FOR BOTTLE THROWING CROWD

Quite a surprise was created in Canadian League circles yesterday when it was announced that Rube Deneau, the manager of the Brantford Club, had resigned, after figuring in the league ever since it was first organized. Deneau handed his resignation to the Brantford club, and it was accepted at a meeting of the board of directors. "Slab" Warner, the elongated pitcher of the Brants, has been placed in charge of the team, temporarily, and if he can make good will be given the position permanently. Warner has had experience as a manager, having piloted a team in the South Michigan league for a part of one season.

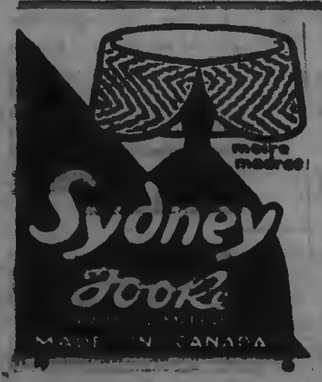
People in close touch with the affairs of the Brantford Club have been expecting that Deneau would not finish the season as pilot of the Red Sox, as there has been considerable dissatisfaction over the manner in which the team has shown up this season. Brantford folks believe that Deneau gathered the material for a winning team but could not understand why he was not getting the desired results. When his resignation was handed in yesterday, it was accepted with little comment.

Deneau will not be lost to the Canadian league fans, however, as he has been appointed on the umpiring staff by President Fitzgerald. He will probably officiate for the first time in the game to-day between Hamilton and Guelph.

Rube should make a first-class arbitrator, judging by the way he has tried to direct other umpires how to call decisions. He has told them time after time that they were wrong, and now the big fellow will have an opportunity of telling some of the other fellows to go back to the bench in just the same tone of voice that it was told to him on more than one occasion.

Deneau has been actively connected with the Canadian League ever since it was organized. The first year he piloted the Berlin team and every person knows what an easy time he had trotting to the championship. He had the best team in the league by far and was able to win games just when he felt like it. The next year he went to London where he met with fair success, although he was unable to grab off the flag for the Cockneys. Since leaving London he has had charge of the Red Sox, but was never able to put them up to the top of the heap.

There is no reason why Deneau should not make a great success as an umpire. He has played every position on the field at various times, and when he figures as umpire, his record will be complete.



GOLF

On account of the wet weather the players in the Stratton trophy will have until Monday night, instead of Saturday night, to finish their games.

UNCERTAIN TERM TORTURE, SAYS FREED CONVICT

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 11.—"The intermediate sentence as now applied, is best described as an instrument of torture."

This is the statement of "4342," a twin city man who has been released from State prison at Stillwater, and who has just published a book—"Through the Mill" dealing with the prison.

Unlike most books written by men who have served prison terms, "Through the Mill" is decidedly complimentary to the Minnesota State Prison. There is criticism of some of the conditions at Stillwater but "4342" declares that he was agreeably surprised at the treatment he received in the State prison. His chief criticism is against the prison intermediate sentence law which prevents a judge from fixing terms of sentence except in cases of homicide.

In his introductory chapter "4342" says:

"By the time I started for Stillwater for the long grind I was convinced that I was about to enter upon a period of daily torture. My first ten days behind prison walls showed me how entirely wrong my ideas had been."

The former convict describes in detail the method of receiving new prisoners, the Bertillion system and other procedure. He says the food is not of sufficient variety, the coffee and tea nothing "but coloured water" and that the food is wholesome and there is plenty of it.

The method of punishment used in Stillwater of "cuffing up" prisoners to cell bar is described in detail. "When a prisoner was placed in a punishment cell," says the writer, "he was stripped of his clothing, given a third-grade outfit and handcuffed to the barred door of a cell and the wooden door closed in front of the barred door which he stood facing. If he was tall he did not have to reach above his shoulders to get his hands through the cross bars, where he rested his wrists. If he was of medium height he had a longer way to reach, and a more uncomfortable position in which to stand. If he was short, he was very much out of luck, as he was all strung up by the wrists."

Convict "4342" declares that the indeterminate sentence law, the law which provides a prisoner must serve at least the minimum provided under the old law and that his release after that period depends on his conduct, and the action of the Board of Parole, is a bad law. He says men who have perfect conduct "scores" are not released at the end of the minimum term many men go insane as a result of constant worry as to when they will be released.

Provincial Board of C.O.F. Select Father Phelan as Delegate

The 12th Annual Provincial Convention of the Catholic Order of Foresters concluded at Sudbury yesterday, was one of the most successful in the history of that organization. A great deal of work was done, and the delegates were all enthusiastic over the flourishing condition of the order.

Rev. Father Phelan, rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, was re-elected to the trustee of the Provincial Board for the next two years. He was also chosen as one of the fifteen delegates who will represent Ontario at the international convention to be held in Providence, R.I., in August.

Resolutions were unanimously adopted deprecating the discord between the English and French-speaking elements of the population in the Catholic body, and pledging support to the Catholic Church Extension Society of Canada.

The feeling of the convention regarding the war was voiced in the following resolution:—"It is a matter of congratulation that so many of the members of the C.O.F. have already gone to the front in defence of our menaced liberty and the glorious traditions of the British Empire. Many others are preparing to follow them across the seas, and we hereby pledge ourselves to promote and encourage recruiting from our ranks." The resolution was unanimously adopted.

The delegate from St. Peter's Court, Peterborough, was Mr. N. Trombly.

Ham With a Flavor

Palatable, appetising smoked bacon and hams are becoming more and more the favourite meats here, as well as elsewhere. Bacon and ham are relished universally, and it is therefore of importance that it should be made appetizing. It is worthy of note that the Matthews-Blackwell brands of this food is growing in increasing favour and the demand during the summer season is greatest.

If people who eat ham sandwiches and want the quality that has the most nourishment would rise and demand the flavour of the Matthews-Blackwell, they would know the difference. Their ham has carried the fame of Peterborough to many parts of the world. Raw or cooked, it is among the superlative delights of the epicure.

Tennis Tea Great Success

A delightful "tennis tea" was held at St. Andrew's church last evening when the members of the club turned out to the number of 35. Steps are being taken to add another court on one of the front lawns of the church and it is expected that electric lights may be installed so that the cool evening hour may be enjoyed. A bountiful supper was served in the Guild room at seven o'clock. The rapid growth in membership and in interest of the club is due not a little to the enthusiasm of the president, Mr. Edgar Walton and the capable list of officers associated with him.

This organization not only offers favourable opportunity for learning this popular game, but also greatly promotes sociability and good fellowship, many evidences of which were apparent last evening.

Hydro Submit More Figures

Havelock is Still Considering Proposed Change in Lighting System

HAVELOCK, June 11.—At the last council meeting a letter was read from the Hydro Electric Commission submitting figures for Havelock, as follows:

The Reeve intimated that he purposed calling a meeting of the Power Committee appointed some months ago, and lay the matter before them.

G. A. BRETHEN HAS A GREAT HOLSTEIN

G. A. Brethen of Norwood may be the owner of the champion cow of the world. His wonderful Holstein cow, Ranwerd, has now completed her seventh month in R. O. P. and A.R. O. yearly work and has well over 19,000 lbs. in that period. In her sixth month, March, she had 2,735.7 lbs. which perhaps is the best ever reported in either American or Canadian records for this period after freshening. She looks and feels fine, enjoys her work as thoroughly as her owner. —Norwood Register.

That Lords' Day Alliance Controversy

The Examiner has already printed enough upon the above subject by two anonymous contributors. Two more letters on the subject have been received. If the writers value their manuscripts they will be kept for them a day or two, for they will be put to no other use. A controversy of this kind has the capacity of extending indefinitely; and it, besides, seems to be a waste of space to print long letters upon a subject upon which there is no essential disagreement, among the mass of Christian people.

OBITUARY

MR. ANDREW HESLIP.

After an illness of about three years' duration, Mr. Andrew Heslip passed away at noon yesterday, at his home, River Road.

The late Mr. Heslip was a native of Belfast, Ireland, but has been a resident of this city for almost 26 years. His wife predeceased him about 20 years. He was employed up to a year ago at the Auburn Woollen Mills, but since that time has been unable to work. He was a member of Bethany Tabernacle.

Two sons, Messrs. Marshall and William, both residing in the city at present, and one daughter, Miss Elizabeth, at home, survive.

Wife Under Ban of Talk of Men Thirteen Years

CHICAGO, June 10.—Custom, centuries old, transplanted from Assyria to the heart of Chicago, which formed a prison for a pretty woman, has been shattered. The woman declares herself liberated. For thirteen years she was not allowed to talk to any man except her husband. She was kept as closely to her home as any member of a harem in the Oriental countries.

Hereafter when the grocery man comes, Mrs. Victoria Siyufy will not be forced to hide herself until he was gone, and when she meets the janitor of the building where she lives she will speak to him.

A divorce suit, the first ultramodern American institution to enter her life, broke down the barriers which has been raised by her husband, Gabriel Siyufy, who, though a Christian, had been unable to shake off all the customs of his native land.

Mrs. Siyufy escaped from her prison some days ago and, guided by a servant in the house, went to the offices of Eastman & White, attorneys, and told her story. The divorce suit was filed in the Superior Court, but it will never be heard. The mere introduction of the modern into the home was sufficient.

"My husband has agreed that I shall live as other women live," Mrs. Siyufy told a reporter. "Do you recline that you are the second wife? "I am a Greek, while my husband is an Assyrian. I received a liberal education as a girl, but was married at the age of seventeen, after knowing my husband only seven days. That was the custom.

"When we came to America he forced me to continue the custom of Assyria. He knew it would attract too much attention if I wore one of the veils, so he kept me inside.

"When the grocery boy came my husband met him. The janitor came in to fix the radiator, and I had to hide until he was gone. We are both Christians, my husband being a member of the First Presbyterian Church. When I went to church with him I was not allowed to talk with any man.

"When he learned I had started suit for divorce he was broken-hearted. We have arranged now so I will live as other women. I will be allowed to go and come as I please. Yes—I am even going to vote if I can.

"It won't be necessary to try the divorce case. Whether we will separate we have not determined, but whatever arrangement is made, I am liberated.

"He was afraid of the winds and flowers, especially in the spring. It is an old Assyrian superstition that the voice of a man who wishes to woo another's wife can be borne to her ear on the breeze, and the flowers will show her his face. He never seemed to be able to forget the old Assyrian mysticism, although he has lived in America many years."

"Please be kind to me. I only tried to do what I thought was right," is all Gabriel will say. He is a rug merchant and has amassed a comfortable fortune in America.

Austro-German Forces Suffered Heavily in Recent Fighting

ENTIRE SECOND CONTINGENT IS NOW IN FRANCE

AUSTRO-GERMAN LOSSES IN BATTLE AT ZURAVNO IS PLACED AT 40,000

Less Than Half the Enemy's Forces Who Crossed the River at the Above Point Escaped Slaughter or Capture.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PETROGRAD, June 12.—Unofficial despatches from Lemberg to-day estimated the Austro-German losses in dead, wounded and prisoner's in Thursday's battle at Zuravno at 40,000. Less than half the enemy's forces who crossed the river at that point escaped slaughter of capture, under heavy pressure from the Russian left wing. Gen. Linsingen's Austro-German army that attempted to move on Lemberg from the south, is being rolled back all along the Dneister. An official statement to-day reported the capture of one thousand Austro-Germans last night in the battle at Ottynia, twenty miles southeast of Stanislau. To the north in the region of Shavli and along the Dubissa river, the Russians, after repulsing strong German attacks, have taken the offensive.

The matter has been discussed in committee who will recommend the appointment of Mr. Crowe. The latter who resides at 376 Brock street is a moulder by trade.

"MUST HAVE SHELLS" SAYS LLOYD GEORGE

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, June 12.—Addressing representatives of engineering firms at Cardiff, Wales, David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, said that it was his purpose to organize South Wales to speed up the output of munitions just as Lancashire had been organized, and to establish two or three factories. Referring to the direct need of ammunition, Mr. Lloyd George said:

"I hardly like to say it, but we are still short of shells. We must get them, and it will not do for some to undertake the responsibility and some to shirk. There must be equality of sacrifice and contribution.

"I do not want to talk about compulsory powers. It is unpleasant topic. But, if you know of any one who is likely to be a shirker, it is just as well that you remind him of the Defence of the Realm Act, and the powers under which Parliament created the Ministry for which it is responsible."

SEVERE STORM SWEEPS OVER STONEY LAKE

Destructive Fire Narrowly Averted

The first severe storm of the season swept over Stoney Lake last Monday night. The downpour of rain was very heavy, and lasted for over two hours. About an inch fell on the level. The coming of the tempest was well announced beforehand, for the sun went down with rather ominous signs. The tornado might be classified as of that driving type that sweeps everything before it. The wind attained a high velocity, and continued till morning.

Another driving rain and wind storm passed our way Wednesday afternoon. The rain is badly needed, they say, in the country, but we hope it will not be too hard on the land.

Speaking of hurricanes reminds me of a speech made recently by a little chap four years old: "I don't like God to send these storms, but I suppose he had to to suit the farmers."

Another beneficial effect of rain is the quenching of forest fires.

Stoney Lake has been fairly free of fires this last few years. The burning over of Tanner's Island was the last one of any serious proportions.

We were within an ace of having another this week on the property across the channel from Mr. John Crane's cottage. The workmen engaged in the construction of Mr. J. W. McKinney's bungalow went out on the mountain of rock behind the cottage to search for some special stones for the fire place, and discovered a fire making rapid headway in the woods to the rear. Fortunately there were several people in the vicinity, and after a hard struggle lasting a couple of hours, it was brought under control.

Booms of logs now surround "Headlands," the summer home of Mr. William Irwin, and soon the narrow channels around Hell's Gate and St. Peter's Church will be blocked.

A piano arrived at "Monplaisir," the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter.

So much freight is finding its way to Stoney Lake points that the steamer "Islands" had to make a special trip on Wednesday to relieve the "Stoney Lake."

Mr. and Mrs. Clink, of Toronto, with their contractor, Mr. Moore, of Lakefield, came up the lakes on Wednesday to look over their new cottage.

Mrs. Cole and her daughters have opened their cottage for the season.

Mrs. James Dixon and her daughter, Miss Fannie, Mrs. W. F. Nelson, and Miss Isabel returned to Peterborough, Wednesday.

Mrs. (Dr.) Husband and her daughters, Misses Daisy and Helen, leave Burlington on the twentieth for "Daisholme" Kawartha Park. They will have a new motor boat this season.

Mrs. (Dr.) Zimmerman and Miss Ruth, of Toronto, will open their cottage "Sum-R-in" on the fifteenth.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Stock, Miss Vera and Master Oswald motored to Kawartha Park on Wednesday and paddled to Juniper.

Mr. David Cahler, of Warsaw, is helping Mr. Choate in the construction of his new store at McCracken's Landing.

Dr. Munro, of Warsaw, visited McCracken's Landing Wednesday to arrange for the launching of his yacht "Daisy," which wintered on the shore to the rear of Baptie's cottage.

The walls of Mr. R. Neill's log cabin are rising skyward on "Leather Island." The little steam yacht "Victor," loaded to the water's edge with a gang of men, meanders down from above Crowe's Landing each fine morning, and leisurely retraces its steps in the evening.

ITCHING BURNING OF ECZEMA INTENSE

Began on Child's Face. Spread all Over Head. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.

Elrose, Sask.—"My little boy had eczema when he was about a week old. It began on his face and spread all over his head. It was in pimples and they would fester and break like little boils all over his head, but were like rash on his face. The eczema was very itching and the burning was intense; it made him so restless he could scarcely sleep.

"I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Two cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Ointment cured him." (Signed) Mrs. A. F. Thayer, July 13, 1914.

3,200,000 IN THE BRITISH WAR SERVICE

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 12.—The total number of men for the army and the navy sanctioned by Parliament for service so far in the present war is 3,200,000.

"This number will not be exceeded without authority of Parliament," said Mr. Asquith Thursday, thus setting at rest the rumours that other forces had been mobilized without public knowledge.

The Premier also announced that a further vote of credit would be discussed on Tuesday of next week. It is understood that the new vote will be for £250,000,000 or £300,000,000 ($1,250,000,000 or $1,500,000,000).

According to figures announced in the House of Commons Thursday afternoon 79,946 women have registered for war work, and of this number 1,916 have been utilized.

Because of inadequate internment facilities there still are 9,000 Germans and 4,000 Austro-Hungarians of military age at large in the metropolitan area.

OLD RESIDENT OF YOUNG'S POINT PASSES AWAY

YOUNG'S POINT, June 10.— Another of our old and esteemed residents passed away on Thursday, in the person of Mr. Thos. Dever. The late Mr. Dever was born in Inniskillen, Ireland, and came out to Canada in the year 1825. He lived in the township of Smith a good many years and moved to the village of Young's Point about 25 years ago. The funeral will take place on Saturday the 11th inst. to Rey's cemetery, Lakefield. The deceased is one of the oldest gentlemen in the county.

Mrs. Andrew Allen wishes to thank the people of Young's Point for their kindness to her and how they stood by her in her sad bereavement.

Mr. Louis Kingerley of Brantford, who has been conducting services at the Anglican church, has returned home.

HOW FAT FOLKS MAY BECOME THIN

By Elizabeth Thomas.

Perhaps you are suddenly becoming stout, or it may be that you have been putting on weight for years. In either case the cause is the same—lack of oxygen-carrying power of the blood. This trouble occurs in adults of both sexes and all ages, but it may be overcome very easily and without any of the privations that most people imagine necessary to reduce their weight.

Simply go to your druggist and get some oil of orlene capsules. Take one after each meal and one before going to bed. Watch yourself to see how fast you are losing weight. Wonderful results have been accomplished by this inexpensive recipe, but be sure to get the genuine oil of orlene in capsule form. It is said only to original sealed packages. Any [illegible] druggist can supply you, or a [illegible] box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1203, Montreal, Can.

ARE STEEL CARS AN IMPROVEMENT?

When the steel passenger car was introduced into American railway systems, the immediate object was to diminish loss of life in collisions. The replacement of equipment will have cost the railways approximately $650,000,000 and incidentally has considerably increased the cost of operation, as heavier locomotives are required to haul the trains. The President of the Chicago & Great Western Railway says:

"These heavier locomotives, with heavy steel equipment behind them, running at high speed, in case of accident become more destructive than any of the trains in the days of the wooden car; in fact, we have records of the complete destruction of steel sleeping cars in rear-end collisions, and it would be impossible to build a steel car that would resist the shock of a rear-end collision from a train running fifty or sixty miles an hour."

The substitution of steel for wooden cars has also dealt a serious blow to the lumber industries of the Pacific North-West and has increased the danger of forest fires. Car material provides a market for the common grades of lumber and the elimination of this market has meant a large proportion of waste left in the woods. Waste left in the woods means increased forest fires hazard, and greater difficulty in clearing land for agricultural development, so that in the opinion of the Pacific Coast lumberman the cost to Uncle Sam has been much more than $650,000,000 — indeed, it would be more like a billion dollars—all of which has ultimately to be paid by the public.

CONSTIPATIENTS
Read This—

It must be remembered that the bowels should move freely once a day to ensure perfect health. When such is not the case the poisonous waste material is absorbed into the system, thus producing a self blood-poisoning.

The causes of Constipation are many and varied. Among the more common may be mentioned poor stomach digestion, a deficiency of bile in the intestines, a lack of secretion in the bowels, and a want of the natural muscular contraction of the intestines from above downward.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 60c, stimulates and restores the stomach digestion, increases the flow of bile into the intestine, causes a flow from the intestinal glands, and restores the natural downward action of the intestines, rendering it easy to secure a free action of the bowels, which is one of the most important requisites to health.

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

She got some sort of a grey thing made o' woollen lace out of her hand grip, and after she'd tied it on, you couldn't even see her hair, and not much of her face. I had tied her hand grip behind her saddle while she was snubbin' down her hat, and then Tom Smith helped her on while I held her mount. She was wearin' a brown cloth dress which was neat and just suited to her, but she didn't seem to mind mussin' it a bit, and she found her stirrups easier than I had expected. I can generally come purty close to fittin' a stirrup-leather, and hadn't missed it none this time.

The old blazed-face had seemed gentle, and so we hopped on our ponies without expectin' any trouble; but all of a sudden he began to snort and fuss. Most folks think 'at a hoss snorts because he's scared; but the real reason is, that he goes a heap on scent, and when he catches a scent that seems worth investigatin', he snorts so as to give him fresh air on a clean surface. I've watched hosses close and I'm bettin' this is the truth. Well, anyway, the old blazed-face snorted and sniffed, gave a couple of easy pitches and before either Tom Smith or I could reach a rein, that wicked brute had bolted down the draw and square for the cabin with the gel hangin' on to the saddle horn, and me and Tom Smith tryin' to head her.

and when I saw I couldn't head her, I got the shotgun off the horn where I'd hung it and prepared to liven things up as soon as was necessary; but what made me sore and out mad was to have a crafty get-away like that knocked on the head by a moment's carelessness.

The four fellers had heard us comin' and they had got on their hosses, for they were too used to bein' man-hunted to set quiet when a posse came down on our gait. They drew on slow to the east and when we dashed around the corner in a cloud of dust, I let out a yell just to sweeten things up, and this yell woke up the mustangs refreshed after their nap. A plumb beat-out mustang can sleep on his feet for ten minutes and wake up of it with full as much devil in him as ever.

Anyway, they whirled that buck-board around on the front gear and took out after the four fellers like the Angel of Death. It was duskin' up towards dark and we must have sounded like the sheriffs of seventeen counties comin' with cavalry and artillery to end things pronto, for it was a marvel to see how hearty and complete those four fellers tuned that place over to us. I fired both barrels of the shotgun again' the door of the cabin as we swept past, and we turned off south the first chance while they held on to the east.

The gel rode light and easy, by holdin' on to the saddle horn and as soon as we reached high ground she edged to the west, she threw her face up to the sky and breathed deep. I couldn't see her eyes, and her headgear was sure rediculous; but something in the set of her head as she looked up into the sky, touched on the lonesome spot in my chest; but made me mighty well content with that day's business. She was ridin' on Tom Smith's right, and I was the odd number, same as usual.

CHAPTER XVII.

BREAKFAST ON THE HORSE-SHOE.

The sky was a broad streak of brassy yellow where it rested on the horizon, and as the plains were plumb dark by this time, it seemed as though we were ridin' off of our own world and on to another one. After a bit the stars came out and they were all the lights to be seen in any direction. It was one of the nights whep my thoughts ran wild, and kept wonderin' about things they had no business to wonder about, because they never could wonder any answer to 'em.

We rode at a steady pace, the blazed-face bein' an easy-gaited animal, and we had a lot of answerable questions we wanted to ask; and yet, with a stupidity no other critter but a human would put up for one minute, we rode along as silent as so many sacks of meal. I was mighty curious about the complications which had led such a girl as this one into takin' such a fool risk, 'cause she seemed like regular quality to me; but I didn't have no idee what was polite to do under such circumstances, and I wouldn't have hurt her feelin's any more for both my trigger fingers, so I just strung along like the chuckle to a loaded waggon and tried to cut my thoughts back to common sense every time they broke off to some poesy pasture.

When we got near to Bradin's, I left them and went in to get my own hoss. I could pick him out in any company and he had learned by this time that while I liked a little fun as well as he did, it was generally most comfortable to catch my rope on his neck and not try too much circus nosense. When I got back to the others, I found Tom Smith had lifted the gel down so she could stretch herself and rest a little, which is what I chouldn't have done just then if I'd had the run of it, for she was soft and green, and when she tried to go on again it was purty real torture to her. She was a game gel, though, and didn't whimper nor groan once.

I rode well to the front from Bradin's on, but we didn't meet a soul, and we crossed the Canadian at two o'clock, and Sandy Crick at half-past four. I had pitied that poor child so much along the way that I ached about as much as she did; but when I halted them on Sandy Crick and started to ford Red Deer, I loosened up a chuckle or two, for at last bein' able to hang one on old Josiah Cornell. I kept waitin' for the hullabaloo his wolf dogs were scheduled to uncork; but as true as I'm settin' here this minute, when I reached the door of his cabin, there sat the old hermit looking out across the borders of yesterday, and puffin' tranquil at his long-stemmed pipe, the two dogs draped at his feet, their noses on their paws.

I plumb lost patience with him. "Don't you never do nothin' at all from one year's end to the other except set there like a prairie dog at his hole, puffin' at that old pipe?" sez I.

He puffed twice more slow and tantalizin' and then glanced up at me and nodded his head. "U-m-m-m-well," sez he, "I aim to do whatever seems necessary."

The only way to keep your temper in dealin' with that old hermit was to treat him the same as you would the weather. "I've got Tom Smith and the gel is half dead from ridin' and a stray gel over there," sez I, all night after gettin' scared by Big Jeff Johnson. Will you harbour 'em for a day or two?"

"Yes," sez he after his customary two puffs, "I'll harbour 'em a day or two."

I turned the pinto without any more conversation and went back to where the gel, still on her hoss, was leanin' up again' a cotton-wood, and lookin' mighty pale and all-sunk in the mornin' light. When we came back to old Josiah, he sat and digested a couple o' puffs of smoke while examinin' the face of the gel, and then he stood up with the grace of a huntin' panther, walked to the side of her hoss, and lifted her down, light and gentle. She took her elbow to steady her, motioned with his head for me and Tom Smith to follow, and led her along a little path and into a thicket to where some big trees stood on the bank of Red Deer on the north side of his horse-shoe. A small cabin stood here hidden by vines and tangle and it had a fireplace and was well furnished with all sorts of skins. He had fashioned a little pool in the rocks back of the house and he pointed this out to the girl.

"Bathe yourself there, daughter," sez he, "and then if you will ask for the day's strength, you will be much rested."

The girl, she looked curious at this, and the old hermit stood straight and [illegible] into the sky-[illegible] in front of him with the hands drooping from the wrist, and then slowly opened them apart until his arms were stretched back from his shoulders and his face thrown up to the sky. He breathed deep while doin' this as though inhalin' strength direct and he rose a little on his tiptoes. "It isn't just the exercise," 'sez he, "you must open yourself to the strength."

Well, we all tried it, and it worked like a merricle. It looked somethin' like some of Isaac's stunts, but I'm not ashamed to say that I still use it whenever I'm beat out and it allus freshens me up.

"Placido," sez the old hermit solemn to one of the wolf dogs, "so long as this lady is our guest, you are to be her dog, to watch over her, to obey her, and to treat her in all things as you would me." The dog pretended to understand every word, and that foxy old hermit had spoke as solemn as a circuit-rider tellin' a slim congregation where them went which didn't chip in liberal to the collection.

When we left the gel, that wolf-dog stood by her side quiet, though I own he did look a little wishful when his pal walked away with old Josiah. We all went to the other pool, the one in which Isaac had about drownded himself, and Tom Smith and I washed the sleep out of us and he shaved himself down to his mustache while I grinned. When we came back the girl looked at least a thousand per cent. better, 'specially unless you looked close enough to catch the weary sag about her eyes. She had pushed her hair back into place and changed the white thing around her neck and it made a world o' difference in her.

My appetite had been whisperin' purty pettish that I hadn't offered up no sacrifice to it since the precedin' noon, while I had spent some considerable energy in whettin' it; so that when the old hermit waved his hand and asked us would we be pleased to walk in to breakfast, I had to stamp one foot on the other to keep a run for it.

He flourished us into the south room of his cabin, and there was the niftiest thing ever I'd seen in the way of a dining-room. Of course, the one at Kansas City had been larger, but that was the only call it had on this one. The walls were lined with brown leather, there were decorations of beadwork and quill-work, the furniture was city-made, and I've since learned it was of a wood called mahogany and mighty costly; but what won my heart right then was the table in the centre, covered with a white cloth and fitted out complete for four people. Four people, just an even four people.

I looked at the old scamp, but he was as calm as a toadstool. He lined himself up behind the girl's chair, and when she sat down he pushed the chair in under her. It looked neat enough the way he did it, but I wouldn't have tried it for the best hat in Mexico. We had fish and bacon and young turkey, light bread, corn pone, and the rich kind o' coffee that your nose enjoys full as much your palate.

"It must be fun to keep house by magic," sez I, after I'd had to stretch my neck to get down my last swallow.

The old hermit tried his best to look innocent, but the twinkle crept into his eyes. He knew mighty well that I had studied consid'able to see into how he got things done, and it pleased him a lot to go on foolin' me. After breakfast he told the gel to go to her cabin and sleep till she couldn't sleep another notch, and she fair ached to do it; but even though she waved around a little while she spoke, she insisted that she must find her father.

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. Cook, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women—ills that deal out despair. It is an enormous fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

Pennies Prouty By BILL BLINKIRON

"A LONG BY LEAN LAWYER DRAWS A LEGAL LOOKIN' DOCUMENT ON PENNIES."

"THEN HE MAKES A DATE WITH A PROMINENT INGENUE"

ATHER 'round, folks! Gather 'round an' listen to th' melodramatic tale o' how Pennies Prouty ran a gold mine into a gophir hole. Gather 'round, because it's th' real thing an' it's only been told umpty-umpty times since language was invented. If it wasn't an old, old tale we wouldn't monkey with it—what's th' use o' tryin' experiments?

It's a sportin' story, mates, surcharged with th' old human interest stuff—like a flock o' girls, a book, a racehorse an' a nigger for local color. Ain't that enough? It's as full o' heart throbs as th' bay is full o' water, real sob stuff, torrents o' tears, millions o' dollars an' muckfuls o' speed.

"Bill, old pal," says Greenbacks, th' lightnin' mental taker, t' me the other night, "I'll bet you've never heard th' tale o' Pennies Prouty—no, o' course not! How he did a Lifkin Beechey from nothin' to ten thousand dollars an' back again in forty-eight hours. Well, son, put on your mitt, mask an' pad, an' set yourself for speed, 'cause I'm goin' to deliver you th' story fast, low an' on the inside.

"Pennies first came to bat in th' game o' life as th' gamblin' brakeman of th' New York Central. Earned his sobriquet—I never heard his real name—through his willin'ess t' bet all he had—from a penny up—on any game, square or otherwise. An' you know, Bill, you've got to respect a bird who'll send his last dollar up t' th' firin' line.

"Not t' take you wide on th' first turn, ol' boy, Pennies took six hundred dollars worth o' action out of a guessin' right three times off th' reel, threw his job in th' waste basket an' came t' Fort Erie determined t' be a sport for life. He's hardly had time to get trackwise when Maxie Murphy sells him a Ford equine called Josie Epstein. Sends Josie t' th' post next day an' bang!—th' bankroll goes on th' rocks. Force o' circumstances makes Pennies a horse ownin' tout with Josie for a hedge horse—thenceforth an' thereafter. An' catch it on your bare head, pal, he developed int' th' classiest tout in th' game.

"For two years Pennies outpointed this precarious existence, but one mornin', at old Pimlico, a financial cloudburst fell upon him. He had just finished workin' Josie Epstein for th' benefit of a cheat, when up bobbles a long lean lawyer, draws a legal lookin' document on Pennies an' flashes him th' headlines that a rich aunt has sprung a finale an' put Pennies on all th' lights t' th' directions o' ten thousand—an' the old pirate had th' coin with him.

"Now, Bill, that was where Pennies showed his class; th' minute he had dough of his own within reach he forgot all about th' client an' went t' financin' his own dreams.

"Let's step a fast quarter here, son, because Pennies' pace was terrific. Tore straight into a ready-to-wear palace, captured six uniforms o' fire-alarm design—with haberdashery t' match. Keep step with me, Bill, 'cause there's no chance t' ease up.

"Then he makes a date with a prominent ingenue t' put away all or any part o' th' menu at a swell cafe. Th' banquet over, Pennies drops th' young lady at th' stage door, accidentally crashes int' Roxey Reardon, a big wine exploiter, an' insists on accompanyin' him to a ten-dollar limit society poker game. Ever break int' one o' those games, pal? Don't; they're [illegible] than bichloride o' mercury.

"PENNIES CALLS ONLY T' FIND FOUR SINGLE A'S STARING HIM IN TH' FACE"

SCENERY BY CHARLES L. McCARTHY

"Well, Pennies got away in front, became money-mad an' ran everybody except th' blond hostess an' an up-t'-th' minute dancin' teacher—who, really, was none other th'n our old ocean liner friend Frenchy Rush—yes, sir, Pennies drove everybody else out o' th' game. Not satisfied with th' panic he had created he conversationed th' blonde int' removin' th' limit, when suddenly his stack o' chips underwent a bearish movement. A little past midnight Pennies became introduced t' th' fact that th' dancin' teacher had somethin' on th' cards—at least, when dealin'. So straightaway he gets foxy an' only starts things when th' hostess is doin' th' distributin'. Bill, you know th' answer; th' blonde delivers four queens int' Pennies' grasp, bingo!—he gets excited an' bets th' Frenchman a fast that he gets all mixed up with his technique an' accidentally calls th' shark, only t' find four single A's starin' him in th' face.

"Now, Pennies was game an' made no outcry other th'n shootin' an 'I gotta-hand-it-t'-you' look at th' hostess, but unlike actors an' fighters, he knew when he had enough, so he grabbed the remainder of his roll—about five thousand—an' adjourned to a Turkish vapor emporium t' cool out for th' next day's campaign.

"Aforesaid next day is getaway day at Pimlico an' Josie Epstein is in th' first race. Josie's still a maiden, but she's been runnin' second an' third to fair sellin' platers recently, an' as this race calls for maidens four years an' up, it looks as if Pennies has finally conquered a soft spot for his pet. Th' handicappers an' price makers said two t' one was a big price against Josie, an' as Pennies would have liked her better if she'd been one t' two, th' odds is hardly up when th' bombardment begins, with Pennies doin' a 'Follow me, men.'

"An' would you believe it, Bill, he had a hard time gettin' those bookmakers t' take his dough? My boss ran t' form an' refused two hundred at even money at post time!

"The race? Jockey V. Bowers was up on Josie, had her away on her toes, gave her a million dollar ride an' had plenty o' vocal help from Pennies an' his faithful nigger, Junemont. But it was no use, for a black Percheron called Old Bird ran the only good race of his career an' stepped by th' judges a cranium t' th' good, Josie in th' place hole.

"Bill, there wasn't enough left of Pennies' bequest t' buy an automat lunch. But he was a game whale, this bird, an' not a whimper out of him. He an' Junemont threw a blanket over Josie, gathered up their tack an' hiked it over th' hills to Laurel, our next stamping-ground, twenty-odd miles away. A real sport was Pennies, eh, pal?"

An' after Greenbacks had served me this story, he says t' me, says he, "Bill, d'ye think it'll make a hit?"

"Don't worry, Greenbacks," retorts I, "that's th' least o' your troubles. It'll kick ninety per cent o' th' ginks that's holdin' down th' sidewalk right square in th' heart, an' seventy per cent o' them will want t' sue th' paper that publishes it for libel."

"IT WAS NO USE. OLD BIRD STEPPED BY TH' JUDGES A CRANIUM T' TH' GOOD"

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

The Summer Resort: The people who live near to summer or winter resorts, either have a certain burden to bear, but not less of a burden should be borne by the patrons of such places. The merchants, gardeners, dairymen, poultrymen and fruit growers near such places all share in the profit that comes from the city dweller who wants a portion of the clean, fresh air of the country, and to rest and refresh himself while his family may live close to good old Mother Nature.

I have, at various times, inspected such resorts and the surrounding conditions. The various boards of health have also made many inspectations, and it is to be regretted that the people who furnish supplies to "the resorters" do not at all times try to do their part in supplying food that is clean and wholesome, and do not try to make the surroundings pleasant and agreeable as well as healthful.

It seems unreasonable that anyone should not be fully aware of the fact that manure piles and unsanitary privies are the breeding places of the deadly typhoid fly, and that a very little care and attention to the condition of such things will quickly render any place free from flies. It is unreasonable that anyone should at the present time, maintain the deadly old-fashioned rain barrel, but they do and in nearly all cases there is no pretense of even protecting its contents with any kind of a cover. A single tub, keg or barrel, half filled with rain will breed enough mosquitoes to keep a whole neighbourhood in distress.

In a village of 500 people, one man could be hired to look after the sanitary conditions so thoroughly that by a careful weekly inspection and treatment the entire village could be kept free from both flies and mosquitoes, and there would be no need for spending large sums of money each year for new screens, taking them down in the fall and putting them up in the spring. Such a place would become quickly known and much patronized. The people who visit such places are always glad to pay for benefits received and from a purely financial and selfish standpoint it pays to clean up and keep clean. Oil the roads and streets near all cottages and throughout the village, thus settling the dust problem. If there is a road or marsh of stagnant water within a mile, drain it, or after every rain, oil it with crude petroleum.

If you know of a farmer that sells milk to "the resorters" have his place inspected also, and unless conditions are sanitary, and the milk clean, first show him how it should be handled and if he will not be reasonable, give fair warning to the patrons.

The resorter must do his or her share. More or less canned goods are used, and in most cases the empty cans thrown in the back yard where they are quickly filled with water by the first rainstorm. The mosquitoe finds the breeding place and proceeds to raise a large and troublesome family of malaria producers. By the very simple and easy plan of punching a hole, several holes, in the other end of the empty can, its usefulness as a breeding place for Mister Mosquitoe is destroyed. All garbage should be carefully wrapped in old papers and kept in a covered box until enough is collected make a good fire and then it should be burned.

Many families go to the resorts for the entire season, and they love to have a little garden and a few chickens. In such cases the chickens readily take care of the garbage, but all waste paper and other refuse should be carefully burned and not allowed to accumulate and destroy the beauty of the place or be left for others to clean up.

A barrel of clean, dry sand, or of slacked lime should be kept in all outdoor privies, and a portion of this should join in the effort to conserve matter each time the toilet is used. All children should be taught the importance of this act, and even visitors should join in the effort to conserve the peace, comfort and health of the community.

SUMMER FOOD COMBINATIONS.

Here are some healthful combinations of uncooked foods which will help you to solve summer problems:

Prepared wheat or rice with nuts, dates and cream, or wheat with nuts, honey, milk and cream.

Starch, sugar and fats are fuel, and nuts, cheese and eggs are muscle builders.

Apples, oranges, grapes, plums, peaches, pineapples or berries are both foods and germicides.

One meal each day of uncooked food or a part of two meals will be a considerable saving of time and fuel.

It is always best to make any change in the diet gradually.

Going Walking to-morrow?

Why She Didn't Enjoy Her Vacation

She started finding fault with the place the moment she arrived and was never satisfied.

She went to a boarding house and refused to be friendly with any one. But she was annoyed when not included in the excursions that the others got up. She forgot that if we want to be on friendly terms with strangers we must be prepared to meet them halfway.

She went to a more expensive place than she really could afford and was annoyed because she could not dress as well or spend as much as the other guests.

She was so anxious to see everything there was to be seen in the neighborhood that she rushed far too much and at the end of her holiday had only the most confused idea of the places she had visited.

She was never willing to do what the others wanted to do and made herself thoroughly disagreeable if she couldn't get her own way.

She was always noticing the little ways in which she thought people neglected her instead of the many in which they helped to make her enjoy herself.

When little things were wrong she looked as glum as if a terrible catastrophe had happened. She had never learned to smile at trivial mishaps.

She blamed her companions and the weather when she found she wasn't enjoying herself, forgetting that to be happy "inside" is the surest way to be independent of both.

She thought too much about the fact that the holidays would soon be over—so much, indeed, that she forgot to enjoy what was still left.

She expected too much. Instead of trying to make other people happy she thought that they ought to be devoting themselves to her.

Dainty Affairs Into Which the Ball and Needles May Be Slipped.

The smart woman is always au fait in the matter of bags or similar accessories to the costume. Unfortunately tempting looking bags are so costly and manufacturers bring out such a great variety of these that one must be not only vigilant, but prosperous, to keep up with the styles.

Nowadays, too, there are bags for every occasion. There is the ever use

Pictured here is a model furnished with the beauty helps that the modern woman likes to have constantly at hand. The top of the bag is of silver, with a mirror set inside. Carried out in satin there is a pendant jewel to give a touch of color below.

Now that every one is knitting for the war sufferers, woman must needs have fancy bags in which to carry the materials for the work. The knitting bag illustrated is a circular affair of natural colored linen drawn up at the top by pink baby ribbon and finished with narrow val lace. It is embroidered in rose color and green.

SUMMER PITCHER.

A tall pitcher or jug, with a cover that fits snugly in place to keep insects out, is a summer convenience. It can be used for chocolate or an iced drink. It is made in most attractive patterns of dull blue or brown on a cream ground. The top of the cover is of pottery like the jug, but it is set into a flexible metal ring that expands a bit after it is fitted in place, and so holds the cover tight.

There is a strainer in the lip that would keep cracked ice from pouring into the glasses.

That was Sixty Years ago, when John Redpath started Canada's first Sugar Refinery on the banks of the Lachine Canal, in what was then a field outside Montreal.

Not content with introducing the industry itself, the Redpath Refinery has been the first to adopt the successive improvements in refining and marketing, such as Redpath Granulated Sugar in 1880, and the modern Sealed Cartons in 1912.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Battle in the Mine.

FOR an hour or so Drake equivocated and tried to postpone action. But it was made plain to him that he could not avoid action. The starving men were in no humor for words. They demanded food and wages.

At last he saw that he must do something immediately. He called some of the leaders into the office and with apparent frankness told them he had known nothing of the situation and that he felt sure Wilkerson was unaware of it.

"What are you going to do?" came the demand.

"This," replied Drake, writing rapidly. He showed them the message:

Harry Wilkerson, Los Angeles, Cal.:
Come to mine at once. Trouble is brewing. DRAKE.

"Will that bring him?" demanded one of them coldly.

"It will. Now who will take it and send it?"

Two men volunteered to take old Tom Kane's burros and make the trip.

"And while you're in Silent Valley," Drake said, yielding to a sudden inspiration, "take this $20 and get some grub for the camp."

[illegible] cook house," said another. "It's old Tom Kane's lookout, so we didn't exactly feel like taking it."

Drake turned to Tubbs quickly.

"Distribute the food as far as it will go," he said.

Tubbs looked suddenly serious. "I guess you better leave that to me," he said in a low voice. "I know where it will do the most good." He winked slyly.

* * * * * * *

Meantime John Dorr, Everett and Tom Kane were spending long hours in discussing what was to be done to save the "Master Key" to Ruth. Tom once more went over the exact situation at the mine and asserted that unless prompt measures were taken not only would there be actual distress, but likely rioting.

"You know some of the worst ones hang with Wilkerson," he said grimly, "and they might at any time take it into their heads to do a little dynamiting. Dynamiting is mighty dangerous stuff around several thousand dollars' worth of machinery, and if they blew up the workings there wouldn't be any mine left, you see."

"I see," said Everett at last. "Not having the papers, I can't put this deal through the way I want to eventually. But something must be done on the spot."

"In the way of money?" added Kane harshly.

"Precisely," Everett assented with all cheerfulness. "Now I'm going to loan John Dorr here $5,000 today for the 'Master Key' mine. Then"—

John shook his head. "That isn't business-like," he protested.

Everett fixed his keen eyes on him. "Any reason why I shouldn't loan money to Miss Ruth Gallon's manager and guardian? Any reason why you, looking after her interests, should refuse help in fixing up her affairs?"

Dorr flushed. "I didn't mean it that way. It seems as if I kind of messed things up myself, and I—I thought I might get 'em set right by myself."

"You called on me, and I'm the doctor," said Everett authoritatively. He pulled out his wallet and commenced counting out bills. "I came prepared for this, for I thought there might be an emergency."

"But who will take charge of it? Who will go to the mine?"

The broker laughed at him. "Not you. You'd be in a fight in three minutes, specially if Wilkerson turned up. Tom Kane is our man." He turned on the old man abruptly. "Will you take this money and go?"

The old cook stared at the crisp bills and then at Dorr. "I ain't handled paper worth that much lately," he remarked. "But if you want me to go in there and feed them people and get 'em back to work and keep things going till John can fix things up here I'll go."

On his way to the mine Harry Wilkerson's courage, newly fired by a last conversation with Jean Darnell, commenced to ebb.

Drake and Tubbs received him with unaffected relief. A few words sufficed to make the status of affairs plain. Tubbs looked at his superior with strained anxiety in his bleared eyes. Dull and sodden with liquor as he was, he understood perfectly that everything depended on the next few days. The engineer had lived in mining camps and on the desert all his life, and he knew the passions engendered by the arid mountains and the remorseless desert. What would Wilkerson do? Was he strong enough to handle these men who were ready for anything, even to bloodshed if aroused?

"I guess that'll fix 'em!"

Wilkerson had lost his sense of fear oddly enough. As he had come into the camp a dozen miners had recognised him and scowled. He had felt their hatred, and it fed fat the man's sinister passion to do harm, to hurt, to destroy. Now he faced Drake and Tubbs arrogantly.

"It won't be long till these chaps find out who's the boss," he said. With a significant look at Drake he pulled out the forged deeds and handed them to Tubbs.

"Those mean that I'm legally the owner of the 'Master Key' mine," he announced.

The engineer peered at them dully. He haltingly mumbled over some of the legal phrases at the beginning, saw the names Thomas Gallon and Harry Wilkerson prominently displayed. He was impressed. He did not understand the purport of the papers. He did understand that Wilkerson was smiling with the insolence of triumph achieved. He grinned slowly and passed the papers back.

"I guess that'll fix 'em!" he said huskily.

"I guess it will," was the rejoinder.

Tubbs seemed thoughtful, glancing out of the window now and again. Drake voiced his feeling.

"The sooner you let the miners know and get things settled the better."

Wilkerson licked his dry lips. The battle was on. He broke the silence by saying gruffly, "Call 'em up here, Bill!"

Nothing loath, Tubbs went out on the porch, and his hoarse tones resounded through the little valley. Instantly men appeared from doorways, came from a dozen places in response to that call. And women, clutching their children, peered out to see what was in the air.

When the men were gathered before him, Wilkerson stepped forward and commenced to speak. He could not break their sullen silence, and, after a few words of generalities, he mustered his courage and shouted: "I am the owner of this mine! I have the deeds right here!"

The effect of this was far other than he had expected. Not a murmur came from the still, motionless throng. It was as if they had not heard him. In a lower tone he repeated it. "I am the owner of the 'Master Key' mine and the that goes with it!"

He held up the papers, and Bill Tubbs looked at them and gravely nodded his head, as much as to say that he had inspected them and could vouch for their authenticity. Still no sound from the miners.

There is a quality in the silence of the crowd of earnest men that is more questioning than any word could be. The men who had worked and toiled for old Tom Gallon, who had been deceived and baffled, who had had their loyalty tested to the utmost, now demanded, through their imperious silence that Wilkerson open up his mind to them. If he was indeed the owner of the "Master Key," what did he intend to do?

"You'd better say some more quickly," warned Drake in a few tons. And Wilkerson, completely bewildered, set the match to the powder. He stepped forward with an air of a man [illegible] could assume and cried, "Now tell me what you want?"

Instantly the air was filled with roars of rage and disappointment.

Fifteen minutes later Harry Wilkerson was sweating within the cabin. With a shaking hand he poured himself out a tumbler of Tubbs' whisky. He had promised the miners back pay, steady work, full wages and food. He must make good, and he did not know how.

"Tubbs," he said sharply, "you must find out what we can [illegible] nothing, but get all the information you can. I'll make it worth the while of the men who'll stick by me."

Again the engineer chuckled fatuously. "They'll all stick by ye," he said sagely, "'long as ye pay 'em like you said ye would."

It was late in the afternoon when Tom Kane appeared on the mail wagon. The driver had already informed him of how affairs were going, and the cook wasted no time. He climbed down from the high seat, jerked his battered case out of the wagon and made straight for his shanty. Within five minutes he had divested himself of his black clothes and donned his official overalls and apron. Then he appeared on the porch as calm and unconcerned as though he had not been away.

In no time at all a couple of dozen miners had gathered to shake hands and swap news. Naturally their biggest item was Wilkerson's proclamation of ownership.

At this Tom Kane laughed scornfully. He derided the papers, ridiculed the miners for being fools easily taken in and stated in set terms that he, Tom Kane, actually held the place of authority.

This soon came to Wilkerson's ears, and he hurried down the hill to stop what he knew to be a dangerous secession. Instantly the old cook locked horns with him, poohpoohed him to his face, called him names of peculiar virulence and offered to fight him on any terms.

Before long the camp was in an uproar, and it was due to certain cooler heads that trouble did not ensue immediately. These men insisted that there was time to settle the dispute of ownership, forced Wilkerson to withdraw his command that Kane leave the mine instantly and managed to bring a semblance of peace out of disorder. Kane bowed his neck to the yoke of their authority, but dispatched a trusty messenger to the station with a telegram to John to come as soon as possible. Wilkerson resorted to a scene which was eventually to threaten the very existence of the "Master Key." He sent Drake south to confer

"Tell Jose to be here tomorrow night," he instructed him. "I'll want about twenty men well armed."

Drake rode [illegible] from destination, cursing the luck that had put him in the power of such a man.

In response to Kane's message John Dorr, Ruth Gallon and Everett left Beverly Hills for Silent Valley. They arrived the third day after the cook, and from the moment they were recognized the miners dropped their attitude of sulky waiting and thronged about their mistress, cheering and shaking hands. When they had got into the big house Kane arrived, apron and all, to report on the situation.

"It's come to a showdown," he remarked. "Wilkerson has several of the worthless fellows here and a lot of half breeds back in the hills. He knows I have that money of yours, and he's promised it to the Mexicans if they help him. You see, Wilkerson will keep his skirts clear that way. He can say that it was a raid by bandits."

"How soon does all this happen?" drawled John.

Kane glanced at him curiously. He understood that warning not to frighten Ruth and went on airily. "Oh, I reckon just as soon as Wilkerson gets Tubbs weaned from that bottle of his."

But when Ruth had gone to her own rooms the cook wasted no words in smoothing things over.

"You've got to act and act quick," he told John and Everett. "It ain't the time for fooling. Tonight may do the business, for those Mexicans are impatient. Remember that Wilkerson has the keys to the powder house, and he has all kinds of chance to lay his traps."

"I don't think he expected us so soon," John remarked.

"A good cook always has grub for people that drop in unexpected like," was the grim response. "Just take a peek down there now."

Through the window John saw that the camp was quietly but surely dividing into two parties. The older miners were gathered about the cook shanty. Around the office stood a dozen or so malcontents half drunk, under the leadership of Tubbs, who was wholly drunk, and on the porch [illegible] Wilkerson were a couple of Mexicans.

"It looks as if they meant to rush the camp," Dorr said thoughtfully. He proceeded to arm himself, and Everett quietly followed suit.

"I'm going to talk to the boys first," said Dorr. He left the bungalow and strode off down the hill, followed by the cook. A gun was fired up by the mine tunnel mouth.

"That's a signal that the Mexicans are making trouble!" Kane shouted. "Look out for dynamite in the shaft, John!"

Without a word further Dorr leaped down from the porch of the cook shanty and started up the hill, followed by a dozen faithful supporters. Other shots were fired. Wilkerson appeared at the tunnel mouth and then vanished again. John sprang upon the trestle and rushed after him.

Instantly a band of Mexicans materialized halfway down the hill, fired a few shots and retreated. John paid no attention to them, but kept on.

Once within the tunnel he saw a faint gleam of light ahead of him. He understood that Kane was right. Wilkerson was playing a desperate game in blowing up the shaft and then in the ensuing confusion allowing the bandits to loot undisturbed.

A few yards farther on John stopped. A dark figure rushed by him toward the open air. But the little glow of light remained. For a moment Dorr hesitated; then he leaped forward and began trying to extinguish a lighted fuse.

He had almost succeeded when a bullet whizzed by him; then a second spattered on the rock overhead. He turned and fired blindly in the direction of the shots and resumed his task. The fuse was short, but he succeeded in extinguishing it and started back. He met a fusillade of bullets. He dashed on toward the mouth of the tunnel and suddenly emerged on Wilkerson, who, not being able to see into the murk of the shaft, was firing blindly into the opening.

With a shout John leaped for the man whom he now knew to be seeking his life. Before Wilkerson could fire another shot he was caught in a mighty embrace and then began a short sharp struggle high in the air.

John Dorr for the first time in his life knew the absolute and terrific thirst for killing that sometimes comes to a man. It was either his life or Wilkerson's. And no one should interfere with his revenge. He threw himself on the man with but one object in view—to slay him bare-handed.

Wilkerson fought tigerishly, and for the moment had the advantage. The lofty trestle was an ill place for a heavy man like Dorr to fight on, and the other's agility and lithe quickness seemed about to win when John by a sudden unexpected and desperate maneuver caught him and threw him clear into the air, breaking his clutch with a terrific blow. Then he jerked him to the edge of the trestle and flung him over.

Standing erect, John drew the air into his tortured lungs and let out a tremendous yell of triumph.

Ruth Gallon heard that barbaric yell and shuddered. Tom Kane stared upward at the figure on the trestle, and his open mouth mouthed lipless, for he, too, shared in the moment's blood lust.

Says Geo. Eliot Had a Head Like a Horse

Mrs. Walford, the novelist, whose death has just taken place, published some two or three years ago a novel of Memories of Victorian London, in which allusion is made to many persons in the world of letters. One of Mrs. Walford's acquaintances in the far off days was Charles Kingsley.

"One day Mr. Charles Kingsley came in, and we had an opportunity of seeing if he were like his photograph, which had been sent to Mary, or not. To own the truth it flattered him, as he is so very red in the face, perhaps from leading an out of door life in all weathers * * * In ordinary conversation Mr. Kingsley stammers a good deal, but being conscious of it he has taken pains to overcome the defect by speaking very slowly—almost too slowly, for one occasion we felt inclined to goad him on, it became so tiresome."

"Tom Brown Hughes," Mrs. Walford described as "a man neither tall nor short, neither stout nor thin, with fair hair and blue eyes and a round, pleasant face."

In 1870 Mrs. Walford first met George Eliot at the house of Mr. John Blackwood in Edinburgh, and concerning that occasion she says:

"Much did I look forward to that evening — but, shall I confess?—it ended in disappointment. * * * George Eliot, with her large head and rather horselike face and portentous manner, was not to me an attractive personage. * * * and she had meant to be civil and kind. But how heavily drew the wheels of her chariot! How interminably dragged that interview!"

Some may wonder, says the Westminster Gazette, what George Eliot thought of Mrs. Walford.

SUFFERING.

Suffering is doubtless as divinely appointed as joy, while it is much more influential as a discipline of character. It chastens and sweetens the nature, teaches patience and resignation and promotes the deepest as well as the most exalted thought.—Samuel Smiles.

"WAITING"

The Patience of a Mother and Its Eternal Reward

It was in the post office at Newport I first met Mr. Hannigan. It was Monday, Australian mail day, and I had dropped in for a few picture post cards, which I was leisurely selecting the while the assistant telegraphist posted me (no pun intended) in all the local gossip.

"Any letter for me to-day, Misther Duffy?"

It was a very simple question, heard often enough, very likely, in this place, yet there was something in the tone of the questioner, some note of anxiety or pathos, that immediately arrested my attention The telegraphist was deep in the glowing account of the pleasure that awaited me did I but make up my mind to attend the forthcoming dramatic entertainment in the local hall, but I found myself listening instead for the postmaster's reply to the anxious questioner. She was only a poor old woman, bent nearly double with the weight of years, and, I make no doubt, suffering.

And yet it was a beautiful face—the face of one who had fought and struggled and hoped and suffered, as the Crusader, and who had found peace where the world never seeks it — on Calvary. Ay, there are martyrs in the cabin homes of Ireland, suffering in silence; but God never forgets.

"No, then, Mrs. Hannigan, there is no letter for you to-day, but maybe 'tis on the way it is. Next week, perhaps, I'll be havin' one for you.'

There was just a momentary contraction of the tired lips, the lowered head went a trifle lower, but only for an instant.

"Wisha, sure an' no news is good news, they say, Misther Duffy, and mebbe, as ye say, 'tis comin' it is. Sure God is good anyway, blessed be His holy name. Do you know, that I do be thinkin' that mebbe 'tis comin' home he is, and just wants to surprise me walkin' in widout sign or warnin'. 'Twas his last word to me when he stepped on the thrain at Esher, 'I'll come back to ye some day, mother, some day, niver fear.' 'An' back he'll come. Sure they say as how furrin counthries changes people, but I'll never believe it'll change me own Paddy, God's blessin' be wid him this day."

* * * * *

It was several weeks later when I again came across the poor old woman. A whole decade of Mondays had gone by, and the long expected letter had had ample time to reach its destination. I had been out fishing the long summer afternoon in the finny pools by Rossaguile, and all too late I noticed that a thunderstorm was brewing. Hurry as I might I was still far from my destination when the storm broke. A thunderstorm among the hills may be very nice to read about, but if you take my advice you will content yourself with reading about it. Don't come into close quarters with it if you can help it. It was grand, no doubt, to see the lightning zig-zagging along the mountain slopes, and to hear the thunder echoing down the valley, but I had neither eye nor ear for aesthetic possibilities. I couldn't see beyond the rim of befogged spectacles, and I could feel the cold mountain rain coursing down my spine with the force of a miniature cataract. I pictured to myself mile after mile of slushy road, and ocean after ocean of marrow-freezing rain, and was philosophically resigning myself to the inevitable, when "round the corner of the road" there came upon my sight, not "a little Irish colleen,' but what was more welcome under the circumstances, a little Irish cabin, and there sitting in a low chair by the open door prayerfully telling her beads, was Mrs. Hannigan.

I recognized her at once. The same calm face of resignation, with maybe the lines a little deeper—a very little. The eyes that watched for the exile's homecoming looked up as I wheeled by bicycle across the few feet of path that led to the door.

"Ay, an' welcome, sir," she made answer to my request for shelter, "sure an 'tis a bad evenin' for thim yokes (meaning my bicycle). I'm thinkin' tis blighting the pirates this rain'll be, but sure we can't complain at God's holy will."

It seemed like a sacrilege to introduce my dripping, muddy machine into the neat little cottage. It was very poor-looking, but clean as a new pin. A chair or two, a plain deal table, a shelf with a few cups and saucers and dishes, a large old-fashioned timber bed with a very threadbare coverlet in the corner, and over it a crucifix, a small statue of the Virgin, and a little font of holy water.

"'Tisn't much I can be offerin' you, sir, but what I have ye're welcome to. I'll set the kittle to bile an' I'll have a nice warm cup ov tay in a minute. You're not used to our mountainy rain, sir, an' maybe 'tis catchin' cowld ye'd be."

I declined, with heartfelt thanks, and then there was a prolonged silence. I had begun to fear I had unconsciously given the kind old soul offense.

"Are you all alone here?' I asked at last, and then I was sorry, for there was a catch in the voice that made answer.

"Ay, lonely enough, in throth, since himself died, but the naybors is very kind, an' I oughtn't to complain."

"But have you no children?"

"There wor three o' thim,' she replied; "two of thim are near me here still—they're lyin' in the churchyard there beyond. Mebbe ye noticed id on yer way down Thin there's Paddy. He was the youngest, but he's away in furrin parts—in Sydney this many a year. 'Tis home to me he'll be comin' wan of these days."

And then I thought of the Monday morning in the village post-office, and I knew as well as if I were an eye-witness that that scene had been enacted every Monday morning since, and would be till the long-expected letter came, or a speedier messenger came to this cabin on the mountain road. For hope dieth hard in an Irish mother's heart.

"'Tis lonesome enough here in the long evenin's wid never a wan to speak to. But afther all, there's God an' the Blessed Virgin Mary left to me, an' there's himself an' Willie an' Ellie over there in Kilnarath. So 'tisn't be meself I am afther all."

I measured six feet two in my socks, but somehow, listening to this simple old woman here in this tiny cabin away in the wilds of the hills, I felt inconveniently small. Ay, surely there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamt of in our philosophy. Here, in this mountain cabin, this simple peasant woman had learned the secret of life that the philosophers and meta-physicians grope after in the darkness born of their scientific theorizing. Many would vow her illiterate—I am sure she could neither read nor write, and in all likelihood she had never been twice outside the confines of her own parish. The village in the valley below was her idea of a world metropolis; fair day in its long rambling street a thing to be talked about for weeks. And yet who would dare to say her life was wasted? "Know the work and do it!"

Such were my thoughts as I rode home in the gathering twilight, under the dripping trees. Ah, me, if God were less just, what a terrible world it would be. But He never forgets!

* * * * *

Three years had gone by, and I had all but forgotten poor Mrs. Hannigan and the letter that she so eagerly looked for that summer morning in the village post office, until one morning, as my annual fortnight's holiday was approaching, I received a note from my Cousin Bill inviting me to look him up for a day or two.

But the trout in the pools by Rossaguile missed my flies that holiday, and the carpets in Glenside were minus the stains of my photographic mixing. For the cabin on the mountain road was deserted..there was a new tenant in Kilnarath. Bill told me the story over our pipes that evening. Paddy had obtained riches such as Newport had never seen or dreamt of at the gold-diggings. Then the home hunger took possession of him. He set his face toward Sydney, and booked his passage for the morrow in an outgoing steamer.

But that morrow never dawned for Paddy Hannigan. The ship sailed out from Sydney harbour, the sun shone on its white decks, but whiter was the face of the man lying stabbed to the heart in the darkened chamber of holes there by the docks. The ship went over the waters, but the soul of Paddy Hannigan went on a longer voyage. This was the news the letter brought to Mr. Hannigan. Poor Paddy never came back, but soon she went out to him over the waters—of Eternity. Ah, if God were less kind—but He never forgets!

More than once in looking through my photographs my friends pause at a certain page with a note of interrogation on their countenances, as if they would say, "Why did you take that?" But I only smile. It is a picture of a tiny cabin, a bare bleak road, and behind——the purple hills.

MOTHER FLEES TO DESERT WITH CHILD IN ARMS

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., June 10. —A mad flight into an Arizona desert with her three-year-old child in her arms, to escape apprehension by her husband, who was speeding in her wake, is one of the romantic features of the experiences of the last few months of Miss Obie Bristow, divorced wife of Charles Copeland.

The desert run was tragic, in view of the fact that the woman recently underwent an operation for appendicitis in a San Francisco hospital and escaped from that institution while a convalescent in order to evade Copeland, who had learned where she was and who preferred against her in Oklahoma the charge of kidnapping her child. She was found weak and faint in the desert sands and taken to Seton, Ariz., where she was advised by her father by telegram not to resist return to Oklahoma. She surrendered to the authorities and is to be brought back to Pottawotamie County.

Miss Bristow in November, 1914, obtained a divorce from Copeland and had her maiden name restored by the court. The custody of the child was granted to the father, but the mother instinct was so strong that she took secret possession of the child, a boy, and escaped to California.

Shortly after her arrival in San Francisco she was attacked by appendicitis and had to submit to an operation. Meanwhile Copeland and the Pottawotamie County authorities prosecuted a search for her and learned that she was in the hospital. She kept in touch with relatives in Oklahoma, and, through them learned that she had been located. While far from well and far from the date of her dismissal from the hospital, she fled from that institution with her child and started toward the East. She had enough money to pay her way back only to Maricopa, Ariz., and arriving there telegraphed her father for more funds.

Meantime Copeland and Sheriff Romberg of Pottawotamie County, reached San Francisco and learned of Miss Bristow's departure for the East. They learned also that she bought a ticket to Maricopa.

While Miss Bristow was awaiting the arrival of money from her father in Oklahoma, she saw through a train window these two men coming in from San Francisco.

Gathering her child in her arms, she dashed out of town before the men alighted from the train. A search of the town was made and the authorities learned of her flight into the desert.

WORRY AND WEAKNESS

Often Indicate Over-work and a Run Down Nervous System

Overwork and worry have an evil effect on the system and often give rise to nervousness and sleeplessness. Other signs include a weak back, headaches and indigestion. In time if matters are neglected a complete breakdown of the nervous system follows. On every hand one can observe victims of this state of nervous exhaustion who are at a loss to know what to do with themselves, their nervous debilitated state having baffled all ordinary treatment.

If you are a victim of exhausted nerves, if your symptoms are as described above, you need Dr. Williams' Pink Pills because they are a powerful nerve tonic. Their strengthening action on weak nerves is due to the fact that they enrich and build up the blood through which the nerves are fed. Under the tonic influence of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills all traces of nervous weakness disappear together with the headaches, the insomnia, the feeling of intense weakness and depression of spirits that mark the victim of nervous ailments. Here is the proof. Mr. Henry Marr, Port Felix, N.S., says: "It gives me greatest pleasure to testify as to the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. When I began their use I was a physical wreck; my nerves were all unstrung, I suffered from frequent headaches and backaches, and was almost wholly unfitted for work. I had tried several remedies without success, when I finally decided to give Dr Williams' Pink Pills a trial. I took six boxes and they made me a well man."

What these Pills did for Mr. Marr they will do for every other weak and nervous man, if given a fair trial. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CANNOT RUSH THE LEADERS OF THE ALLIES

LONDON, June 9.—Hilaire Belloc, speaking on the shell question, and the expected great allied advance in the west at a lecture in London, said: "Until the eastern line is broken there is nothing doing for the Germans. If they did do it it would be serious. The Russian retirement from Peremysl was of no great strategic advantage to the enemy at all. Field Marshal French will not be rushed. I had a bet with a friend that the great offensive would begin before June 1, but at that time I had not met Gen. Joffre. Joffre and our Field Marshal know a great deal more about the war than the Harmsworths. If they are waiting, they are waiting to play a highly skilled game, and know exactly what they are waiting for. The duty of a civilian public not under arms is to sit tight. All they have to do is to hold their tongues, tell the truth, and not spread panic among the people. Things are written and ordered to be written in the Daily Mail and Times war or the difference between two distinct field pieces used in war."

The big battle in Galicia has not yet reached a decision. The Austro-Germans have crossed the Dniester, south of Lemberg, and have assumed the offensive further to the south, and, according to the Austrian official report, have succeeded in pushing the Russians back between Kolomea and Kalusz, in eastern Galicia.

This operation was necessary before the Teutonic allies continued their advance toward Lemberg, as the Russian attacks in the region of Kolomea were beginning to look dangerous, after the Russians had, as reported from Petrograd last week, inflicted a rather severe defeat on the Austrians in this district.

British and Russian military opinion is that the Austro-Germans after their big effort, which regained for them the great part of Galicia have about exhausted themselves, and the view is expressed that they will soon have to secure and fortify a line on which they can withstand the Russian counter-offensive, which has already made itself felt on the lower San.

COMFORT AND CURE FOR BABY'S SKIN TROUBLES

Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured When Baby's Body Was Covered With Distressing Eczema

If every mother could try Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing, skin irritation and resulting eczema which tortures so many babies, what a blessing it would be for the little ones.

This letter will give you an idea of what a wonderful work this Ointment is doing in the way of bringing comfort to children who are so unfortunate as to contract eczema. It is so easy for this trouble to develop from chafing or irritation caused by the clothing, and so difficult to get it cured, that Dr. Chase's Ointment is appreciated when once its healing qualities are known.

Mr. M. L. Duscles, Postmaster, Dugnayville, N.B., writes: "I believe it is my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema. My baby was seized with eczema and his face and arms were covered with this terrible disease. After trying all sorts of ointments the disease continued to spread until it covered the entire body. When the itching became bad he would scratch himself and was sometimes found in his cradle covered with blood. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Ointment I bought two boxes and before this was all used the child was cured. That was a year ago, and there has been no trace of eczema since. I recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from eczema as being the best treatment in the world for itching skin diseases."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is for sale by all dealers at 60 cents a box. It is a good idea to keep it at hand along with the bath soap to be used for roughness of the skin, chafing or irritation. Prevention is so much better than cure. Powders clog the pores, but Dr. Chase's Ointment cleanses the pores and thereby keeps the skin soft and smooth. Sample box free if you mention this paper. An Arctic Bunk House.

A "bunk" house is an arctic hotel made of logs, with moss chinks, a dirt roof and a dirt floor. A great sheet iron stove keeps it warm. Two rows of bunks covered with grass or brush extend along the walls. The old fashioned string and latch hold the whip sawed door closed, and there is a place to cook the meals. To stay overnight costs a dollar.

THE VICTORIOUS ITALIANS ATTACKING GOITZ

ALLIES ARE GAINING IN THE DARDANELLES

THREE ITALIAN ARMIES ARE CLOSING IN ON CITY OF GOUTZ

Fierce Battle Now Raging West of City Upon a Ten Mile Front----Forces Which Occupied Gradisca Are Now Pressing North to Attack Goutz on the Flank----Bombardment of Tolmino Continues.

ANOTHER ATTACK MADE FROM NORTH

Special Cable to The Examiner:

ROME, June 12. — Three Italian armies are closing in upon Goritz, the capital of the Austrian province of that name, and a fierce battle is now raging. West of the city, upon a ten mile front, the city is being shelled by the Italian batteries stationed north of Mossa. The Austrians are replying from a hill directly north of the town, and from strongly fortified positions at the bridge head of the Isozno. The Bersaglieri forces which occupied Gradisca, are pressing north and are attempting to cross the river near Rubbia and attack Giritz on the flank. The enemy has mounted small pieces on flat cars and is rushing them up and down the railway on the east bank of the Isonzo, sweeping the west bank with a hot fire. Six miles northwest of Goritz, another Italian force is attempting to cross the river and descend upon the city from the north. The enemy guns on Monte Santo are shrapnelling the Italian forces and shelling their positions. The battle around Plava has continued for several days with the Austrians stubbornly resisting. The bombardment of Tolmino continues without interruption. Several of the outer works have been badly damaged by the Italian shells but the dominating position of the enemy's guns has prevented a near approach by the Italian infantry. The fighting in the Trentino has consisted largely of unimportant skirmishes for the past twenty-four hours, according to the war office.

THE CANADIAN CASUALTIES

OTTAWA, June 12. — The total casualties reported up to ten o'clock this morning total 8659, of whom 1349 are killed, 5604 wounded, and 1706 missing.

IN THE HANDS OF THE KAISER

BERLIN, via the Hague, June 12.—The second American note was in the hands of the Kaiser to-day. The complete text cleared the wires from Berlin last night and was rushed to the emperor's headquarters at the Galicia battle front, being given precedence over all other despatches. At the Kaiser's personal request no official comment on the note's contents accompanied the text sent to the Emperor, it was reported to day. It is understood that the Foreign Office desires that the Kaiser first study the full text of the American rejoinder and then communicate his own impressions to Berlin, before the diplomats here suggest tentative outlines for a German reply.

NEW YORK, June 12. — Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, travelling under a special safe conduct guarantee by the allies, accompanied by his wife, sailed to-day on the Norwegian-American liner Bergensjfordt, for Berne, Norway. The Kaiser's unofficial representative in this country, who for some months has carried on a campaign favouring Germany's position in the war, declared that he considered his work highly satisfactory.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Word was received here from Ambassador Gerard at Berlin to-night or Sunday telling of the manner in which the German officials have accepted the tone of the American note. Up to this afternoon no formal report had been received.

The officials are extremely cheerful. They have intimations that the German sentiment is more friendly. They interpret the changed tone of the German press as indicating that the government now is anxious to spread a desire for pacific measures. President Wilson, wearied with the efforts of the week, spent all of to day resting. This morning he went for a trip to the golf

WEEK'S COURT COSTS COUNTY ALMOST $700

Petit Jurors and Grand Jury Have Been Busy And Four Cases Are Still to be Heard

COUNTY PAYS THE BILL

Thirteen Grand Jurors, at $2.50 a day, for three days—$97.50.

46 Petit Jurors at $2.50 a day, for five days—$600.00.

And the present General Sessions and County Court will extend several days into next week to deal with the remaining cases on the docket.

Sheriff Hall said this morning that if the court continued much longer the County would be bankrupt.

At that the sessions have been heavier than for years past. The number of cases have not been diminished by settlement out of court. Opening on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock there has been no wasted time, although the examinations have been detailed and lengthy.

The thirty-six Petit Jurors, who were not engaged this morning were permitted to go home, full pay having been allowed, as the Clarke-Spencer case promised to occupy the entire day.

Two non-jujry criminal cases, Crown vs. Alex. Lilico, and the Crown vs. Gordon Reynolds and Robert Peters, were disposed of, the latter being acquitted. Lillico is yet to be sentenced. Of the six jury cases only two have been heard. The jury refused damages to Albert P. Hardman in his claim of $1,000 from D. Wilson.

The other case, Clark vs. Spencer Bros., should be concluded to-day.

There remains on the ticket:
Edward Huff vs. Dennis Corkery.
Frank Harding of Dummer vs. W. Batten of Dummer.
Ed. Greer, Otonabee, vs. A. H. McIntyre, Otonabee.
Fred T. Mahood vs. John Hayes.

Report Upholds City Engineer

In so Far as the Proposed Location For Pumping Station is Concerned

The report of Walter J. Francis, consulting engineer, who was called in to give an expert opinion as to the proposed location of the pumping station for use in connection with the sewerage disposal plant, is regarded by many of the Aldermen as an endorsement of the good judgment shown by City Engineer Parsons. Alderman Edgar is one who is inclined to the opinion that this point should be borne in mind by the Council, especially when some of the members are prone to criticise the work of the City Engineer. The report, which cost the city in the neighbourhood of seventy-five dollars, has been filed away for future reference. In the meantime the work of proceeding with the city's sewerage disposal scheme is progressing.

ANNUAL FORD BANQUET

Ald. Duffus, Local Ford Dealer, Preparing for his Complimentary "At Home" to Ford Buyers

One of the interesting events slated for June is the Ford banquet, which is expected to be pulled off the last Thursday of this month, although the date has not yet been definitely fixed. When it does come off it is to be given in the Duffus Garage, Simcoe Street, where the fame of the Ford is being heralded. Preparations are now on foot for the occasion; and it is safe prophecy to predict that when the sagacious local dealer, Ald. Jos. J. Duffus, starts out to extend the glad hand to his patrons, the best will be none too good for them. There will be a large increase of patrons this year to grace the tables. No one outside the Duffus Garage knows just how many extra new Ford owners will turn up at this banquet, but evidences are to be seen every day on the new pavements that the sales representative has been delivering the goods about as fast as the Ford Co. could supply them. So that the coming event promises to eclipse its predecessors, and prove a delightful gathering of Ford owners.

LARGE NUMBER ON MOONLIGHT

The annual moonlight excursion under the auspices of the Young People's Guild of Knox Presbyterian Church was held last evening, per steamer Stoney Lake. Though the weather was a little cool, there was a large crowd on hand to enjoy a very pleasant outing.

When teas make the enormous advance that they have during the past few months, the general inclination is to lower the quality and put in more dust. The Salada Tea Co. give exactly the same quality and freedom from dust as in the past. They would prefer going out of business to lowering the quality they have served the public with for 25 years, but they must charge the higher prices they are compelled to pay for fine teas.

Allies Within 4 Hours March of Gallipoli

Have Made an Advance After Terrific Fighting and Extreme Left of the Allied Forces Threatens to Encircle the Enemy's Entrenchments.

BIG BATTLE NEAR MAIDOS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

ATHENS, June 12.—The Allies are now fighting in the region of the town of Gallipoli, having arrived within a four-hours' march, after terrific fighting. The extreme left of the Allied forces threatens to encircle the enemy in entrenchments to the north of the town. A great battle has been in progress since Thursday around Maidos. The Allies occupied two hills near Maidos. A Senegalese regiment took seven hundred Turks prisoners on the heights of Artakeui, near Maidos. The authorities at Constantinople have commandeered forty ships as floating hospitals.

GERMANY'S COLLAPSE MAY COME SOONER THAN WAS EXPECTED

All the News From the War Front Becomes Daily Better Says T. P. O'Connor—Destruction of Zeppelin Has Caused Immense Satisfaction—Kitchener's Army Ready for the Big Advance.

(Copyright, 1915, Central News, by T. P. O'Connor.)

LONDON, June 12.—All the news from the war front becomes daily better. The collapse of Germany may be coming more rapidly than was thought possible some weeks ago.

The French advances have all been successful; Italy is making way steadily, and Russia is once more showing her marvellous powers of recuperation after a big disaster. The British troops also have continued to gain new ground, while the operations in the Dardanelles, one of the most hazardous of all the British enterprises, now seem destined to success, whether sooner or later.

Lord Kitchener has a million men drilled and equipped ready to get across to France when the big advance comes. All are eager for the fight while France, despite all statements to the contrary, has still big reserves.

Caused Satisfaction.

Of all the facts of the war none has created such immense satisfaction as the destruction of the Zeppelin single handed by the young Canadian lieutenant of the naval aviation corps, Reginald Warneford. All the outrages on civilian life in England are considered avenged, while further raids are regards as rendered more difficult.

While I might have begun with a frank dissection of the parliamentary difficulties and also of the troubles of the new ministry, the subject is one hardly worthy of further discussion. Unworried by the attacks in the Harmsworth newspapers, either direct or covert, the ministry are settling down to a more active conduct of the war, without regard to personal criticism.

The House of Commons will be sent quietly home in a few weeks, not to return again for several months.

The Northcliffe Matter.

It must sometimes be rather amusing to Alfred Harmsworth, Lord Northcliffe, to find himself, as he has been for some weeks, the centre of a great political storm; to be pitted against what was one of the most powerful ministries of modern times, and to be in a contest with the soldier who has the strongest hold on popular British imagination.

Alfred Harmsworth, before he came into his own, had as many hard struggles as most men. Son of a brilliant father a member of the bar and of an adorable mother—an Irishwoman—he found his youth darkened by the black shadow of poverty. Whenever he alludes to this wark page of his early history it is always with something of a shudder and with a revealing glimpse into his depths he shows that the first impulse of his life was to get wealth sufficient never to know the miseries and humiliations of poverty again.

All these miseries and humiliations he must have known almost to their depths when he started trying to make a living in Journalism; We used to have in London—they have almost disappeared—a curious group of journalists known as penny-a-liners, because their copy was supposed to be paid for at the price of a penny a line. I have seen some of the bills sent in to journals with which I was associated in my early days in which the words were counted and the price of a penny a line was demanded and nothing more. In modern journalism the penny-a-liners has been succeeded by the free lance journalist, who is better paid and is often well paid, but who has something of the uncertainty and the alternating feats and famines of the old journalist penny-a-liner.

A Free Lance Journalist.

Alfred Harmsworth began journalistic life as a free lance journalist and there are stories of his having to borrow a silk hat from an equally poor comrade whenever he went on the ungrateful enterprise of seeking an editor to accept a bit of copy. But he had the instinct for meeting the tastes of the masses from even his early youth, and, finding somebody to put up a few hundred pounds, he started "Answers." "Answers" in a few years' time was a tremendous success and became the cornerstone of his fortunes. It is a great property still. From "Answers" sprung a number of other journals. To the majority even of newspaper men, three-fourths of these journals are absolutely unknown, even by name. They have all kinds of fantastic titles such as "Comic Cuts" and "Home Chat," and address themselves mainly to the masses. All bring in huge incomes.

He was still in the "Answers" stage of his career when by a curious coincidence he found himself in an office just opposite to that in which at the time I was carrying on a daily paper. I thought of a combination and proposed it to him, but he wrote me back a friendly letetr in which he avowed himself an admirer of Joseph Chamberlain and of the policy of protection. That made any combination in a political paper impossible between him and me. But I had in my office an able news editor named Kennedy Jones; he shared Alfred Harmsworth's political leanings and induced Harmsworth to buy the "Evening News," a widely circulated but up to that date, unsuccessful newspaper. The deal was carried through. Alfred Harmsworth entered into political and daily journalism for the first time in his life and soon afterward he started the "Daily Mail," which struck a strange new note in British journalism, and also became at once a gigantic success. Then came the crowning suc-

The Government Makes a Reply

Provinces and Municipalities Must Help Solve Unemployed Problem

OTTAWA, June 10—No action will be taken by the Dominion Government regarding the unemployment problem unless the Provinces and municipalities are willing to co-operate. This, in effect, is the answer given by Sir Robert Borden in a letter to Mayor Waugh of Winnipeg, chairman of the recent delegation which waited on the Government. The Premier asks for information as to what the provinces and municipalities have done. The Government also wants statistics as to the unemployment; whether it is skilled or unskilled, and whether those unemployed are willing to accept agricultural work.

Peterborough was represented at the conference by Ald. J. J. Duffus.

WE MUST ALL FIGHT.

The Germans are learning by costly experience that the policy of force does not always score; that force is not omnipotent; that strategy counts for something in war. Germany, trusting to the principle of brute force, sought to crush her way to the east recently and met with temporary success, capturing the empty shell, Przemysl. But Russian strategy had its turn, and the Germans were caught in a trap on the Dneister, and again Russia has demonstrated her capacity for "coming back." It is remarkable, how Russia and Serbia, in the phraseology of the prize ring chronicler, time after time, "take the count" up to nine, and then come up strong and smiling for the next round. Germany in this war has had many "smashing victories" that did not smash, and although she is putting up a desperate fight, she is continuously being pushed backward, and it won't be long till she will have all she can do, and a little more, to defend her own territory. We have no reason to be discouraged. It was, and is still evident, that there would be, and will be, flow and ebb of the victorious advance of the Allies. We have got the men and the money too; but we must have shells. Ammunition is the currency of successful warfare, as money is the currency of successful commercial and other enterprises. Force rightly applied is right in its place, and what we need now is the force with the explosive as the motive power. Lloyd George says we shall need shells and we must, and shall get them. The Allied forces with the greater force of a moral cause behind them, will bring the desired success. The Kaiser blasphemously brackets Providence and poison; puts his trust in God and gas. We put our trust in Providence, but must at the same time keep our powder dry—in shells. We are all beginning to realize that we individually have a share in this mighty conflict, and we are helping from the least to the greatest — by sending soldiers, or by making shells, or rolling bandages. In this war there is no place for the shirker. We all have a work to do; we can all contribute in our own way to the triumph of the cause of humanity. We all know our cause is just. We must remember the truth of Shakspere's words in Henry VI.:

Thrice is he armed whose cause is just;
And he but naked though locked up in steel
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

WE MUST BE BRITISH.

A Toronto citizen has denounced the teaching of the German language in the schools and colleges of the city. A demand like this is a pitiful and puerile demonstration of spleen and prejudice. It may be true that we have little to thank the Germans for, that is the Germans represented by the demented Kaiser and the denatured war party of Germany. They are not Germany, nor do they represent the real people of Germany. We are not fighting against the German people. We are fighting to free them from the tyranny of Junkerism, to lift the load of militarism, and the troubling burdens it represents from their soldiers. We are fighting in effect, if not by organized intention, to make them free as we are free. When this war is over a new Germany will arise, an unbound Germany; that country will be freed from the shackles, that generations of false education founded on the infernal doctrine of force, has forged.

It is also true that Kaiserism and militarism in their maleficent manifestations have made the names Germany and Germans, to stink in the nostrils of the honest and decent world. We may wipe off the map of the world the system that has brought this effect; but we can't wipe out, nor do we want to wipe out, the great German people; for they are a great people. They are our ethnic kin; their language is cognate with ours. At bottom, in a philological sense, the German language is identical with the English language, and at bottom and indominant characteristics, the German people are identical with the English people. We can hardly speak ten words of the English language without using one or more root words of the German language. The idea of banishing the German language from our school curricula is an absurdity; it would be an evidence of petty spite unworthy of any country, outside of Germany, as the Kaiser has made it; not as we and the allies are going to unmake it.

The war will end in the freeing of Germany, and putting the German people in a position where they can turn their great minds, their great skill in science and art, to the uplifting of humanity, and the enlightment and benefit of the world. We can't cut free from Germany, nor do we want to do so. We should forfeit the enjoyment of the priceless good in art and literature that Germany has produced. If we yielded to the demand of the Toronto "crank," who proposes the banishment of the German language from our schools, we should consistently have to deny the great works of music German genius has given us. We should (as an example) have to hold taboo Handel's Hallelujah chorus the greatest and noblest hymn of concerted music ever harmonized outside Heaven.

We must not be narrow nor parochial nor lend ourselves to childish prejudices and hysterical emotions. Our minds are given us to think with, to reason with, and they must be light indeed, to be carried away by every wind of prejudice. Many persons are, as they think, righteously indignant because Nerlich of Toronto, has been acquitted of high treason. He simply got British justice, and that's the main point. He had a fair trial, and the result of it is to the glory of our free institutions. We are in Canada, not in Germany of the Kaiser. We are civilized, and Nerlich got the benefit of our civilization. If a Canadian had been arrested in Germany on a similar charge, ten to one he would have been stood against a wall and shot without a trial. We are different; and we should, and do, glory in it. It is unworthy of a Canadian to propose anything that would degrade Canadians to the level of German methods as inspired and interpreted in blood and iron, by the militarism of Germany. In a word we must be British.

CANADA'S CONTRIBUTIONS.

It may seem childish to insist upon the prominence, both in spirit and performance Canada is taking in this war. But patriotism and love of our great country justify a little complacent self-gratulation. Canada occupies a pretty large space on the map of the world. Up to the present, however, it has been largely an outline map—a sketch. But our achievements of the past ten months has deepened the lines and made the outline bolder. We have been put upon our mettle. We have been tried and not found wanting. Our soldiers have been quite up to the mark—up to the high standard that British fighting in a thousand brilliant battles in a thousand years has set. Our Canadian soldiers have been praised to the spoiled-child point, if they weren't of too solid stuff to be easily spoiled. A Canadian aviator, has not measured up to the standard of other air-field warriors—he has set a new standard by the most brilliant achievement in aerial warfare.

In this war Canada has found herself, and surprised herself and the world by her capacity of doing the impossible. We have been of vital help to the Allied armies in the battle line; and now we have come up level (according to our capacity) with the Mother Country in supplying the great need of the hour—munitions of war. We have done in this regard from the beginning of the war, what Great Britain has just now made preparations for exhaustively doing. A summary of what Canada has done in regard to supplying munitions of war is given below, as taken from the speech of General Bertram at the meeting of the Manufacturers' Association in Toronto yesterday. This summary of what Canada has done reads thus:

247 factories, in 76 Canadian cities and towns, making war munitions.
70,000 mechanics given employment.
One million dollars paid weekly in wages.
50,000 shells per day will soon be the rate of production.
Component parts, including steel, mainly produced in Canada.
Copper to be refined in Canada shortly.
Every effort being made to have the industry self-containing and independent of outside contingencies.
Trinitro-toluene, a high explosive, now being made from by-products of Sydney, N.S., coke ovens.
650,000 shells already shipped from this country.

This, means, in the words of the linguistic Philistine, "going some"; especially when we recall that, at the beginning of the war Canada was equipped for turning out 75 shells per day, importing most of the materials of many component parts of shells. Now Canada is turning out between 40,000 and 50,000 shells per day, or a million and a half per month. Canada has already shipped 650,000 shells, and best of all General Bertram tells us that arrangements are practically completed for refining our copper ore in Canada—and if copper, why not our nickel? This shows that one result of this war will be to make Canada more self-contained, more independent in resource as well as spirit. While we have reason to feel proud of Canada's all-round share in this great conflict, we should not be unduly exalted; we are simply doing our duty, and incidentally reaping the rewards and results that come from an honest discharge of duty.

THE PRESS CRITICISM OF LORD KITCHENER NOT AN UNMIXED EVIL

How Good Has Come Out of the Controversy, Resulting in Wholesome Division of Labour.

Though nothing can justify the motives, manner and animus of the Northcliffe attacks on Lord Kitchener it would appear that the British press is now pretty generally agreed that military conditions needed a shake-up.

For one thing, the hero of Khartoum was given too much to do, and some of the work was not suited to him. An army had to be created and trained: for this Kitchener was the only man, and he has performed a miracle. But, as the Times says, it is a solid fact that there exists a "deplorable shortcoming in munitions of war, and especially in high explosive shells," and the new coalition government has assigned to its most brilliant and powerful member, Mr. Lloyd George, the task of "so ordering matters at the war office that there shall be no question henceforth of engaging the most powerful enemy in the world with weapons less numerous and less effective than his own."

The Manchester Guardian agrees that the best man in the new government should

"Take full control of an undivided responsibility for the whole of the department of the war office which has to do with the production of war material, but not with the clothing or provisioning of the troops. It is a vast, industrial business, and can only be effectively performed if placed under civilian control. Lord Kitchener failed to recognize its magnitude or the impossibility of carrying it out effectively on the old lines."

The New Statesman goes so far as to say:

"It is now apparent that the appointment of a professional soldier to a political office was a mistake, and that if an experienced administrator like Lord Haldane had gone to the war office last August our military forces would have been better equipped than they are to face their tremendous task."

When the Manchester Guardian speaks of Kitchener's managing the munition production "on the old lines" the allusion is probably to the Northcliffe charge that shrapnel was sent to the front when the insistent call was for high explosives. Says the Observer:

"To deal with the new system of German defences in Flanders—with barbed wire placed low, and with trenches and shelters reinforced by steel and concrete—we need far more high explosive. We need it in vast and ever increasing and almost unimaginable quantities."

The New Statesman says:

"The message charging that the War Office disregarded Sir John French's appeals for a larger supply of high-explosive shells was Colonel Repington's (the military correspondent of the Times), but it appears to have behind it the authority of Sir John French, with whom Colonel Repington was staying and by whose censor it was passed. It seems to have been, in fact, true."

Apparently Lord Kitchener's idea was to kill Germans with shrapnel. Certainly German shrapnel has been effective enough against our troops in the trenches. But French's idea is to make a swift and irresistible advance by dynamiting a way through the German trenches and entanglements. It is to be a hundred Neuve Chapelle power rush, and Lloyd George is the man of the hour who is to make the dynamite forthcoming, while Kitchener will continue his herculean labors in the organization of more and more troops to follow up the dynamite with the bayonet and finish the last German reserves. — Ottawa Free Press.

Legal Tilts Only Interesting Feature to Saw Mill Case

C. A. Gordon and F. B. Kerr Debated and Contested Evidence for Every Possible Advantage—Some of the Points Made in Hearing.

The Havelock saw mill case dragged heavily through the County Court until 6.30 yesterday evening, presenting little or no interesting evidence. After visiting the Spencer mill, where John E. Clark almost lost his right hand on December 19, 1914, the jury resumed their places about 4.15 p.m., and were immediately presented with expert evidence, after which Mr. Kerr and Mr. Gordon argued exhaustively, contending every foot of the ground" for the slightest advantage.

Both counsel appeared to be on edge and seemed determined to let none of the evidence remain unracked. One witness Mr. Gordon cross-examined twice and Mr. Kerr re-examined twice, according to the prescribed regulations of course, but Judge Huycke had to draw an undeviating line as to the points to be thus attacked and defended. Occasional "sniping" in the form of remarks while the other lawyer had the witness, drew a slight rebuke from His Honour, who reminded the opposing counsel that they were both prone to that practice in this particular case.

Judge Huycke suggested a night session when 6.30 struck, but both Mr. Gordon and Mr. Kerr expressed the opinion that Saturday would wind up the argument and summaries.

Juror D. M. (Tom) Minnicola asked if he might be permitted to address the Court, and said he would prefer a night session. Visions of the Saturday fruit trade without being on the job apparently stirred Mr. Minnicola.

His Honour replied that he appreciated the jujror's situation but the case must be proceeded with.

With the exception of the legal tilts the case was devoid of interesting features.

John Peeling of the Northumberland Paper Mill Co., witness for the plaintiff, Clark, had previously stated that the Spencer mill showed him certain things which he had never seen before a "jointer" acting as a counter-saft to a "button" saw.

When he said, under cross-examination that he had never seen shingles disposed of as in the Spencer Mill that stirred Mr. Gordon a trifle more. Graded shingles were usually thrown into bins. Mr. Gordon asked him to discuss just this particular mill and questioned the witness as to where the shingles could be piled.

"The culls might be piled any place," Peeling said, and then added: "except on the saw."

"Don't make fool replies" was Mr. Gordon's tart remark, which drew the attention of Judge Huycke, who said Counsel should not make a reference of that form.

As Clark had explained on Thursday afternoon, he ha been told to pick up the shingles and pack them; some weer under the "jointer" beside the saw which was in motion. An automatic guage or guard was in front of the saw, held by a spring, but not blocked. While on his knees to gather the shingles, Clark pushed the sliding table with his left hand, apparently overbalanced, and, to save himself, threw up his right hand, which pressed the guard and went in against the saw.

Mr. Gordon: "If a man got on his feet to shove in that table there would be little or no danger from the saw?"

"No."

Witness said that a man accustomed to working around machinery would, in most cases, just push in the table even while on his knees. Witness added to Mr. Gordon's question that a prudent man would stand up. He would know the saw was revolving behind the springboard, and that there was danger there.

To Mr. Kerr, under re-examination witness said he had never seen shingles distributed from a jointer as in the Havelock mill.

"In this case the shingles had no business being under the jointer," he said.

To get in a position to pull the [illegible] witness said, some people would get on their knees; witness said he would not.

Robert Whatley.

To Mr. Kerr, Mr. Whatley said he was in the shingle business with E. H. Mann and had worked with jointers about twenty years. He saw the Havelock mill machine. Witness said he always blocked up the guard of a jointer when its was not required for use. A block was simply cut from the butt of a shingle. Witness said he visited the Mann mill in the afternoon after returning from Havelock, and found the guards blocked up as they had been left after being last used.

It would be a simple matter to block the guage in the Havelock mill. It would not interfere with the shafting. The machine would be made practicaly safe.

Witness said a workman would have to get on his knees to pick up the shingles beneath that jointer. The premises, he stated, were not properly lighted. He said the machine would have been safer had it been equipped with a box to drop over the saw.

To Mr. Garden.

Cross-examined by Mr. Gordon, witness said modern and new jointers were put on the market without the block he mentioned. The block was a simple contrivance hat workmen, themselves, made.

Witness said that in the case of this sliding table he would consider it safer to push the table back with his two hands and while standing up.

Have Off-Days.

Mr. Whatley said workmen have "off days," times when they are not as alert and keen as usual. Professional and business men have similar experiences. In such times, to a workman, danger is not always as apparent as it should be, and it is prtly for such conditions that machines have safeguards to prevent accidents.

Obeying Orders Costly to Quinn

The recent disablement of "Jack" Quinn, pitcher for the Baltimore Federals and once a star of the Yankee mound men, has revived a story in which the obeying of orders probably led up to the retirement of the pitcher. It happened back in 1910, when George Stallings, the Miracle Man of the Braves, was working wonders with the Highlanders and in a game against Cleveland being played at Somers Park, in the Forest City.

Quinn had drawn the assignment for the day, and being the best curve ball pitcher on the team Stallings had visions of a certain victory. To be assured of success Stallings called Quinn to one side before the contest started and instructed him how he was to pitch to each of the Cleveland batters. He laid particular stress on the kind of ball that he though would fool "Larry" Lajoie.

"Lajoie can hit anything," wisely advised Stallings, "but if you keep a fast one breaking over the inside of the plat he won't be able to drive it out of the infield. Don't try to hook any over the outside." These orders were given Quinn just as the game began.

Everything went as Stallings had foretold until in the fourth inning when Lajoie came to bat. Quinn had been mowing down the opposition in pleasing style and already had made Lajoie ground out on an easy chance. He kept the ball flying past the Frenchman on the inside corner and so close Lajoie could hardly get a fair smash at it.

Lajoie, however, was one of those men who cannot be fooled all of the time. He anticipated the "fast one inside" and put his strength against the ball, driving it with electric force directly toward Quinn. In self-preservation Quinn ducked and threw his hands in front of the ball, but the pellet hit against the end of the ulna bone, shattering it in a distressing manner.

Quinn was incapacitated for most of the year from this injury, and when he did begin pitching again he found that he could not curve the ball as before, his wrist refusing to hold up the strain. Then he learned the "spitball" delivery, and since then has been using this method to baffle the batters. Undoubtedly this injury, sustained in 1910, has again asserted itself, and many doubt if Quinn will ever be able to pitch again. He intends to have his wrist operated upon in hopes of having the trouble corrected, but few of his friends hold out any hope for him. It seems that now he cannot hold a ball, much less deliver one that is at all puzzling.

In telling of his mishap at Cleveland Quinn said that it was all right to obey orders with most hitters, but when it comes to delivering ones to Lajoie the best place to send the ball was on the outside of the plate, where the Frenchman could drive it over the fence. Then the pitcher was in no danger at least.

Aunt Sally's Advice To Beauty Seekers

K. C. P. asks: "Will you tell me how to get my hands white and soft? They have become rough and are so dark in contrast to my arms." The method mentioned in reply to Eloise should bring the desired results; wear gloves to prevent soiling the bed linen.

D. N. A. writes: "How can I reduce a double chin? Also how get rid of crow's feet?" Use a wash lotion prepared by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hasel. This tightens the skin, tending to disperse wrinkles as well as flabbiness about the chin or elsewhere.

Eloise says: "My freckles are worse than ever this year, made doubly conspicuous by a pallid complexion. Is there any cure?" Ask your druggist for an ounce of mercolised wax, apply nightly like cold cream, removing in the morning with warm water. As the wax gradually absorbs the lifeless cuticle, not only will the freckles vanish, but the new and younger skin which appears will have a healthy colour. Probably you will need to continue treatment a couple of weeks or so.—Women's Realm.

Becker Shuns Religious Consolation But Patient Priest Waits For Anger To Subside

OSSINING, N. Y., June 12. — Charles Becker, once praised from one end of New York city to the other for his meritorious exploits as head of the Strong Arm Squad, but now awaiting death for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, a common gambler, spent Sunday in his cell at Sing Sing in the most desperate battle of his life—the final struggle of the mental and physical being against the spiritual. It was the beginning of the last fight of the man who has spurned his religious faiths, but now is breaking and about to prepare himself to enter into eternity.

No one knows save Becker himself whether he has resolved to welcome back the faith he scorned, but those around the prison who have seen strong, forceful men in a rage at conviction the same as Becker, predict that eventually he will become a contrite man and go into the next world fully prepared as his faith teaches him. Meanwhile he is a whirlwind of conflicting emotions. He declares he is being hounded to his death caught in a flood of circumstances which he could not control. From the agnostic of the day before Sunday he was the sceptic, asking of his advisor:

"If there is a God in heaven, why did he allow me to come to this?"

Gives Away His Prayer Books.

But Becker asks no quarter. He says he knows his doom is sealed. He wants to go to the chair as quickly as possible and have it over. He has denied his God and man, chided his wife, turned his back on his priestly mentor and refused to accept spiritual overtures. He is mad with the anger that comes to a man who persists in his own innocence and rebels at paying the forfeit with his life. He says every one and every thing is against him, even heaven itself. He has given up absolutely all hope of his life being spared, and, as if in further irreverence, he has given away his prayerbooks.

[illegible] Sunday. They were Mrs. Becker, who came to cheer him fith a hope that som thing might be done for him; Father Cashin, the prison chaplain, and the Deputy Warden, Mr. Johnson. Becker rebelled at intercession, decried the efforts to induce him to prepare in the conventional way for the future life, and declared he would have no appeal to Governor Whitman.

Mrs. Becker came in the early afternoon. She wore a trim, black dress with a simple white collar and graceful black hat. She looked pretty and as fresh as the green grass all around the prison slopes. She remained for two hours and a half talking with her husband in the principal keeper's office. It was the first time she had seen him since Thursday night, when he had told her he would publicly repudiate her if she went to Governor Whitman with an appeal. But what he said could not be learned, although it was assumed that this subject had been talked over, for the wife of the doomed man was smiling and seemingly confident when she emerged from the gray prison walls.

Father Cashin Waits Patiently.

Mrs. Becker refused to make any comment on the probable course the family would pursue, but there was an inkling that, despite her husband's known declaration that he would repudiate any effort on her part to influence the Governor, some such move as this might be made. It was merely conjectured that influence of friends might be brought to bear upon the Governor at the eleventh hour in the hope that at least a reprieve might be granted.

Father Cashin's call on the doomed man was made in an effort to lead him back to such a frame of mind toward his God that he would ask for communion. On Wednesday, in a moment of supreme rage at the adverse decision which means he must die, Becker refused to accept communion from Father Cashin, although he had asked the priest to come to his cell and give it. Believing that the prisoner's attitude was he result of his growing anger, the priest has bided by his time, feeling fully confident that within a few days, after Becker had time to think it all over, the doomed man will return to the ways of his faih.

"Becker is just plain mad," was the way Father Cashin explained the prisoner's mental condition. "He is in no state that would indicate any breaking of his mind; but he is just worked up because of his anger at the decision. But he is the kind of strong man—like many others we have seen go through the same thing—who will be too strong to go to meet his maker unprepared."

"You Are Facing Eternity."

When he went into the death house in the morning Father Cashin found Becker somewhat complacent, but as the prisoner talked he did not clinch his fists, his face did not turn red as it had on Thursday night when Becker was harsh to both his wife and his attorney, who were trying their best to help him. The priest talked with him for an hour, mostly about the case and only touching the subject of religion. He is fully convinced that there is no more hope of Becker escaping the chair, and he told the prisoner so.

"Charlie," Father Cashin said, "you are up against it. You are now facing eternity. The only hope now is for you to save your soul."

Becker made no reply and the priest urged none. He awnted to leave this message with him, so the prisoner could think of it through the day and nights that are to come. Perhaps the strangest feature of Becker's varying conduct is that he has seemed at his worst only when with those who are nearest and dearest to him. Mr. Johnson, the deputy warden, has seen none of the irascibility he says. He declares Becker never has said in his presence anything in the nature of an attack on Governor Whitman; that he is not having and has no "death house hysteria" as some have styled it. He says Becker spends his time reading, mostly good books and a few of the newspapers.

It was just a year ago, May 20, when Becker entered the death house after his second trial. There are seventeen cells in the building in which the condemned men are confined and all the cells are occupied, Twelve cells are on the ground floor and are arranged six on the south side and six on the north side. Five cells are in a gallery above the northern row. Becker has the cell in the northeast corner of the death house. His next door neighbour is Hans Schmidt, the priest condemned to death for the murder of Anna Aumueller.

Becker's family and counsel will hold a conference in New York Tuesday night, at which it will be decided just what will be the final and last attempt to save the condemned man.

GERMAN RESERVIST IS APPREHENDED

Man Who Swore Lusitania Was Armed Held on Conspiracy Charge

NEW YORK, June 12. — Gustav Stahl, the German reservist who signed an affidavit filed in Washington by the German Embassy to support the contention that the Lusitania was armed when she sailed from this port, was arrested for perjury and sent to the Tombs in default of $10,000 bail.

The perjury charge was based on statements made by Stahl before the Federal Grand Jury, where he contended he had stated the truth in the affidavit. He was arrested as he left the Grand Jury room on a complaint signed by Deputy United States Attorney Raymond H. Sarfaty.

The complaint charging Stahl with perjury reveals for the first time officially that the Federal Government has undertaken to prove the existence of far-reaching conspiracy against the United States in negotiations with Germany respecting the Lusitania and the German allegations that she was armed.

Reports of the Inspectors Employed in Peterboro County

Overseer John Watt of Peterboro' Reports That Bass Fishing Was Very Good Last Year. Confiscated Six Gill Nets, Two Spears and One Rifle—Overseer F. J. Moore of Lakefield Would Close the Season for Maskinonge From April 1st to June 16th.

The appended reports as submitted to the Game and Fisheries Department of Ontario by the Game and Fisheries Inspectors of Peterborough county will doubtless be of interest to local sportsmen.

Overseer William Clarkson, of Lakehurst, reports that the number of tourists who visit this district are increasing every year. The fishermen appeared to be pleased with their catches last year. The number of bass and maskinonge caught is increasing. The trout in the northern lakes are about the same as in 1913. He would recommend that a hatchery be erected at a suitable place on the Mawartha Lakes. He is of the opinion that the close season should be from October 1st to November 30th.

Ducks are somewhat rare, but partridge are plentiful.

Deer are about the same as last year.

Mink and muskrats are plentiful and beaver are becoming numerous. Overseer Clarkson recommends that trappers be licensed.

Overseer Edward Fleming, of Hastings, reports that the angling was good, maskinonge being much larger than in former years and bass becoming more plentiful.

Ducks are not so plentiful, the boats which have been working on the canal having driven them out of the river. Rats are becoming plentiful in the marshes along the river. He thinks a trappers' license would be a good thing.

Overseer John Forsyth, of Bridgenorth, reports that fishing was very good last year. Maskinonge and bass seem to be quite plentiful, although no great catches were made at any one time. The reason for this is because Mud Lake is a real good feeding ground for fish.

Since fishing through the ice has been prohibited, which he thinks was a grand amendment to protect the fish, it seems very hard for some people to keep from spearing fish in the spring. These illegal workers should be fined $20 for the first offence and be given six months in jail for the second.

Ducks were plentiful last fall. Partridge are also numerous. Mink and muskrats are about the same as usual. Deer hunting went on as brisk as ever last season.

Overseer Wellington Lean, of Apsley, reports that partridge are quite plentiful in some localities, while in others they are very scarce.

Wolves are more numerous than they have been for a number of years. He would advise giving a large bounty, thereby encouraging people to kill them. If this were done, deer would become more plentiful. At present they are very scarce, as the wolves are their worst enemies, killing more of them than the hunters do.

Beaver are becoming very plentiful, and he can find no trace of anyone having molested them. He is giving them special attention, and if they are protected for a few more years they will be as numerous as in former years. Ducks were quite numerous.

He would like to recommend the taking of steps to stop dogs running at large from hunting deer.

Overseer John McFarlane, of Keene, reports that the Game and Fishery Laws have been well observed in his district, but there is still a little fishing done out of season, which he finds hard to stop on account of having supervision over such a large district.

Maskinonge fishing was about the same as in 1913, not very good, especially during the summer. Bass fishing was good. Brook trout was scarce, though some good catches were made. There were about thirty-five foreigners repairing the G. T. R. track between Blezard's and Birdsalls' Station, and it was reported to him that they were going to clean out the creek of trout as they were fishing all day Sunday. On week days he went down and put up notices and warned them to stop, which they did.

Trapping was not very good last spring owing to the low water in the marshes. There were plenty of muskrats, but they were hard to get at. Mink were scarce.

Ducks were plentiful in the spring, it was estimated that there would be about 25,000 on the lake if they were not molested. In the fall they were not so plentiful as in other years, probably on account of the fine weather. They took a different flight and did not stop on Rice Lake. Rice was fairly good, but not as good as was expected from the abundance of straw. There were about thirty families of Indians camping on Sugar Island, from the other side of the lake, gathering rice.

Partridges are plentiful, but wild and hard to shoot. Black squirrels are plentiful and cotton-tail rabbits are also putting in an appearance.

Overseer Henry Melville, of Havelock, reports that fish are becoming rather scarce owing to the immense number of people who angle. The lakes and rivers are covered with fishing crafts during the season, there being a great many tourists and cottagers from all parts of Canada and the United States.

He is of the opinion that a great many tourists are not keeping the law either with regard to the legal number of fish taken or the size of the same, and they will have to be closely watched. His district contains 26 lakes and nearly a hundred miles of rivers and creeks. It would be impossible for him to watch every individual who hunts or fishes, so he goes that the carrying of fire arms be prohibited during the close seasons, as there are so many tourists, and there is no necessity for them to carry guns.

Overseer John Watt, of Peterborough, reports that bass fishing was very good, and although there was every indication of there being a great many maskinonge they did not take the bait. He supposes it was due to their having abundant supply of natural food, as the fish caught were in splendid condition.

Owing to the low water in the spring it was very difficult for trappers to get good sets, or reach their traps, nevertheless the catch was well up to the average.

Ducks seemed plentiful in the spring and summer, but when the shooting season opened not many were bagged in the southern parts, but in the north they were quite abundant and at the time of writing are returning to the southern territory in great numbers. Partridge are plentiful everywhere, the dry spring having apparently been favourable for them.

There are a fair number of deer, and some parties procured their limit easily.

Overseer Watt regrets that he had to lay a number of informations which resulted in about twelve convictions for violation of the Game and Fisheries Act, which does not speak well for the sportsman in his territory. Owing to the valuable assistance the Department authorized him to engage he was able to keep down poaching, but this entailed much hard work. He and his assistants confiscated six gill nets, two spears, and one rifle.

Has been Canada's favorite yeast for more than forty years.

Enough for 5c. to produce 50 large loaves of fine, wholesome nourishing home made bread. Do not experiment, there is nothing just as good.

GRAND JURY'S REPORT AND THE NATIVE BORN

Editor of The Examiner:

The report of the Grand Jury as presented to His Honour Judge Huycke the other day affords food for considerable reflection, more particularly that portion of the report which referred to what was termed "the failure of natural born Canadians in Peterborough to respond to the call of the Empire." With all due justice to our British born citizens and with the heartiest and most sincere admirations for the unhesitating manner in which they have rallied to the colours, I may be permitted to say that the Grand Jury's report is rather unfair to the many—in spite of the report—native-born who have responded. I venture to say that the esteemed gentlemen on the Grand Jury have but a hazy idea of how many native born Canadians in Peterborough have heard and answered the call. They speak of "the few" and "the handful," perhaps influenced by articles they have read in newspapers in regard to the Canadian forces as a whole—certainly without any real facts. The report admits that Peterborough has done its share in point of numbers. That much granted, the Grand Jury may be surprised to know that over 45 per cent. were native born Canadians. Certainly that number cannot be called a "handful" or "a few." I have followed the figures closely since the war began and for the benefit of the Grand Jurors I will give the percentages of native born Canadians in the different quotas from Peterborough:

57th detachment, first contingent, 39 per cent.

3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons detachment, 1st contingent, 73 per cent.

24th Field Battery detachment, 1st coningent, 42 per cent.

57th detachment, 2nd contingent, 35 Battery, 60 per cent.

3rd Prince of Wales detachment, 8th C.M.R., 59 per cent.

57th detachment, 39th Battalion, 40 per cent.

This letter is not written in any controversial spirit. The writer feels that the boys from Peterborough are all Canadians, or perhaps a better way to say it, all Britishers. They are all members of the one grand family and it makes little difference in what room in the house they happened to be born. Many who are given in the list as English could undoubtedly in the fullest sense of the word be called Canadians. I know one man who lived in Peterborough for twenty-six years, since in fact he was six years old, and who has been a member of the 57th Regiment for eleven years, before joining for overseas service. I know a score of other lads who have lived here since childhood, brought up and educated here. I know others who have been residents in Peterborough since the South African war, married Peterborough girls and permanently located here. Surely there can be no fault found in calling such men as I have mentioned who are now serving their king and country, Canadians.

But to get back to my main object in writing. The Grand Jury's report does scant justice to the large number of native-born Canadians who have gone forth from Peterborough. My figures are approximately correct and refer only to the rank and file. Counting all officers in would bring the percentage higher. I hope the publication of these statistics will in a measure atone for the inaccuracy of the report presented to Judge Huycke.

I am thoroughly in accord with the opinion of the Grand Jury, however, that there is a necessity for awakening the young men of Peterborough to a sense of their responsibility. Peterborough has done splendidly so far—her native born and her adopted sons have responded magnificently, but the call still goes out and young men must come forward and offer themselves to replace those who have made the great sacrifice. But while urging upon those who have not yet done their duty, the necessity of their falling in line, let us also not fail in giving honour where honour is due. And surely it is not doing that to describe the many scores of native born Canadians who have left Peterborough as a "handful."

Yours sincerely,
"CANADIAN."

A HUNGRY CANADIAN PRISONER

Pte. J. J. Ridden Now in Germany Mentions a few Things He Would Like

Pte. James J. Redden, of the 2nd Battalion, has written to his parents at Campbellford, Ont., that he is a prisoner of war at Giessen, Germany, and that he has a great appetite. He writes:

"I wish you would send me a parcel every week or two, and a dollar or two in a letter. Send parcel in air-tight tin and sealed. Don't put any letter or writing in parcel. Send tobacco, cigarettes, papers, bread, cheese, jam, cake, candy, butter, boiled eggs, syrup or any fruit at all, cooked meat in sealed tins, cookies, or any other eats at all, and tell the neighbours they can do the same if they like and send as often as possible. We are being used fine. Well, this is a fine country, swell buildings, and trees and lawns. Send socks and handkerchiefs, and boot laces in first parcel. Send lots so I can put in the time eating and smoking to pass the time. Send my glasses in a small registered parcel. Send books for me to read and old magazines as long as there is no war news in it. Send all the home-made bread and things you can, and lots of corn syrup and fruit in tins, or pork and beans, sardines, salmon, herring, peanut butter, and lots of jam or jelly, for I can eat like a bear just the same as when I am home. Send some soda biscuits for soup. If you have any apples, oranges or lemons send them along, send maple sugar or syrup I will eat anything at all.

"Well, I can't tell you any war news so you will have to wait for the paper or some of the others to write. Tell the other boys in the other contingents it is fine sport. Well I guess that is all, except you will only get a letter twice a month and two postcards, but you write often and send lots of things to eat, and tell others what I have to say."

A box of food and a money order were sent at once by Private Redden's parents.

Are Forbidden To Publish Their Losses

BERLIN, via London, June 12.—The military commandant of Berlin has issued a renewal of the order prohibiting the publication or communication of military information without a previously granted order. He says the publication of German losses, although based on official lists, "could lay no claim to correctness, and in part give greatly exaggerated figures. Publications of this nature are calculated to evoke groundless uneasiness among the people and also occasion incorrect ideas abroad concerning German losses."

The commandant therefore forbids the publication of all such articles.

Couple Join In Suicide Pact

Swedish Nobleman and Sweetheart Meet a Tragic Death.

NEW YORK, June 12.—In Central Park a young Swedish nobleman and his sweetheart died in a suicide pact. The young woman, Miss Annie Malmquist, a member of a rich and prominent Swedish family of Brooklyn, had been shot twice in the breast, over the heart. The man, Frederick Hussenius, a member of a noble Swedish family of Stockholm, was shot in the head.

A letter found in Hussenius' pocket and addressed to Ludwig Norman, a friend, said: "My dear Ludwig,—When two natures like ours are brought together—temperamental and hypersensitive—a calamity is bound to occur; that is, from the viewpoint of the world. But for us—for her and for me—there is nothing left, and with our hearts filled with joy, we approach the gate that leads to the great Unknown.

"Rejoicing, whether it be oblivion or an eternity where nothing shall part us, we have the strength to enter upon the dim path together."

Nervous Prostration and Heart Troubles

Nervous Prostration, or Neurasthenia, is one of the worst forms of nerve trouble and brings about a general weakness of the whole nervous system.

The symptoms presenting themselves are headache, a feeling of depression, disturbed and restless, unfreshing sleep, often troubled with dreams, fright when in crowded places, dread of being alone, horror of society, fright of travelling, muscular weakness, sense of fatigue upon effort, etc.

All are curable if taken in time.

Milburns Heart and Nerve Pills are just what you require at this time. They strengthen the nerves and build up the whole system.

Mrs. John Hewson, Caledonia, Ont., writes: "I feel it my duty to let you know the great benefit your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. I suffered for four years with heart trouble and nervous prostration. I was so bad I could not go up stairs without sitting down at the top before I could go to my room. I could not sleep nor could I lie on my left side, for it would seem as if my heart would stop. I thought my time had come. I was doctoring with the doctor, but didn't get any benefit. I took eight boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and am enjoying good health."

Price, 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CITY COUNCIL IS ADVISED AGAINST UNNECESSARY EXPENDITURE

Letter From the Bank of Montreal Has Set a Number of the Aldermen Thinking. Financial Authorities Advise Municipalities to Put the Soft Pedal on Municipal Expenditures.

A few of the aldermen are still pondering over the letter that was received a few days ago from the Bank of Montreal, in which reference was made to the advisability of the city curtailing expenditures to the lowest possible minimum. The communication, which came through the Peterborough branch of the bank followed the city's request for information as to the possibility of raising a loan with which to continue paving operations and other public works. While the Bank did not actually refuse a line of credit for this work, it countered by discouraging the expenditure of money for public works other than those which are absolutely necessary. The letter went on to quote an extract from a speech made by Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in which England's Finance Minister admonished municipalities, both at home and abroad, against undertaking work not absolutely required, as the money markets of the world were practically closed so far as the sale of municipal debentures was concerned. A good many Ontario debenture issues have been disposed of in the United States.

Cost of the Work.

It will be remembered that Lindsay, a few weeks ago, turned down a proposal to pave a number of streets, upon the grounds that present financial conditions did not warrant the undertaking.

Whether Peterborough will follow suit remains to be seen. In a few days City Engineer Parsons will have a report to present to the Council when the tenders for street paving will be considered. Two of the tenderers, namely, the Warren Paving Company of Toronto, and the Standard Paving Company, have agreed to take up five per cent. city debentures to the extent of one-half of the total cost of the work, based on a minimum of thirty thousand yards. The money required for this amount of work will be in the neighbourhood of seventy-five or eighty thousand dollars.

A leading financial writer in last week's Canadian Courier warns cities of extravagance in no uncertain terms. He says that the per capita debt should not go above fifty dollars whereas Peterborough's capita debt is in the neighbourhood of seventy-nine dollars.

Limit of City Debts.

As has been pointed out time and again, the City of Toronto is now at the point where it is face to face with its legal debt limit. It has spent and spent till it is prevented by law from adding to its debt. Nevertheless, the other day the city council passed estimates amounting to $37,000,000, or more than twice as much as this year's estimates for the Province of Ontario.

Montreal is in a similar position. within six years, Montreal has spent $167,000,000, of which over one hundred millions has been borrowed. Like Toronto, Montreal is not nearly paying its way. In Buffalo, Cleveland, and other cities, the civic debt is about one-quarter of one-third of that of Toronto, and about one-sixth of one-fifth of Montreal's.

These two leading Canadian cities are not only driving fast towards bankruptcy, but they are setting an example to other Canadian cities, which is having serious consequences No city in Canada should have a debt of more than $50 per head of its population. If your city has gone beyond that, then it is living extravagantly and a reckoning day must come. Montreal is face to face with a deficit of three million dollars this year. Toronto may avoid it, but the tax rate has been raised from 19 to 20 mills. Unless there is a change soon, the bonds of these cities will not be salable.

Army Surgeons Toil to Aid In Winning Battles

The duties of the military surgeon upon the firing line are discussed by Dr. P. J. H. Farrell, of Chicago, Ill., in the New York Medical Journal. "First," says Dr. Farrell, "let it be clearly understood that the surgeon is a military officer and his first thought and best effort must be to do everything within his power to help win the battle that is being fought. All effort to relieve suffering humanity is of secondary importance to the one main object—victory."

Dr. Farrell quotes the United States Army Field Regulations:

"The medical personnel of organizations must remain with them when advancing into action and during the whole course of an engagement. Accordingly the wounded will be treated where their wounds are received and the sanitary personnel will pause, if the organization is moving, only so long as is necessary to give appropriate first aid."

"The rapid disposal of the wounded," says Dr. Farrell, "by sending them to the rear when possible, so that the command will not be impeded, is second in importance to attending the wounded on the battlefield. A large number of wounded men are apt to have a discouraging effect upon their comrades. It is all important that as many of the wounded as possible be returned to duty, for this is frequently an essential factor in winning a battle. Every commander is dependent on full companies to win battles.

"The soldier in all modern armies has a first aid dressing attached to his uniform, that is applied upon the field.

"A secure protective dressing and careful immobilization of fractures will almost elminate amputations. Great care is always taken to remove or cut as little of the clothing as possible to avoid exposing the wound to infection, frostbite, sunburn or insects.

"Infantry fire in the civil war was not effective at more than two hundred yards; now it is effective at 2,500 yards, revolutionizing the work of the surgeon in an engagement. It is impossible to transport wounded men beyond the range of fire. You will use whatever cover and protection are offered in the trenches or any natural cover that the field offers. The ability to command is very important; hospital corps men, like other soldiers, must have implicit confidence in their officers to do their best work. The surgeon must expose himself to the enemy's fire if it is necessary to relieve the wounded. His greatest value to the army is the rapidity with which he can get wounded men back into action, helping to the full extent to win the battle.

"Soldiers are young, healthy men. Experience has taught us that conservative rather than radical surgery gives the best results in the field. You must wait until the army advances, retreats, or there is a lull in the fighting. The greatest number of men are wounded and require first aid from infantry fire, and the least number from the bayonet. The proportion killed in bayonet contact is larger than from either artillery or infantry fire. A soldier will fight with the bayonet as long as he can stand upon his feet or use his hands.

"Humantarians will tell you the chief functions of the medical service in war consist in attending the wounded on the battlefield and the sick in hospital. Sanitarians will consider that prevention of disease in the field is the chief function. Both are absolutely essential; but the commander who is dependent on big battalions to win battles will expect, besides these mainly medical functions, the discharge of two others, the removal of the seriously wounded and immediate return to duty of as man men as possible.

"Duty upon the firing line requires the medical officer to be active and alert, quick of perception, to stand fatigue and exposure and to do maximum amount of work with the least possible assistance.

"An army requires renewal of about eighty per cent. of its strength in the course of a year's campaigning. The seriouly wounded cannot help win the battle that is in progress, and every effort and sacrifice must be made to achieve victory.

"The seriously wounded cannot receive attention while the fight continues. I want to emphasize this point and also the important fact that no civilian surgeons are permitted to come within the fire zone.

"The Medical Corps in the time of war wear the usual brassard upon the left arm. The newspapers in reporting the present war in Europe make the mistake of referring to the medical officers as 'Red Cross surgeons.' They are not Red Cross surgeons, for the latter are never, in this day and age, permitted to come within the fire zone. This rule is general with all armies.

"The casualty list of medical officers in modern warfare is very heavy and equal to that of officers of the line and higher than that of any other staff corps. The medical officer is exposed to the enemy's fire in the performance of his duty; in fact, all officers are. An officer cannot retain command of his men and intelligently direct their efforts, neither can he retain their respetc and confidence if he is stretched out upon the ground."

The Funeral of Corp. Savage

Member of 57th Detachment Who Died of Wounds Buried at Oxford With Full Military Honours.

Corp. A. W. Savage of the 57th detachment, 2nd Battalion, C.E.F., was a native of Oxford, Eng., and by a peculiar coincidence was sent to the Third Southern General Hospital in that city, after having been wounded at Langemarck, and passed away there on April 28th. A copy of the Oxford Chronicle has been received by Mrs. Leal of Peterborough, mother of Douglas Leal, killed at Langemarck, giving particulars of the funeral of Corp. Savage who boarded at the home of Mrs. Leal during part of his residence in Peterborough. The Chronicle says:

The funeral of Corp. A. W. Savage, 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian contingent, foster son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Packford, the Plain, St. Clements, Oxford, took place on Friday afternoon from St. Peter's-in-the-East, where the remains had been placed. Corp. Savage was a victim of the Langemarck fighting and died at the Third Southern General Hospital on Wednesday, the 28th ult., from wounds received in action. At a quarter to two on Friday afternoon a service was held at St. Peter's-in-the-East, (Canon Skrine and the Rev. Father Beckett (St. Thomas') officiating. As the remains were brought from the church, the coffin draped with the Union Jack, the Dead March in "Saul" was played, the firing party from the 2nd Supernumerary Co., O.B.I.I. formed the guard of honour, and Queen's Lane between the church and the High street was lined by members of the Oxfordshire National Reserve. The hearse and three carriages were followed by a detachment of the Oxfordshire National Reserve, under Captain Brakespeare and Lieut. Aldridge and a detachment of the Royal Army Medical Corps under Sergt. Major Stevens. The medical staff of the 3rd Southern General Hospital was represented by Lieut. Symonds.

Among the many floral tributes were wreaths from Canadians in the 1st Canadian Remounts and the 1st Canadian Divisional Supply Column.

It has been ascertained that Corp. Savage was a victim of the poisonous gases which aggravated the wounds and made his condition much more dangerous than might otherwise have been the case. Death was due to septic poisoning.

Ald. G. W. Green A Witness In Saw Mill Case

Had Never Heard of Blocking Jointer Gauge Until in Present Court —Some of the Evidence Produced.

The Clark-Spencer case was resumed in the County Court this morning.

Mr. Kerr recalled plaintiff for a particular question which he wished in the records.

Mr. Gordon objected and the court hadn't been in session a minute when His Honour had to pull up the two lawyers, reminding them of the niceties of court procedure.

Mr. Kerr asked Clarke if the accident he complained of had taken place at the defendants' mill in Belmont township.

Clark—Yes.

When Mr. Gordon objected, Mr. Kerr made some remark to which His Honour expressed exception and reminded both of the amenities that should be observed.

Ald. G. Walter Green.

The first witness for the defence was Ald. Green. He said he had built many shingle jointers. The jointer in the Spencer mill was built on a similar plan to those made to-day.

Witness said he believed a big saw was more dangerous in a mill than a jointer. All saw mill machinery is dangerous, but it won't take after any person."

Ald. Green stated that jointers were not supplied by manufacturers with any block to be placed under the spring board or guard. Witness said that the vibrations of the machine would be apt to loosen the block which would then drop out. This would be dangerous to an employee expecting the block to be there.

On the other hand, if employees did not expect the spring board to be blocked they would know there was danger there and wouldn't think of touching it.

If he were supplying the best jointer that could be made, witness would provide nothing in the form of a block to be put under the spring board. Such a contrivance would be a nuisance. The machine was built to joint shingles and not as a table for men to rest on.

Ald. Green said to Mr. Kerr that he had visited the Mann mill this week. He did not go in to see their jointers, but being in there simply decided to see them. This was not because he had any connection with the present case. He had observed the blocks under the jointer guards in this mill, but did not learn the nature of their use until he had come to court.

Mr. Kerr —You understand that many safety devices are not supplied by the manufacturers?

Yes.

They are often supplied by handy men in the mill?

Yes. We often get improvements from the men who operate machines. We're big enough to admit it.

If the manufacturer supplied a block and it didn't fit he would probably be held responsible?

Yes.

So it is left to the men in the mill, to their own devices?

Is the danger increased by a saw going around by reason of the fact that the operator of that saw is not there?

Ald. Green said he had answered that question several times. "Of course," he replied, "there is greater danger when the saw is going around.'

Mr. Kerr pressed the point in his question and obtained an affirmative reply, that there is greater danger to workmen in a mill when a saw, not in use, is left revolving.

Compensation Act Costly.

Mr. Kerr diverged in the direction of Mr. Green's opinion of workmen and their accidents.

Witness said a great percentage of accidents were the fault of the workmen.

And your idea is that the laws in force now are too stringent?

I won't say anything about them. You know more about law than I do?

Yes, but the law in force since Jan. 1st?

It's a very good law, but it costs too much money.

Under that law a workman gets compensation for his injuries?

Yes.

And the question of carelessness does not prevent him from getting compensation?

Witness replied that the law rather courted carelessness on the part of the workmen.

He Never Kneeled.

Ald. Green regarded the workman's kneeling to pick up shingles as indicative of carelessness; negligence and laziness. I would fire a man whom I found kneeling in such a position quicker than I can answer some of your questions, witness said to Mr. Kerr.

He had been brought up on a farm and kneeling at work had been impressed upon him as a lazy attitude.

Harry Woodcock.

Mr. Gordon called Harry Woodcock, who said he first operated a jointer 22 years ago and the last time was two weeks ago at Harrison's mill, Norwood. He had never seen a block used under a jointer guard and first heard of the practice in this court. His evidence was of an expert character and contained nothing of special interest, being to a large extent similar to that of previous witnesses.

Court adjourned at noon until 2 p.m.

G. Harold Powell Tells Advertising Men About Citrus Fruits

CHICAGO, June 2.—G. Harold Powell of Los Angeles addressed a gathering of seventy-five representatives of the leading newspapers of the country to-day in the offices of Lord & Thomas, on the subject of the marketing methods and business aims of the great California Fruit Growers' Exchange of which he is general manager.

Mr. Powell explained the operation of the Exchange, which does a business of approximately $60,000,000 a year without capital and without profit and pointed out the advantage of the Exchange principle to both the grower and the consumer of California oranges and lemons.

As a result of the extreme care and scientific methods of handling the fruit by the 6,500 grower-members of the Exchange, California citrus fruits reaches the Eastern housewife's table as fresh and perfect in every way as when picked from the trees in the golden State, the grower profiting in his turn because the fruit is saleable and because economical handling prevents excessive selling costs.

"One thing, we believe is misunderstood by the average consumer," said Mr. Powell. "and that is this—the California orange purchased during the summer months is not a Winter orange which has been held in cold storage, but is a fresh picked Summer orange. The orange known as the Valencia variety begins to ripen on the trees about May 1st and is picked and shipped fresh from the trees every day thereafter until about November 1st, when the Naval variety comes into the market. It is, therefore, possible to have fresh picked California oranges every day the year round."

"The Exchange is carrying on an extensive advertising campaign for the purpose of increasing the consumption of oranges and lemons and we feel that this campaign is having a beneficial effect on the public health generally for cassinly every one, from babies to old people, is better for the more frequent use of these fruits. We are not trying to switch people from one kind of orange or lemon to another, for that would merely divert business. To get the best results for both grower and consumer alike we must make people eat more of all kinds of oranges and lemons. That is the main aim in all our publicity."

Jubilee Conference China Inland Mission

In 1865 the C.I.M. was founded by the Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, M.R.C.S.

At the present time it has 1063 foreign, 1694 paid and over 1000 unpaid native workers.

There are over thirteen hundred stations and out stations in fifteen Chinese provinces. Over 5000 persons were baptized last year.

The missionaries are of every evangelical church and of many different European nationalities.

A conference for Bible teaching, prayer and testimony from missionaries who have recently returned from China, has been arranged to mark the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Mission.

China's need and the great but passing opportunity presented before the Church of Christ emphasize the call to such a Conference.

Niagara-on-the-Lake has been chosen as the place of meeting both on account of its accessibility and because it is dear to many as the site of the "Believers' Conferences" of twenty years ago.

The teachers will include Dr. Torrey, Dr. W. J. Erdman, Dr. Farr, Principal O'Meara, Prof. Chas. Erdman and others.

Accommodation is offered by the Queen's Royal Hotel, at the rate of $2.50 per day, two in a room. There are also smaller hotels and boarding houses.

Connections are easily made by rail and boat or rail alone, through Buffalo or Toronto.

Further information will be supplied on receipt of request by the Mission, Church St., Toronto, or Germantown, Philadelphia.

A cordial invitation is offered to all friends of missions who can arrange to visit Niagara, June 15-20 next.

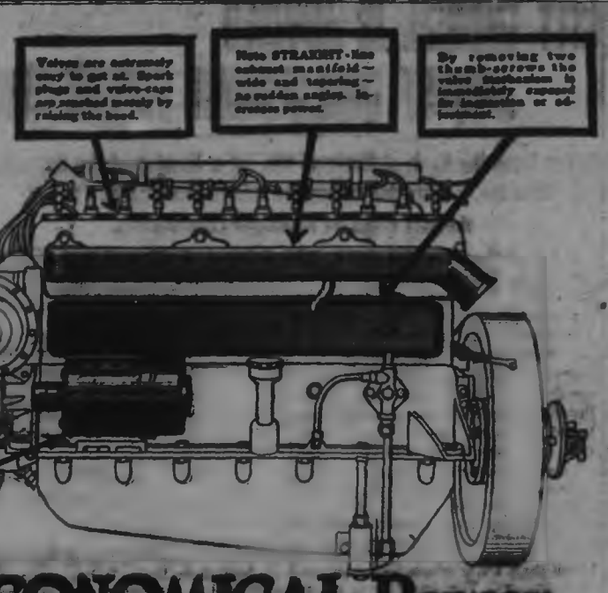
How Studebaker cars are built—motor



Valves are extremely easy to get at. Spark plugs and valve-caps are reached easily by raising the hood.
Note STRAIGHT-line exhaust manifold—wide and tapering—no sudden angles. Increases power.
By removing two thumb-screws the valve mechanism is immediately exposed for inspection or adjustment.
The simple, extremely accessible electric generator—driven by a noiseless gear in mesh with timing gears.

ECONOMICAL Power —and all that you need

This matter of POWER is a thing that we'd like to talk over with you before you buy a car—and talk over it, too, with the hood of a Studebaker open before us. For power is perhaps the most important thing in your car. And this Studebaker Motor is one of the engineering triumphs of Studebaker.

Simple—you'll see that at a glance. But the BIG thing is the POWER that it's designed to deliver. Long-stroke design—for the longer the stroke, the more leverage on the crankshaft. Has the reliable Studebaker oiling and cooling systems that insure conservation of POWER.

But study the little refinements of design and see how this motor has been made to give MORE power without using more gasoline. You'll find, for one thing, that the crankshaft, the connecting rods and all the moving parts are lighter and better balanced than you find in the average motor. The valve passages are much larger and better planned.

The intake is hot-jacketed to insure better vaporization of the fuel and NO waste of gas. The exhaust manifold, wide and tapering, runs back in a STRAIGHT line, with no sudden angles to set up back pressure. And so you'll find a score of improvements over the average motor, too is placed high on the motor, thus shortening the distance the gas travels to the cylinders. Increases power and gives QUICKER response to throttle. Is hot-jacketed and supplied with WARM air, insuring COMPLETE vaporization of even low-grade fuels.

The Starter
is simple in design, easily accessible and starts motor thro' silent chain. No gears in mesh with fly-wheel. Noiseless and at rest except when cranking the motor.

All Belgium's Vast Industrial Plants Work For German Army

PARIS, June 10.—Additional information received from reliable Belgian sources indicates that the Germans are utilizing the greater part of the entire manufacturing facilities in the Liege, Brussels and Antwerp regions in turning out war material and in supplying railway equipment.

The Meuse works, near Seraing; the St. Leonard works in Liege and the Cockerill works at Seraing are all working at utmost capacity in turning out locomotives. The Meuse works are being utilized for repairs to rolling stock, in addition to new locomotive construction.

At Brussels the Bolincyx works are engaged in engine work for the naval construction at Antwerp, and also on turning out pumps, compressors and trench equipment. The Demoor shops at Brussels are buildings lathes for arsenal work. Both plants are in charge of German inspectors and the entire output of the works are for the German service.

In Liege the Fatigue Nationale d'Armes de Guere, the national arms works of Belgium, is working night and day turning out Belgian Mausers for the German troops and in addition motorcycles. It was at this plant that motorcycles were first developed. The Fatigue National shops are employing at present nearly 2,000 persons, of which number about half are Belgian girls. When the German troops first entered Liege the work people of the Fatigue National shops offered resistance. Many of these same work folk owe their lives at present to the fact that they are able to work the machines now used in rifle and revolver construction.

Near Liege the Pieper gun works also are working twenty-four hours a day on rifles for the German army. This is one of the best equipped shops on the Continent and is furnished throughout with the latest and most efficient of American rifling machines and various automatic machine tools. At the plant, as at all others, the inspection and direction is in charge of Germans, with German guards maintaining watch over all. The workmen are virtually prisoners and they are required under military control to report promptly and are not permitted to go beyond certain limits of the city when off duty.

It is a fact that leading officers of the Fabrique National and of the Pieper Works even before August 1 last were Germans, and the capacity of each plant has been as well known to the German authorities at all times, to the minutest detail, as at Spandau, the German arsenal.

The Fetu-Defize shops, the De Longdoz Works and the Jaspar shops, all machine took making establishments in Liege, are now compelled under German control to build for German arsenals. The De Longdoz shops have been put to work turning out heavy shell and shrapnel, while the Jaspar shops are kept busy building milling machines and rifling machines. It was the Jaspar shops which furnished nearly all the rifling machines now in service in the Fletion gun works.

In addition to the above facilities the Germans are working the mines at Seraing and elsewhere in Belgium, and are even utilizing the various Belgian zinc works and glass making plants for naval supplies. Every industry in Belgium which can in any way aid the German army and navy, and the German transportation service is being worked to the utmost. The Germans are making payments to the Belgian workmen on the home basis of pay—that is to say, to those who are not forced as prisoners to work and have even instituted certain German methods as to hygiene and physical upkeep in the matter of food in order to secure the highest productive results from the Belgians. The entire German policy is coupled with the notion that the Germans are in Belgium to stay, and that the best of these Belgian plants which have now been turned to German account are to be reckoned with in future as part of the Imperial German munitions manufacturing depots.

The enormous assistance which these acquired Belgian plants afford to the Germans may be appreciated from the fact that Belgium is essentially a manufacturing country and that the wealth of the nation lies largely in its exports of manufactured articles, mostly of iron and steel fabrication. The German exports here keenly fill in the port the competition of Belgian works, but under present conditions this competition has not only been killed, but the sources here passed under other German control. Much of the pressing want for copper and other metals which Germany has felt is being relieved by the stores found in Belgium. As matters stand to-day the German, Austrian and Belgian machinery works, taken together, exceed all other machinery works combined in Europe in output capacity. This preponderance was established when the Belgian plants were taken over and put to work for Germany under German military direction.

TWO SOLDIERS UNDER ARREST

Lindsay Men Are Imprisoned on a Serious Charge

LINDSAY, June 12.—Since the arrest under military orders of Corp. Gross and Corp. Graum, two soldiers who have been stationed at the Lindsay armouries for months past, there has been considerable talk concerning the two, many hinting that the militia authorities could not be too careful in these troublesome times in watching the movements of soldiers in particular who bear German names and hold office.

Corp. Gross and Corp. Graum were both placed under arrest for what is termed "a serious charge," although the primary complaint against the former was that he failed to appear on parade when the soldiers left for Kingston Wednesday morning last, which would hint at desertion. The latter was charged with being attired in civilian clothes when on duty.

It appears that according to military law soldiers detained in the above manner can demand a hearing within 24 hours. As the hearing was not forthcoming in that space of time Corp. Graum demanded one, Mr. L. R. Knight being apprised of the fact. This hearing was held in the premises of Barrister Knight, and before Major Anderson, O.C., and Lieut. A. L. Campbell, and the soldiers under detention were told that they were under arrest on a serious charge.

It was expected that an escort would arrive from Kingston last evening on the 6.23 p.m. G.T.R. to take the two corporals, along with two other soldiers to Kingston on the 9 o'clock train, where they will in all probability be interned. One of the soldiers referred to disobeyed by sleeping in, while the other was detained in Lindsay owing to the illness of his wife.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS.

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Shubuta, B.R., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We also never will be it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat trouble, and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

THE CROPS IN PETERBORO COUNTY

Recent Rains Saved the Hay Crop —Conditions in the West.

The weather gyrations of the past few days have been more than beneficial to the crops in Peterborough county. What is needed now is a little warmer weather, augmented by a liberal amount of sunshine. If anything the hay crop suffered the most from the dry spell, which terminated a few days ago with a generous downfall of rain. Another week or two and the meadows would have been burnt up as they were last year. The coarse grains have benefited to no inconsiderable extent as a result of the liberal offering of Jupiter Pluvius. As matters stand to-day, a bumper crop is still in prospect. Yesterday's early morning showers brought a little hail, but so far as is known little damage resulted.

WINNIPEG, June 12.—Grain is all sown in Manitoba except about 10 per cent. There is now abundance of moisture, and the slight frost caused little or no damage.

Saskatchewan seeding is completed except the flax and late oats for fodder. All grain crops are making good progress. Where damage from high winds and drifting soil was reported, there has been almost complete recovery with very little reseeding. Wheat is stooling very heavily. There will be a large acreage of new land broken and a great many steam outfits are at work. The farmers are taking advantage of cheap labour to increase their cultivated areas.

Alberta has had an abundant rainfall, and crops are all making very satisfactory progress. Only slight damage was caused from the cutworm or other causes. Considerable acreage north of Empress was destroyed by cutworms. Expected heavy rains will [illegible] further damage. As in the case of Saskatchewan, there will be a large acreage of new breaking spread over the whole province.

Alberta Prospects Are Satisfactory

Fall Rye Is Important Crop in Some Districts.

TABER, Alta, June 12.—Fall rye is showing very satisfactory results in this district. It may become the important crop. Samples on exhibition measure fifty-four inches already. Many farmers in this district also are planting corn this season.

FOREMOST, Alta., June 12.—The spring wheat on many farms in this district now averages fifteen inches high. The soil is soaked with moisture from the recent heavy rains and prospects were never more favourable. Fields of spring wheat, sown on April 11, are now twenty inches high.

VULCAN, Alta., June 12.—All crops in this district are making good progress. In some instances the wheat is thirty inches high. Crops are reported to generally vary from six to fifteen inches high. There is ample moisture, but none too much.

Mr. Baumgarten and Mr. Donner Retire

Mr. J. W. McConnell, of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Company, announces the following changes in the management of the company. The retirement of Mr. Alfred Baumgarten as honourary president and as a director of the company. He also announced this afternoon that Mr. Baumgarten had disposed of his entire interests in the company. Mr. O. W. Donner, who has been Managing Director for the past three years, has also resigned his position, and Mr. J. W. McConnell has been elected to the position of managing director, which he will hold along with the position of president of the company.

Mr. Baumgarten some time ago asked for permission to absent himself from the meetings of the Board of the Bank of Montreal, of which he was a director.

PETERBORO' GIRL'S DISTINCTION IN MUSIC

A Peterborough girl—in the second degree—has been distinguishing herself at Syracuse, N.Y. Miss Margaret Mather, daughter of Mr. T. H. Mather of that place, and grand-daughter of Mr. Edmund Layfield, 189 Charlotte street, has taken the premier honour in music. At the forty-fourth annual convocation of Syracuse University, she was awarded the post-graduate scholarship in music for the highest general average. Her contributions to the programme at the commencement concert of the University College of Fine Arts was, for piano, the Liszt Concerto in E flat, with string quintette accompaniment; and for the pipe organ, Lemmen's "Hosannas." Miss Mather's many Peterborough friends cordially congratulate her.

THE REASON.

Our business is growing so rapidly, showing a steady increase month after month is: Because our work is dependable, our glasses are unapproachable in quality, our prices are absolutely fair, and, because we are prompt. Tait Optical Co., 410 George St. tf-186

RECEIPTS WERE THE SMALLEST IN YEARS

Final Meeting of the English Football Association.

At the meeting of the Football Association Council, the sum of £1,596 4s. 3d. was allocated to the clubs that took part in the semi-final and final ties of the cup competitions. This is the smallest aggregate amount for many years, and it is due to numerous circumstances, including the necessity for the association to draw heavily upon the semi-final and final tie receipts to make up the deficiency on its general account.

A. Hollins, Southampton F.C., has been suspended until September 13th next, for misconduct in the Southern League match, Norwich City v. Southampton.

The Football Association Emergency committee, who report the suspension of W. Waddell, Bradford City, for eleven days against Chelsea, at Stamford Bridge, add: "H. J. Halse, of Chelsea, censured for not replying promptly to a letter from the association and for not giving reasonable information."

It may be expected that the Football Association meets all its expenses for the year by taking the semi-final and final 'gates,' and deducting therefrom what it wants for itself, and dividing the remainder pro rata between the clubs who contested the games. The association can therefore never be a loser. Receipts from International matches are credited to a separate fund, which it kept for other than general requirements.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles—Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

The Peterborough Club, corner Water and Simcoe streets, has been granted permission to rebuild a bay window on the west side. The work will cost in the neighbourhood of fifty dollars.

Under Legal Fire.

Ald. G. W. Green, chairman of the Board of Works, was a witness in a civil action that was heard before His Honour Judge Huycke this morning. He informed the examining counsel that "he was green" when replying to a question.

Conditions Improved.

The caretaker of Victoria Park attended last night's band concert in person. From all appearances there was less rowdyism than was the case a week ago. A few small boys in the upper portion of the park persisted in playing tag.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

The sum of $1,500 has been raised for the Canadian Patriotic Fund in Northumberland and Durham public schools.

Will Continue Grant.

The Essex County Council now in session at Sandwich, has unanimously decided to continue its monthly grant of $500 to the National Patriotic Fund.

Presented a Report.

At a meeting of the Hamilton Board of Education, Linger, of the Building committee, presented a report in which he said the committee had always adversed for tenders, had usually awarded the work to the lowest, had not dealt in political favours and had conducted the business of the Board in the best interest of the citizens.

Sold Oil From a Car.

At Stratford the agent of the Columbus Oil Company was charged in the police court with selling oil without a license. His counsel admitted that the agent sold oil direct from a car in the railway yards, but said these orders had been received in advance. The case was adjourned.

Chief of Police.

W. R. Whatley, Deputy Chief, was promoted to be Chief of the Hamilton police force, as successor to the late Alex. Smith. His salary was fixed at $2,000.

Y.M.C.A. CAMPAIGN

The subscriptions toward the $12,000 fund that the Y.M.C.A. has undertaken to raise amounted Friday night to $10,132.50. In addition to this amount the Association has a conditional pledge of $500 which is to be the last $500 of the $12,000; therefore there is still needed in subscriptions $1,367.50.

By vote of the teams and the Executive Committee the subscription lists were to be held open until this Saturday evening, trusting that the full amount might to-day be reported secured. In view of the fact that lists must be re-checked and names tabulated the workers have not been able to complete the canvas to-day, so it is agreed to close up the work in a one day's effort, to be held Thursday, June 17th.

Every man who has had a part in this canvass is confident that the $12,000 can be secured and are determined not to close up the effort until the needed amount has been fully subscribed.

It is proposed to ask all the workers to rally at a supper to be held Wednesday evening, June 16th, for the purpose of outlining the campaign for Thursday.

If any of our subscribers have been overlooked in the campaign we trust that many will send in their pledges to the Association Office before June 17th. It certainly will be a great triumph for Peterborough to make this contribution to one of its leading institutions notwithstanding other obstacles.

WHERE MACKENSEN'S ARMY MET DEFEAT—The German army moving on Lemberg from the west was defeated and driven back four miles toward Przemysl. On the Dneister near Zuravno, the Slavs also threw back Linsingen's army. Village of Raczewko and others captured in successful Russian offensive.

cess and the final ambition of Alfred Harmsworth's life. He became the controlling force in the "Times."

Times Not What It Was.

The "Times" is not what it once was. It never recovered the loss of prestige and of money which came from its insane publication of the forged letter which accused Parnell of being in association with the Phoenix Park murders. But it remains a power, especially abroad where people can not get rid of the idea that it is a semi-official organ.

Thus Lord Northcliffe found himself no longer merely a multi-millionaire newspaper proprietor, but one of the great political powers of the British Empire. This position, has, however, brought him perhaps as much trouble as glory. His attacks on Lord Kitchener elicited one of the most concentrated and violent fusilades ever directed against a journalist. A. G. Gardiner, the editor of the "Daily News," has an old quarrel with Lord Northcliffe, who published after the war began a collection of articles on the friendly hopes of peace with Germany, which Mr. Gardiner wrote in the days before the war. Mr. Gardiner now has taken full advantage of his opportunity. He escribed Lord Northcliffe's articles in the "Times" as "The greatest blow this country has sustained during the war," and declared "that in the midst of the most stupendous struggle in the history of the nation the issues of life and death are the sport of a sensational journalist. Either," he goes on to say, "the frenzied office boy must be suppressed or no government can live."

The Star's Opinion.

The "Star," which is the evening edition of the "Daily News," declared "Lord Northcliffe must be crushed. There must be no more of this miserable cowardice which sacrifices the sacred purpose of the war to a frenzied fool who has got hold of a large stock of dynamite."

I prefer not to join in those violent attacks, but it seems to me that the real difficulty is that Lord Northcliffe has no particular gifts and training for the great position the proprietor of so many organs of appeal should enjoy. He has not that foundation in university education which supplies a man with a consistent political creed. The result is that he changes ground often, being usually the creature of what he considers the popular instinct of the hour. Sometimes he is right; sometimes he is wrong; he is never consistently either one or the other. For instance; when Mr. Chamberlain first proposed his taxes on food Harmsworth opposed him vehemently, and gave columns of his paper daily to show that the scheme was impracticable and impossible, and for the moment seemed to have conquered the new Chamberlain campaign. Then came a sudden change and Harmsworth became an ardent Protectionist and Chamberlainite. A few years afterwards he again changed and was one of the most powerful agencies in ridding the Tory party of the food taxes, the millstone which Chamberlain had hung around its neck in the days of his power.

Why He Attacked K. of K.

His attacks on Kitchener nearly a month ago was induced, I believe, by the honest conviction that Kitchener was wrong and Field Marshal Sir John French was right on the question of the explosive shells, but the campaign was carried on with such vehemence that it produced a reaction in Kitchener's favour. Then there poured on Harmsworth's head all the vials of wrath which he had been steadily storing against himself by his daring, his ambition, his success and his sometimes rather extreme forms of competition, and for days he had a bad time.

The change in his position has produced a change in the man. When first I met him he was an extraordinarily handsome man with a perfect oval face, large fine blue eyes, a delicately chiselled mouth and a mass of hair—a lock of which fell down, Napoleon fashion, on his forehead. He was gay, simple, amiable. He loved to be with his staff and he went a certain amount into society. But in recent years he has become something of a recluse. I met him once on the golf links at Cannes, but I discovered that he did not live in that or any other of the more crowded resorts of the English in the south. He spoke of himself as a sour, unsociable man. He is not sour, but he has become unsociable, perhaps with the view of being the veiled prophet whom few people should see. He is now one of the men feared, distrusted, hated, but always to be counted with, for he can speak to many millions of readers every week, and he knows their tongue. Finally, like so many of the darlings of fortune, he has lost health in the eager pursuit of wealth and success. Still under fifty, he has to take long rests and watch his diet carefully, but he has from his Irish mother the resilience to recover rapidly.

STRAWBERRIES ON THE MARKET

Next Saturday There Will Probably Be a Large Offering.

The first strawberries grown locally, to appear on the market this season, were offered for sale this morning. There was just the one offering and it did not last long at the price of 20 cents per box. The berries were exceptionally early, but they looked very appetizing, even if they were not so large as what we will expect later. Reports from gardeners in the vicinity promise that the season will be properly opened by next Saturday, and with a little more weather prices will likely take a drop.

Potatoes were sold at 60 cents per bag, and there was a fair supply, considering the demand. Citizens are laying in a supply of old potatoes in anticipation of forestalling the high prices charged for the new during the first couple of weeks. Gardeners are beginning to bring in their onions and lettuce. There were a couple of hundred boxes of good tomato plants, but they did not seem to be selling very fast.

At 11:30 o'clock there was but one basket of eggs left on the upstairs market, and they were being held for 22 cents per doen. Butter was in abundance and sold at 27 and 28.

links, and after he returned he rested in his room, and in the afternoon he went for a long automobile ride. He emphasized the belief that an immediate crisis in American affairs is certain to pass soon, letting it be known that he hopes to go to Cornish for a rest, reaching there before July 4th. Acting Secretary of State Lansing visited the executive offices to-day but did not see the president. He said that there was no immediate change indicated in any of the matters now affecting America's international relations.

BERLIN, via wireless, June 12.—General Von Linsingen has recaptured Xaravno, 20 miles from Stryj, driving the Russians from the bridge head and across the Dneister, it was officially announced this afternoon. This is the first indication from either Berlin or Petrograd that the Russian drive had swept the Germans out of Zaravno.

PARIS, June 12.—A thick fog curtained the battle front north of Arras to-day and official despatches reported a complete cessation of military operations. During the night the French carried a section of German trenches in the region of Fond de Dubal, north of Lorette, and made some progress in hte "Labyrinth" district. Elsewhere there has been no change.

SPOILS OF WAR AT NEUVILLE WERE ENORMOUS IN QUANTITY

PARIS, June 12.—Enormous quantities of war material of every description were captured by the French in the village of Neuville-St. Vaast, which they succeeded in taking after a bitter fight in which every foot of ground was stubbornly contested by the Germans. To-night's official communique, which contains a part description of the material which fell into the hands of the French, explains why the Germans fought practically to the last man in a desperate attempt to hold that important position.

Heavy guns and mine throwers, rifles, explosives and ammunition in gigantic quantities were discovered by the victorious troops in the houses and in the trenches surroundnig the Village. Cases of food, provisions and equipment were also found. The losses in men were probably among the heaviest of any single engagement for the ground was littered with dead and the French ambulances removed many German wounded.

Further progress in the vicinity of Hebuterne is also recorded in to-night's official report. The French advance at that point represents a distance of two-thirds of a mile along a front a mile and a third long.

Cases in Which Three Brothers Are On Active Service

"Teddy" Bedding, 857 Concession street, enlisted last evening, and will leave Peterborough on Monday. He is the last of four sons who are in the service of the Empire. Two are at present in England, one in the navy, and the fourth is "Teddy," who enlisted last evening. They are the sons of Mrs. C. Bedding, London, England. Besides the above four, Mrs. Bedding has two sons-in-law in France, and a grandson in Belleville, with the third contingent.

Harry Wyatt, son of Mr. Joseph Wyatt, East City, is among the latest to enlist here. He makes the third son in the Wyatt family to join the colours, his two younger brothers, Gordon and Howard, being at the front in France. All three boys were born in Peterborough.

Born in Canada, too, were the three sons of Mrs. Leal, who heard the call and one of whom, Pte. Douglas Leal, gave up his life at Langemarck. The other two boys are in the second battalion.

Another three Canadian born brothers from Peterborough, are the Lindsey trio; one of them went with the 4th Battery, at the front, one with the 9th Mounted Rifles, and the third with the 39th Battalion.

Still another case of three brothers from Peterborough on active service. Mr. Oliver White, Albert Street, has two sons in the Second Battalion, C.E.F., and the third in the 21st Battalion.

RAIN AND TEARS.

Father, the rain you send us is so clean,
And sweet and cool; the dust that hid the green
Of grass and tree in washed away, and then
The world seems glowing, clean, and bright again.

Father, the tears you send us are so sad,
But maybe from our hearts they wash away
The evil that had hidden all our glad
The old, obscuring darkness of our clay.

Father, the storms you send us are so fierce,
But in the clearing sunlight after them
We see the shafts of beauty, how they pierce
The gloom, and turn each cloud a diadem.

Father, the griefs you send us are so sharp,
And yet they leave us, after all, so bright,
That through us sings the music of a harp
Struck by some hand of glory in the light.

Wash us with rain or wash us with these tears,
It seems the same conclusion of the years—
That all which comes in judgment on us lies
A clean refreshment of the impartial skies.

Condemned Man Not Afraid

NEW YORK, June 14.—The brief applying for a reargument in the Becker case will be served on District Attorney Perkins, and at the same time will be sent to the State Court of Appeals at Albany. The motion will come up before the court to-day. Mr. Perkins will have three days in which to prepare his answer to the motion.

"Becker has no hope Governor Whitman will commute his sentence," according to the Rev. James B. Curry, pastor of St. James church, who visited Becker at Sing-Sing on Tuesday.

Becker told me," Father Curry said, "the only thing that can save him in the recantation of Rose, Schepps, Vallon, Webber and others who testified against him.

"Becker is not a raving atheist. He fears his Maker and says he trusts to God to right the injustice he claims has been done to him. He is no coward and has no fear of death. He said to me:

"'A few years of life make no difference. We all have to die. But what terrifies me is the thought that I must die as a murderer, when I am not a murderer.'"

No Need To Be Apprehensive Over The German Reply Says a High Official

Much Impressed by Friendly Tone of Second American Note ---Undoubtedly There Will Be a Solution Which Both Countries Can Accept.

UNIFORM COLOUR FOR PASSENGER SHIPS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, via The Hague, June 14.—America has no need to be apprehensive over the German reply, a high official of the German Foreign Office told the United Press to-day.

"We are much impressed by the friendly tone of the second American note," said this official, whose name cannot at this time be disclosed.

"We certainly shall do everything to reply in the same manner. There is no reason for apprehension. Undoubtedly there will be a solution which both countries can accept."

Everywhere in Berlin a decided feeling of optimism prevails regarding possibilities of a German-American agreement. High officials of the Foreign Office, with the editors of Berlin newspapers, and other prominent persons, all approved the expression at the Foreign Office when I asked if official Germany was as optimistic over the negotiations as the press.

Suggestions as to possible agreements continue officially here. The plan attracting most favourable comment in that since the United States seeks to safeguard the travel of neutrals, an agreement may be made by which submarines respect certain designated passenger ships not carrying arms and ammunition travelling over prescribed ocean routes.

These ships it is suggested might be painted a uniform colour or have a special flag painted on their sides even if owned by a belligerent.

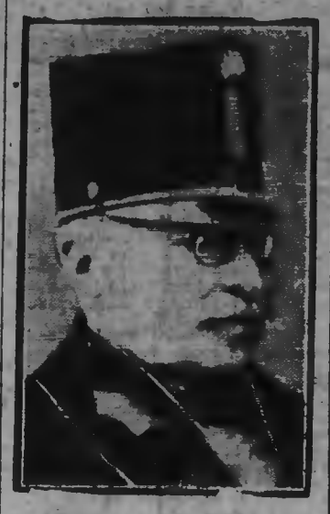
A GENERAL PEACE MOVEMENT.

WASHINGTON June 14.—Officials here continue to believe that within the next few weeks a well-defined general peace movement will be found under way.

Just where it is to be instituted, no one here seems to know, but it is declared there are under cover indications showing that the peace suggestions are no longer falling on deaf ears.

The enormous casualty lists are said to be sobering Germany, despite the fact that they are accompanied by claims of sweeping success. The British navy's blockade is also having its inevitable effect. Great Britain, it is pointed out, is still having her troubles keeping up her munition supply. France's necessity to discharge soldiers from the army to manufacture munitions, and Russia's inability to keep her reserve armies in a satisfactory condition, because of lack of rifles and cannon, are subjects of further comments.

It was suggested here that such conditions naturally can be expected to make those in control more willing to listen to peace suggestions than they were at the outset of war.



GEN. VON AUFFENBURG

Former Austrian Minister of War, and early in the war, commander-in-chief of the Austrian forces, who has been arrested and is being treated as a "serious political criminal." He was deprived of his command owing to his failure to complete an enveloping movement.

Germans Cannot Spare Men From the East at Present Time

LONDON, June 14.—Although the British press has warned the public that it is too early to assert positively that the Austro-German armies in Galicia have been definitely checked and that General Von Linsingen's defeat on the Dneister has ceased the pressure of Russia, it is nevertheless believed by many military commentators in London that there has been a sharp turn in the situation in Galicia which will prevent Germany transferring any considerable force of troops either to the west or to the Italian frontier.

Some German forces, it is even declared, already have been detached from the Galician armies and hurried to the Isonzo front, but it is felt that even more men will be needed there as Italy keeps pressing on toward Trieste.

The latest official announcements from Petrograd assert that the Russians have assumed the offensive along the Dubysa River and in the Baltic Provinces, and they concede the loss of ground nowhere except along the River Pruth, in Bukowina.

Viewing the recent fighting in Galicia in perspective, it may be divided roughly into three great battles. The chief of these was fought forty miles to the southeast of Lemberg, where the forces under General Von Linsingen had not only crossed the Dneister, but had progressed some 12 miles beyond, getting astride of the Lemberg railroad. These were the forces which the Russians apparently have forced back with heavy losses, thus placing the river in Russian hands throughout. The second great battle, or series of battles, took place in the territory between Ugartsberg and Zydachow, and along this line the Russians claim to have repulsed the Germans with severe punishment. North of both of these areas and to the east of Przemysl was the scene of the third battle. Here General Von Mackensen, at the head of the main Austro-German forces, was trying to penetrate due east to Lemberg through Mosciska. By Wednesday, according to the Russian contention, the German check in this locality was complete.

THE FINAL PLEA OF CHARLES BECKER

NEW YORK, June 14.—Putting the killing of Herman Rosenthal up to Jack Rose, and contending that it was shown at the trial that he, and not Becker, had motives for putting the gambler out of the way, but that the defence had been ignored in the charge of Justice Seabury, the brief in the motion for reargument before the State Court of Appeals was filed by Martin T. Mantou, counsel for Charles Becker.

It also was pointed out that this is the last refuge open to Becker, for the reason that Governor Whitman is prejudiced and no review of the case may be expected from him.

Reargument of the case is asked on the ground that the Court overlooked two facts of capital importance, which did not appear at the first trial, but which were established at the second trial by the prosecution itself through its own witnesses.

"First—Rose— concededly the person who arranged the murder—had himself an overwhelming motive for desiring the death of Rosenthal —a motive vastly more powerful than the one attributed to Becker by the prosecution, and

"Second — it was shown by the main witnesses for the prosecution, Rose and Webber, that they themselves had rendered Rosenthal entirely unable to injure Becker, and this fact having been made known by them to Becker, could have had no possible reason for urging them to commit the crime, but every reason to prevent it, if prevention were within his power."

Atrocities of The Turks Are Appalling

CAIRO, June 12—I have recently had the opportunity of visiting many of the hospitals in Cairo and Alexandria, writes a correspondent. The cheerfulness of the wounded troops is really remarkable. Their one desire is to get well and rejoin their regiments.

The military authorities had some difficulty towards the end of April in suitably caring for the 5,000 or 6,000 wounded soldiers suddenly thrust upon them, but the difficulties were soon overcome and everything is now being done that can be done for the comfort of these brave men. The residents came forward in scores to lend a helping hand, undertaking any form of work that was assigned to them, and this greatly eased the burden of the nurses. The French wounded are being cared for at the Casino Hospital in Alexandria, and the German Nuns' School has also been requisitioned for their reception Other buildings will be taken over as occasion requires.

At a meeting of the St. John Ambulance Association and Red Cross Society, held at the British Residency on May 7, it was decided to establish a new Red Cross hospital of 300 beds, if possible at the Giza Schools.

Among the articles most urgently needed at the moment are mosquito nets. Very few of the men have this comfort, and they are consequently much troubled by mosquito bites. One very fortunate fact, however, is that the weather remains extraordinarily cool for the time of year, and those men that can walk about greatly enjoy wandering through the beautiful gardens on the Nile bank at Gezira. Many Australians have been accommodated in the fine Gezira Palace Hotel, the one-time palace of Ismail Pasha. A little higher up the Gezira road, hidden away amongst Gold Mohr trees, is the Anglo-American Hospital, which is accommodating many officers. The men say they cannot but be happy in such beautiful surroundings.

Wounded men tell some horrible tales of Turkish atrocities, the most ghastly of all being that recounted by some Dublin Fusiliers, who witnessed the burning to death by the Turks of six of their wounded comrades. An Australian, who is now in Cairo, and who was a prisoner in the hands of the Turks for four hours had his eyes gouged out. Many wounded British soldiers were found mutilated, some hanging by their hands from trees.

A New Zealander tells the story of a very narrow escape. He had been badly wounded, and on recovering consciousness, fearing every second that he would be despatched. The Turk apparently thought the New Zealander was dead, for after cutting away the bootlaces with his knife and stealing the man's boots he made off.

TRENCH WAS ONE LONG GRAVE FULL OF DEAD

PARIS, June 13.— According to a letter published in the Temps describing the recent French victory on the River Aisne, the German prisoners taken there presented a vastly different appearance from those captured early in the war. The writer says:

"They were patched cotton tunics, and were helmetless and devoid of their former arrogance. Some were only sixteen to eighteen years old. Many were so short-sighted that we never would have accepted them for service.

"One said he infinitely preferred fighting the Russians to the French. Asked if he still expected Germany to be victorious, he said dejectedly: "Who knows? We are fighting the whole of Europe."

Referring to the effects of the French artillery, the writer says: "The attacking troops did not fight for the first trench, which was simply a long grave, brimful of corpses. The barbed wire parapet and shelters had been obliterated."

Canadian Lake Liners Rank With World's Best

Mrs. Ruth Kedzie Wood Thompson whose travel books on Russia, Spain, and other European countries are standard works, and who is now on her way to Alaska, declares that the Canadian Steamships on the Great Lakes compare favourably in the matter of service with any liners afloat.

In a letter to Mr. E. W. Holton, General Passenger Agent, Northern Navigation Co.—Grand Trunk's Lake and Rail Route, between Eastern and ostern Canada—Mrs. Thompson says: "We found the service on the S. S. Hamonic of your line quite equal to that of the European Hotels, and the best Atlantic liners. The housekeeping is perfection and the courtesy of the officers and attendants most exceptional. We have travelled so much in every part of the world that we feel that we observe with expert eyes. This vessel impresses us as favorably as any we have been on, and certainly we have never had finder attention.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Mr. Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lansdale Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble vested nerve cells.

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

She told us more of the details now, in fact, as soon as her eyes had found the way to open up the eyes of old Uriah Cornell, she forgot all about us boys ,and just talked to him. And it was small wonder, for the' wasn't a trace of the hawk left in those eyes now. Bright they were, but open, wide open, and deep with a tenderness I never saw in no other eyes except those of Friar Tuck. As you looked you had a feelin' that those eyes had once looked in through the gates of Heaven, and had once looked into the pit of Hell, and that all the nasty human curiosity had been leached out of 'em, leavin' 'em free to look upon the worst tangles of life without takin' the slightest advantage o' weakness nor feelin' the smallest fear o' strength; and the gaze of the girl rested on those eyes in perfect confidence.

She spoke in a low tone but just as free as though thinkin' to herself and I reckon she said some things right then she hadn't ever quite dared to even think before. She told us right out that her father had allus been a man of strong passions but that he had ruled himself so strict that he could hardly be even just to others, and that when he had thought her brother guilty of misusin' funds in the bank he had sailed into him so rough 'at the boy's back had gone up and he wouldn't say one word of explanation.

Then the father's virtue had stood up on tiptoe and he had spoke the piece aboue never-darken - my-door - again; and though other shadows came to that family in flocks, none of 'em ever bore the outline of the son. He wrote to me once in a while, and he wrote kind and respectful; but the old man didn't carry any more pride than he did, and though the old man spent money free, he never could get trace of him. After a time another clerk in the bank slipped away with some of the bank's funds as about his only baggage, and then the old man saw through the whole thing and he tore his hair and rolled in the dust; but this didn't have the desired result, either. That campaign issue known as the Crime of '73 had shot up the old man good and plenty, just about the time he had posted up his door-darkenin' signs, and he never was able to recover.

He was one of those who work out their repentance by makin' everybody about 'em miserable, and he had let his home go and his business go and the whole shootin'-match go in order to support a gang o' blood-suckin' detectives who planted 'emselves in easy chairs and ransacked their imaginations in search of his son, until the old man had to sell out clean in order to square his debts.

The only redeeming' feature to him, so far as I could see, was that he did aim to do the right thing by the gel. Her mother had died when she was just a young thing and she spent some time with an aunt in Boston and most of the rest at what is known as a finishin'-school—a place where all a girl's natural impulses are finished right now, and she is taught how to walk, talk, and sit down in a foreign tongue.

This gel took to a finishin'-school about as liberal as a mustang 'd take to the drayin' business, and she said what counted for happy times with her were the parts of her vacations she spent in Nebraska with her father. He owned a little patch of five or six hundred acres up there and it seemed like livin' right out doors to her. She had cried real tears when her father had had to sell it.

She said her brother was a right smart older than she was, and that she had never really got acquainted with him, which was why she had had to look the second time at Tom Smith when Big Jeff had asked if he would do for her brother. She looked at Tom Smith when she said this and seemed to notice for the first time that he had shaved himself. Her face got puzzled as she looked at him and she sat right still for near a minute.

"I have seen you before, haven't I?" sez she.

"Why," sez he, flushin' up a little, "I'm the feller that told you on the road to Dodge that your driver didn't look trustworthy to me."

"Oh, yes," sez she, "you were wearin' a black hat. Do you really think that Martin knew that he was takin' me into danger?"

"Didn't he go into the shack and tell you that your brother was in there?"

"Yes," sez she, slow and thoughtful, "but you wrote on the ground with the stick for me to go inside."

Tom Smith had wrote a message to her upside down with his stick, but when she came to read it it took her so by surprise that she had blurted right out. I had thought he had acted queer with that stick, but this was the first information I'd had on the subject.

"I wanted you to go inside," sez he, "so I could handle that pair better. I hoped to 'tend to 'em without any blood-shed; but with those others so close, it couldn't have been done, and it turned out for the best as it was."

"Oh, I don't want to think of it any more!" sez she, coverin' her face with her hands; but takin' 'em down again shortly, givin' a long sigh, and goin' on with her tale.

She told about how faithful this cuss of a driver had been and how kind to her father, and it came hard for her to believe him downright treacherous. She said that after her father had squared off his debts he had mighty little left, and he had put it all in a belt which he wore about his body. He had never told her a word about how he was fixed, but he had got into the habit of talkin' to himself, and she had made out that all he asked out of life or money was to bring him to where he could see his son again and ask forgiveness of him.

Her voice trembled and her eyes filled when she told us how his mind had failed. It had once been a six-hoss team of a mind, accordin' to her, but now it had all dwindled down to this one desire, and she said it was no use to reason with him or to plead with him. He had got the idea that he could find his son, and after he got the letter which had arrived shortly before we had met 'em on the Dodge road he had come himself and had hired a buckboard, so that if his son was off the stage road he would not have to wait, but could go right on. He had hired the buckboard of the stage company and had changed mules at the regular relays.

Then while they were still at Dodge City and she was tryin' to get him to go back to their home town, or clear back East where her aunt had died willin' him her little home, but leavin' all her other property to a church, the driver had been handed a letter from her brother sayin' where he could be found. She said she was suspicious of that letter because all the others had come to the old address; but her father was beside himself with excitement and couldn't get started quick enough.

"He's—he's really childish, you know," said the girl, "and his heart is weak, so that I couldn't have crossed him without being absolutely sure; and my suspicions were very vague."

Well, they started with that same driver and the old pang brightened up wonderful. They cut off to the left of the stage road before reachin' the Canadian, forded the river and found everything ready for 'em at a cabin near the south bank. A man made 'em welcome and said the son was a cattle-buyer and was just rushed to death at that season, but would sure be in by breakfast next mornin'.

They ate supper and went to bed early, havin' a good night's sleep and gettin' up about dawn. She said her father was feelin' unusual well and talked mostly about breakfast while they were waitin' for the son to show up. Then a Mexican came lopin' in on a tired hoss and said the son had been thrown and purty bad hurt and that he had been sent to fetch 'em to him.

Well, the old man turned to and tamped down a consid'able of a meal and seemed in the best of condition, but just as the broncs were hooked up to the single-seat buckboard which they supposed belonged to the son, the old man keeled over in a faint, and they had a hard time gettin' him out of it. He was game, though, and when they brought him around he was keen to start; but he couldn't rightly sit up and the daughter plumb balked on riskin' him, as it was supposed to be forty or fifty miles.

Then he reared back on his disposition and began to say things and threaten. She didn't quote what he said, but she made it plain that he had rawhided her purty free, and finally when the white man said he'd ride post hate for a doctor, and the Mexican said he was a competent nurse and would stay and take care of the old man, the old man shook his fist and said that if the girl didn't go, he'd go himself and disown her as soon as he got started. She said that he trembled and shook so, that she was afraid it would kill him unless he had his own way. She put him to bed and made him comfortable and started; havin' perfect confidence in the driver and expectin' her brother at the other end of the trip.

She said now that she looked back at it, the driver had acted strange several times; but that she hadn't really suspicioned anything until she had felt the horrid eyes of Big Jeff on her. She gave another shiver here, threw her hands to her forehead, and shrank back as though dodgin' a blow, and her breath came in gasps — but she didn't weep.

"What do you think they have done with my father," she cried after a minute; "what do you think they have done with him?"

Old Josiah walked around to her, his face gentle as a mother's but the' was also a restful strength in it. He put his hand light upon her shoulder and spoke to her in a low, soothin' tone.

"Child," sez he, "your nerve won't stand much more tightenin'. Worryin' about what may happen never makes it any better; but bein' prepared for the worst, never makes the worst any more likely to come. I know exactly where your father is, and we'll go as fast as ponies can take us, and do what men can do; but your duty now is to just ease off your nerves and do as little thinkin' as possible. I'm purty sure they haven't harmed your father; but there's no way to tell and so I'm not goin' to waste any time studyin' about it.

"You're perfectly safe here, and the sight of your face has started all the pleasantest memories of my heart to bloomin'; so there's never any limit to your welcome. There isn't a thing for you to do but sleep. Keep Placido beside you and if you start to get nervous, just stroke his head, and drift off to sleep again. We'll come back just as soon as we can."

She stood up, looked at me and Tom Smith, and then at old Josiah; but she couldn't speak, and so with the dog at her side, she hurried down the path to her cabin, and we all kept still for a full minute after she had left us.

"She's a good girl and a brave girl," sez the old hermit as if to himself. Then he turned to us and the hawk-glitter was back in his eyes. "Are you goin' to turn this case over to the law?"

"I've never bothered the law, yet," sez I.

(To be continued.)

Great Women Composers.

Walter Damrosch asks but finds it difficult to answer the question, "Why are there no great women composers?" His conclusion is: "Great music springs from the emotions, and is crystallized into form through a controlling intellect. When women achieve this combination they will be able to join the noble company of Bach, Beethoven and Wagner."—New York Telegram.

The Law of Compensation.

"I had no mother's voice to lull me to sleep when I was a boy," sobbed the first man.

"And I had no father's voice to call me in the morning," chuckled the second.

Thus we see nature's wonderful law of compensation applied to the human equation.—Philadelphia Ledger.

What Interested Her.

"The overture is about to begin. We might as well go in."

"Did you get your wife a book of the opera?"

"No. She doesn't care for the opera. I would pay well, however, for a catalogue or price list of the jewels being worn in the boxes."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Date of Buddha.

On the authority of the available inscriptions and the tradition as recorded in the Ceylonese chronicles the date of the nirvana of Buddha is found by the latest writer on the subject to be 487 B. C., and as tradition assigns eighty years as the period of his life he must be considered to have been born in the year 567 B. C.

COULD NOT GO TEN STEPS
FOR THE PAIN IN HIS KIDNEYS.

When you get a pain in the back you may rest assured that it comes from derangement of the kidneys, for were there not something wrong with the kidneys the back should be strong and well.

Doan's Kidney Pills regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist. What more needs to be said? While Doan's Kidney Pills are not a "balm for every ill that flesh is heir to," they are a positive, never-failing remedy for every disease that has its inception in the improper action in those delicate little filters of the blood, the kidneys.

Mr. Adelard Cieroux, Eganville, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with my kidneys for four years. They were so bad, at times, I could not go ten steps for the pain they caused me. My doctor could not do me any good. A friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I bought five boxes, and now I have been cured for over three years. I will recommend them to whoever may be suffering from kidney trouble."

DOCTOR SAID SCIATICA—RHEUMATISM—LUMBAGO

But He Could Not Help Me, and Endorsed the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Wm. Parker, 105 Cayuga street, Brantford, Ont., tells in the following letter of his remarkable experience with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills: "My doctor treated me for some time for Sciatica, Rheumatism, Lumbago, but to no purpose, for I had to lay off work. The visiting officer of Sick Benefit called to see me and advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, stating that he had been cured of the same trouble by their use. I asked the druggist about them and he recommended them highly. Not being satisfied with this, I went back to my doctor, and when he said they were good I began their use. The promptness with which they enlivened the action of the kidneys and bowels was wonderful, and it was not long before I was rid of all my trouble.

"I was so bad that I could only walk by hanging on to a chair or the wall. My wife had to lace my shoes. Only those who have had this ailment can realize the way I suffered. I am writing this letter to let people who have my trouble know of these pills. You are at liberty to use this letter, and if anyone interested will call or write to me I will give every detail."

Write to Mr. Parker, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify this statement. He will do this out of the gratitude he feels for his cure and because he realizes how difficult it is to obtain the cure of these dreadfully painful ailments.

There are so many treatments recommended for rheumatism that you naturally doubt them all. Here is an opportunity for you to verify the cure and put this great medicine to the test. It will only cost you a quarter to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They get at the very foundation of rheumatism, and by removing the poisons from the system take away the cause of pains and aches.

THE NEW CREATURE'S RESURRECTION BEGUN

Death the Great Enemy of the Human Race.

Resurrection In the Heart — Death the Great Enemy of Humanity—Living the Resurrection Life Now—Knowing the Power of Christ's Resurrection—Dead to the World Now—Risen With Christ Now—The Philosophy of the Process—Terms and Conditions of Discipleship — The Loveable Plan of a Loveable God — The Outcome Glorious.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Seattle, Wash., June 13.—Pastor Russell is here to-day, homeward bound from the I.B.S.A. Convention at Oakland, Cal. We report his address from the text, "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things that are above." (Colossians 3:1.) The Pastor spoke in part as follows:

The resurrection to which the Apostle here refers is not that great change from human to spiritual conditions of which he speaks elsewhere, but a resurrection already begun in the hearts and the minds of the New Creatures in Christ. We must not lose sight of the fact, however, that this is part and parcel of the same resurrection. It begins here; it ends there. Whoever does not begin that resurrection here will not end it there; whoever begins it here and fails to go on will not get it there. Only by getting a comprehensive view of the matter can we perceive the full import of the Bible teaching on the subject.

There is something very definite in the Bible. Perhaps in times past we failed to get its real import because we supposed that it was a Book of such deep mysteries that it could be understood only by the clergy. Consequently if a sane thought respecting the Bible came into our minds, we put it away as untrue because so reasonable. But we are beginning to see that God's Book is the most reasonable and logical ever written. And the fact that, although written by many different writers at various times in the world's history, it is the most reasonable of books and contains the most wonderful story, brings conviction that it is indeed the Word of God.

Yet much of this Word has been hidden because of the error and misunderstanding which the Adversary foisted upon us during the Dark Ages. As we get the eyes of our understanding open, we see that the Bible teaches what to most of us is a certainty — that everywhere are death, sickness, sorrow, weakness, mental, moral and physical. "By one man's disobedience sin entered into the world, and death as a result of sin; and so death passed upon all men; for all have sinned," says the Apostle. (Romans 5:12.) But this thought that death is the penalty of sin is everywhere rejected; and we are told that eternal torment is the penalty for sin. Both common sense and the Bible are thus discredited.

The facts are that death is the great enemy of the human race; that death is here because of sin; and that unless God helps us there would be no future life. Plain, simple, reasonable, is the Bible proposition: Death is upon all mankind; and God's provision is that all shall be recovered from the death sentence. Death came through one man's disobedience and is to be set aside through another man's obedience. The Lord Jesus came into the world and gave Himself a Ransom-price for all—a Price that corresponds with the first man who sinned.—1 Corinthians 15:21, 22.

But as the Apostle points out it was necessary not only that Christ should die for mankind, but that He should rise from the dead for our justification. (Romans 4:24, 25.) For Christ merely to die on our behalf and then to make no application of His merit for us would leave us in as terrible a condition as before. Therefore God has provided not only that our Lord should die, but that He should also be raised from the dead. The time set apart for the world's recovery is the period of Messiah's glorious Reign, when He will deliver mankind from the bondage of corruption which came through one man's disobedience.

Our text speaks of the Church as though separate from the world. Elsewhere the Bible declares that the whole world lies in the Wicked One. The world are still under condemnation. But the Apostle explains that the Church have escaped the condemnation that is upon the world. We have not gotten free from the weaknesses of the flesh and the death condition, but we have escaped the condemnation — the legal phase of the subject. God is taking this Church class out of the world, to be made partakers of the very highest rank of spirit nature—the Divine. (2 Peter 1:4.) This is the promise made to God's people, the Church of the First-borns, whose names are written in Heaven.

"If ye be risen with Christ." The Apostle does not intimate that this is a thing future. All who belong to the true Church of Christ should know that they have this resurrection. But in order to be risen with Christ we must be dead with Him. (2 Timothy 2:11.) Whoever shares His death will also share His resurrection. We must walk in His steps. (1 Peter 2:21.) Our Lord declared that He came not to do His own will, but the will of the Father, who sent Him. (John 6:38.) So we must do whatever the Father desires us to do; we must not desire our own way. We should seek to know God's will respecting our body—what we shall eat, what we shall wear, what we shall say, what we shall do. To do so will give us what the Apostle calls "the spirit of a sound mind."

Before we became the Lord's children we did not think properly along these lines. Like the Gentiles we were thinking of what would satisfy our appetites. Now we think of what would enable us best to serve the Lord and what is best for our welfare. Since we have come into God's family, all our talents are His; the more we realise how few are our talents and our opportunities, and how little we are worth to the Lord and everybody else, the more anxious we shall be to make the most out of everything we have—mental, moral, physical.

We are to have in mind also that we are to be dead to self-will. Our will is that which we wish, and our wishes represent our personality. If we yield our own wishes to another, we give up our will to that extent. If we give up our will to some church denomination, then it becomes our head, our ruler. If we give up our talents, etc., to some society or order, it takes supervision of our affairs and our time. God is purposing to have an Order—the Order of the Royal Priesthood.

Some of us wear what is known as a Cross and Crown Pin. The cross represents our faith in the death of Christ and our desire to walk in His steps; the crown represents the reward of glory, honor and immortality; and the wreath around the cross and crown represents the Restitution blessings coming to the world of mankind. A brother who had on one of these pins was asked what degree he had. "The degree of the Royal Priesthood," he replied. All of God's people are Odd Fellows in the sense that they are different from the world. They are Masons in that they are of the Temple class, whose Chief Corner-Stone is this the Lord Jesus Christ. This Royal Temple is built on the foundation of the Twelve Apostles; and we, as living stones, are being built into that Temple, which by and by will be glorious.—1 Peter 1:4-10.

Invariably God's things have the primary thought. The world has more or less copied after these things, but they do not see the beauty as we do. We have no quarrel with anybody. We are simply on God's side, the true side; and so far as others have the Truth, they are with us. Otherwise they are against us. Just as it was respecting our Lord, so it has been with all the Body of Christ, the Church—there has been a division of the people, some seeing more, some less.—John 9:16.

But God's work goes on steadily, grandly. He is finding these precious members of the Christ. In one picture they are represented as jewels, in another as living stones, in a third as a Royal Priesthood. "The Lord knoweth them that are His." We do not know who they are. All that we can do is to assist and leave the rest to the Lord. He makes no mistake.

In order to share in the First Resurrection with Christ, we must share in His death. I remind you of what St. Paul said. He had been discussing the glorious things of the Kingdom, and expressing his opinion that all things in the world were not worthy of consideration in comparison with it. He declared, "I count all things but loss, * * * that I may win Christ and be found in Him." (Philippians 3:8, 9.) He desired membership in the Body of Christ.

The word Christ means anointed; Jesus is the Head of The Christ, and the Church are the members. God is raising up a great Anointed One. He raised up Jesus first, and gave Him to be the Head over the Church which is His Body. Throughout the Gospel Age God has been raising up the members of The Anointed; and through the Apostle He has said that all things are to be counted as loss and dross in comparison to that wonderful privilege of being members of The Christ; for to Christ God promised the Kingdom and glory, honor, immortality.

Jesus has already entered into His glory and sat down with the Father. This does not signify that literally He has sat down in Heaven, but that He has entered into that glorious rest of which the Apostle speaks. (Hebrews 4:9.) He is at the Father's right hand—the place of chief favor with God. Next to the Father Himself is our Lord Jesus Christ. The Master has promised that His faithful followers shall sit at His right hand, and share in His glory as joint-heirs in His inheritance.—1 Peter 1:4, 5.

After mentioning these matters and declaring that he counted all earthly things as loss and dross, the Apostle explains that he was looking forward to a resurrection with Christ, that he might share in Christ's glory. (Philippians 3:10.) What deprivation will not men endure in order to attain earthly honors—political, financial and social! They do not concern themselves particularly about the amount of labor and money expended if only they can get the honor. The Apostle, taking the viewpoint of God, says, How small all these things look when I compare them with the privilege of becoming a joint-heir with Jesus Christ!

Then St. Paul declares that he does all this that he may win Christ, and be found in Him—a member of the Body of Christ, the Church. Just as we speak of a board of directors or of the body of Congress, so the Church is such an organized body. The Apostle was anxious to be a member of that Body of Christ. He saw that Jesus had fulfilled the Father's will in all His experiences; and knowing thus what the Father is pleased with and seeing that the Father had exalted our Lord, the Apostle desired to follow the Master. So he says, "That I may know Him and the power of His resurrection"—experience that grand resurrection, be "changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." Since flesh and blood cannot inherit the Heavenly Kingdom, therefore all the Body of Christ must undergo the wonderful transforming power of the First Resurrection.—1 Corinthians 15:49-55.

St. Paul knew that he could not enter into Christ's resurrection unless he entered into Christ's death. Only those who would suffer with Christ could reign with Him. This knowledge was what made St. Paul so different from others of his day. We look back and see what a wonderful man he was—how Christ's character shone in his words and deeds, how much he was filled with the Master's words and disposition.

The same admonition is given us, that we should "follow His steps." In proportion as we become dead to the world, dead with Christ, in that proportion we become risen with Him. But there is a difference between our case and that of Jesus. He was especially born, as the Bible emphasizes, and He could not have been our Saviour if He had not been. To deny this fact would be to deny the Ransom. Whoever denies that Jesus came into the world a perfect human being is denying the whole Plan of Salvation. His life did not come from Father Adam, but was transferred from a higher plane. He left the glory which He had with the Heavenly Father, and humbled Himself to become a man. He was able to do the Father's will. No sin debarred Him from Divine favor. But all of us were born in sin; God had declared Adam and his posterity unfit for everlasting life and Divine fellowship.

At the age of thirty years our Lord presented Himself to the Father in consecration. The Father accepted the sacrifice, and manifested His acceptance in the impartation of the Holy Spirit. Then, having received the begetting of the new nature, our Lord was counted a New Creature. There, at Jordan, He died, in the sense of giving up His life as a human being; and there He began the new life. From the time He made His Covenant of Sacrifice He was a New Creature.

During the three and one-half years of His ministry, which culminated at Calvary, Jesus was not living according to the world. He was living a higher life. During that time His sacrifice was satisfactory to the Father; and because of this, the incense of His offering entered into the antitypical Most High and covered the Mercy-Seat. Therefore, when He died at Calvary, there was laid up for Him the blessing which He received on the third day thereafter. Because He had proved faithful during the three and one-half years of His anointing of the Holy Spirit, the Father raised Him from the dead, and exalted Him far above angels.

The experiences of the Church are somewhat similar. From the time that we surrender our will and begin the sacrificial life, we are dead with Him. Then it is for us to live the new life—dead according to the flesh and alive toward God: dying daily and living daily. Our resurrection is going on moment by moment, year by year, until our trial is finished. Then we shall be rewarded according to our faithfulness from the time we came into God's family—from the time we received the begetting of the Holy Spirit and were recognized as sons of God, risen with Christ, to walk in newness of life.

Before we came into the family of God we were merely outcasts. But when we heard that God had provided for the redemption of our race through the death of His Son and was willing to receive us, it was Good Tidings to us. God has arranged that when we make a full consecration of our hearts to Christ He accepts us, imputes to us His merit and advocates for us. This will continue until the full number of the Elect shall have been found; for as there is a definite number of bones in the human body—not one more or one less if the body is perfect—so there is a positive number of members in the Body of Christ. The Bible tells us that all His members were written in the Book—the Book of God's Wisdom, when He planned the matter in the beginning. As we are accepted of Him, our names are written in the Lamb's Book of Life.

God has a wonderful Plan, and we fall in love with it as we come to understand it; for it is the lovable Plan of a lovable God. How much the Message of the Bible has changed since we have come to know of the things beyond the Veil and have received the understanding which God has given! Surely we can truly love Him, and give Him our whole lives, and show our loyalty to Him by doing His will to the best of our ability. In comparison to the glory, honor and immortality which is offered to us, the things of the present time are not worthy of note. But this high reward we shall receive only on the terms laid down. The resurrection process goes on until we shall have finished our course in death.

"All things are yours!" What a grand thought — things present, things to come; earthly things, Heavenly things. What a beautiful arrangement God has made! "As it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him."—1 Corinthians 2:9.

BAD DYSPEPSIA

So Bad Could Not Take a Drink of Water Without Suffering.

Dyspepsia is one of the most difficult diseases of the stomach there is to cure. You eat too much. Drink too much. Use too much tobacco. You make the stomach work overtime. You make it perform more than it should be called on to do. The natural result is that it is going to rebel against the amount of work put on it. It is only a matter of a short time before dyspepsia follows.

That old, forty year old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, will cure the dyspepsia and will cure it to stay cured as we can prove by the thousands of testimonials we have received from time to time.

Miss Sarah McRae, Newfield, Ont., writes: "I write to say that I have used your Burdock Blood Bitters, and have found it the best remedy I have ever used for dyspepsia. Two years ago, I had stomach trouble so bad that I could not even take a drink of water without suffering. I took six bottles of B.B.B., and have been entirely cured, and can now eat anything without any bad after effects."

Burdock Blood Bitters is an old and well tried remedy but on account of the many substitutes we would ask you to make sure that our name appears on both the label and wrapper as this preparation is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

IF ALL PLAYED OUT TRY THIS PRESCRIPTION

When that overpowering weariness and a never-rested feeling comes over you it shows some serious disorder is undermining your health. The cure is simple. Build up the system and nourish the body back to health by pure wholesome blood.

The one sure means of doing this is with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They are a marvellous aid to appetite,—convert all you eat into nutriment, and tissue-building material. Thus a weak body is supplied with new nerve fibre, hardy muscle and firm flesh. Lasting good health is sure to follow. If you really want to get well and stay well, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box at all dealers.

Criminality of Waste.

If I wanted to train a child to be thrifty I should teach him to abhor waste. I do not mean waste of money—that cures itself, because very soon there is no money to waste—but waste of material, waste of something that is useful, but that you cannot represent in money value to the waster. There is waste of water, waste of gas and things of that kind. If you would wish your children to be thrifty I would beg to impress upon them the criminality of waste.—Lord Rosebery.

Barnum's Ready Retort.

Barnum once appeared at Oxford to lecture on "Humbug." The rowdy students would not give him a hearing. At length, in a momentary lull, he shouted, "Then you don't want to hear anything about humbug?"

"We don't!" was the answer in a roar.

"Well," retorted Barnum, "I've got your money, and there's no humbug about that!"

The disturbance came to a sudden finish, and Barnum proceeded in peace.

Like Father, Like Son.

Rev. Dr. Somers was in the habit of addressing Sarah, his wife, in polysyllables when he wished the children to leave the room. He never dreamed that they understood until nine-year-old Jack, recovering from measles, was one day enjoying the dear privilege of hearing his mother read aloud.

The doctor ventured in and began softly, "Sarah"—

Dogs and Infection.

Dogs can carry infection along with them, as was clearly proved at Constantinople in 1865, when a single animal, entering the city from an infected district, started a cholera epidemic that killed more than 30,000. The dog, a valuable sheep, was taken into the house by a dragoman, and a few hours later he and all his family were stricken down with the complaint, which spread thence to all parts of the city, even the sultan's palace being invaded.—Exchange.

UNWIELDY ZEPPELINS

Very Easy For the Frail Air Dirigibles to Destroy Themselves

On a new Zeppelin airship a tunnel was constructed through the gas envelope which enabled the crew to pass between the passenger gondolas and a gun platform on the top of the machine.

The craft climbed to a height of a thousand feet with a full complement of crew, and a number crawled up the ladder in the communication tunnel and primed the gun situated above the envelope.

The signal was given and the weapon fired, and this proved to be the last action of the unfortunate gun crew. The Zeppelin disappeared in a sheet of flame, and a twisted mass of aluminum and fabric crashed to earth carrying over thirty men to their death.

A Zeppelin was manoeuvring near Berlin, with the usual crowd of admiring spectators looking on, and no doubt inspired by the large audience, the crew brought their machine close to the ground and began to skim the tree tops.

The day was gusty and a number of fierce air currents took possession of the airship and forced it out of control.

It crashed on to a wooded slope, around which the lengthy airship enveloped and curled itself in a disastrous embrace.

The task of landing and sending off a Zeppelin is a nerve-racking undertaking. Various complicated devices, such as supporting trucks running on rails, are required to launch the machines into space, and even then a troublesome wind is likely to wreck the whole apparatus.

BATHROOM LINEN.

Elegance In Fittings Matched by Luxurious Towels and Mats.

Elegance in bathroom appointments has been followed by luxury in bathroom linen. While styles do not vary much from season to season, there are novelties that may please the taste of those who are replenishing their linen.

The latest bathroom towels and the matching bath mat are of thick soft white Turkish toweling, the bath mat having on the plain linen woven edges a raised Greek fret border in the toweling. The towels have plain ends crossed by a Turkish weave stripe and hemstitched ends. The novelty is the initials or monograms on both bath mat and towel, embroidered in terry stitch in contrasting color—blue or red—and from six to eight inches in size. Terry stitch resembles the loop of the Turkish toweling, and the effect is artistic.

The monograms—usually scroll letters or old English—are, with the addition of a couple of little design motifs, made into diamond shaped monograms, making the monogram extremely ornamental on account of their contrasting color. Where the terry stitch is not used a two inch diamond linen embroidered monogram is appliqued on to the towel, also done in colors.

For hand towels some prefer those having scalloped edges with a spray embroidered scroll motif in a raised pattern. The scallops are not uniform in size, three or four of them making a deep, leaflike shape, which is repeated across the towel edge from seven to ten times. The pattern of the scallops is made up of rather fine leaves and small flowers in a widening spiral shape. The toweling is of the same weave as those with the colored embroidery, but is used in white only.

The wash cloths are like the pieces, and the hand toweling is of the huckaback or diaper weave, with the applied monogram, usually the same used on the household napery.

THIS SCHOOL GIRL HAD BAD FAINTING SPELLS

Was Weak and Run Down. But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Made Complete Cure

The most critical time in a girl's life comes during the school age, when she is impelled by rivalry to put forth her best efforts in studying for examinations. At the time she should have healthful outdoor exercise and abundance of fresh air, to keep the blood pure and rich, she is confined to her studies. Is it any wonder that she becomes run down in health and suffers from headaches, indigestion, loss of appetite and spells of weakness or fainting?

The case described in this letter is a good illustration and you can read here the splendid results of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help through this critical period.

"While attending school my daughter became weak and very much run down. She was frequently troubled with bad fainting spells, and nothing we tried seemed to do her any good. We were advised to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and did so with most satisfactory results. I am pleased to tell you that after using five boxes of the Nerve Food she was completely cured, and has no return of the fainting spells."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Hamilton Houston, Justice of the Peace.

The reason Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is so effective in cases of this kind is because of its extraordinary blood-forming influence. By creating an abundance of rich, red blood it strengthens the action of the heart, revitalises the exhausted nerves and builds up the system in every way.

The appetite is restored, digestion improves, you rest and sleep well, and the new vigour and energy is felt in every organ of the human body. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is doing wonders for men, women and children whose systems have become weak and run down. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

BELGIAN FUTURIST JOYS IN THE CARNAGE OF BATTLE

NEW YORK, June 10.—While with ordinary persons of war and all of its attendant abominations produce feelings of abhorrence, or at least dismay, the effect seems to be altogether different on the hybrid variety of artist-philosopher going under the name of "futurist." One of this strange kind has recently in a letter to a friend given vent to the exquisite raptures which he professes to have experienced by actual participation in the chaos of fighting, burning and carnage now on display at the front. This young futurist painter, who is a Belgian, was residing in Paris at the outbreak of the war and joined a French infantry regiment at the first call for recruits. In due time he found himself on the firing line, incidentally taking part in the severe fighting around Betheny, about which he has this to say:

"Six days and six nights we were cooped up in the burning city, surrounded by a girdle of cannon and machine guns which spouted death in all directions. There was fighting in the streets, which were choked with the corpses of men and carcasses of horses. Some times we slipped in the pools of thick, warm blood. We rushed into the houses. More fighting, cutting, slashing, and oh, how the claret tumbled in cascades down the steps! We cursed, swore, damned, shouted and killed, while the shells spurted and burst the houses went crashing down.

"Dirty, but Happy."

"It was intoxicating! I was dirty burnt, ragged, smeared from head to feet. In short, it was grand! Crawling through a heap of corpses, bricks and wreckage. I got hit by a fragment of a shell. I stumbled over a wounded horse, which gave me a violent kick in the back of the head. It was a good thing that it did not kill me outright, for I would not have liked to die just then. Oh, these six days and nights! They were surely the most beautiful and happiest I have spent in all my life."

Twenty-seven days this young war enthusiast dwelt in the trenches.

"Life was most charming there," he writes, "with a wild charge on the enemy every once in a while. Sometimes I had nothing to eat for forty-eight hours, and the trenches were rather met. But all this was forgotten when we were let loose and tore through the barbed wire entanglement in front of the German lines."

"One day" he continues, "our major called for volunteers to carry a message to another detachment. To get there one would come within twenty-five yards of the German trenches. The task was fraught with danger, and the major wanted two men for it. The first one was bound to draw the enemy's fire and eventually get killed, but the second one might be able to sneak past in the excitement that would be caused by his comrade's appearance. I had the great fortune of being selected as number one, because the major was very favourable to me on account of having made some sketches of him in the trenches.

"Off I went, and what a glorious time I had! Shortly after starting I was discovered by the German outposts, and a bouquet of bullets was thrown at me. One of them went through my right arm, yet it did not bother me at the time, and I plunged ahead without further adventure until I reached my destination and delivered my despatch. My uniform was soaked with blood, which poured freely from the wound in my arm, and the officer in command suggested that I let the surgeon attend to me right then.

"However, I asked as a favour to be permitted to take part in a bayonet charge which was to be made as a result of the information contained in the message I had brought. In the charge some rascally German shot a large hole in my left hand and little later I toppled over, weakened by the loss of blood.

Resented Bayonet Thrust.

"I happened to fall on a wounded German, who seemed to become unreasonably provoked and tried to finish me with his bayonet. I resented this very much, and grabbed him around the throat with my right hand, while I pushed the left one, now a bloody mass only, into his stomach, which had been conveniently opened by somebodys bayonet. I strangled him to death finally, and then I collapsed over his body myself.

"When I regained consciousness the fight was still going on in the distance We had evidently broken through the enemy's lines, and here was I lying idle in this immense open air morgue. I listened for a while to the pandemonium going on all around me. The loud breathing of the dying sounded like rattling chains. Those less wounded were calling for help, cursing and laughing hysterically, according to each individuals temperament. Much as they impressed me, I could not afford to stay and watch these scenes any longer. I suffered quite some pain, but I was strong enough to get on my feet and hobble along until I reached the rear of our line, now considerably advanced through the recent charge."

As a result of the experiences here described the cheerful futurist was compelled to while away many tedious days in a field hospital. He is now back in the fray again, although not exposed to such dangers as before. His left hand is not of much use to him, and he is not apt to do much actual fighting after this. At present he is serving as a map maker on the staff of the French corps commander.

CODDLING THE STOMACH

The So-Called "Scientific" Feeding.

In this 20th century of advancement, people are too apt to listen to new theories and put into practice new-fangled notions of feeding. Not only do adults follow so-called "scientific systems," but they cram down the mouths of their children such scientific soft foods that require no exercise of the digestive organs, and the children are apt to become fragile and their stomachs too weak to take in strength-giving food and be able to assimilate it. This is a hothouse condition that no man, woman or child should permit. The muscles of the stomach require exercise just as any other muscles of the body; neglect them with too much ease and inaction and you raise a dyspeptic. Use a tonic made of medicinal herbs which will stimulate the stomach into greater activity—a remedy which will do this one which has stood the test of public approval for over forty years, containing no alcohol or narcotic. We refer to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It arouses the little muscular fibres into activity and causes the gastric juices to thoroughly mix with the food you eat, simply because it supplies the stomach with pure, rich blood. It's weak, impure blood that causes stomach weakness. Get good blood through the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and you will have no more indigestion.

Sick people are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

NEAT AND NOVEL NEGLIGEE.

By Anabel Worthington.

Something new in a simple négligée is welcomed by those who are tired of the conventional kimono but require a practical garment. This design has novelty and at the same time can be made up quickly and with very little trouble. The body consists of front and back, with a seam running from shoulder to lower edge of sleeve, the sleeve being included in the body pieces and not sewed in. The front closes in a graceful manner. There are four pieces in the skirt, seamed at centre, back and at each side, the top being gathered at back and joined to the body under a tuck or hem.

In crêpe de Chine or a thin cotton, crêpe silk embroidery could be used most effectively to trim the body edges and sleeve band. The embroidery should match the material in color and might be as simple or elaborate in design as one cared to have it. Merely buttonholing the edges would make a pretty finish. On the other hand, if one does not wish to put any handwork upon the négligée the edges could be left plain or trimmed with a band of ribbon or satin. If flowered lawn were used the edges might be piped with plain lawn in a matching tone.

One of the cheap pretty lawns could be used to develop this design at a cost of about fifty cents. Dimity is another pretty wash material that would be suitable, although likely to be a little more expensive. For medium size 4¾ yards of 36 inch material would be required. The pattern, 7,095, comes in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

The General Offensive Continues

ATHENS, June 9.—"Everything is going well for the allies." Such is fire inflicted losses which can only morning from the Dardanelles region direct through the most reliable channel. The general offensive commenced by the allies at the end of last week continues with most important results. Progress has been realized at all points despite the previous hard work. The Australians and New Zealanders in the Saribair region are fighting magnificently and scoring well.

Advance Three Miles.

Early Saturday morning the line held by the forces in the southern portion of the peninsula was straightened by a brilliant piece of work, and dash, in carrying a gully held in considerable force by the enemy. Our men got into the enemy with the bayonet and very few of the Turkish force holding the position were able to escape. The position of the allied troops was suitable for a general advance and the forward movement has been continuous and noteworthy since then. My informant tells me that altogether an advance of three miles has been registered, and yesterday our forces were established along a line, including the positions on the slopes of Treek Peak. It is now expected that progress will be continuous.

Turk Losses Severe.

The feature of the past three days' fighting has been the extremely severe losses sustained by the enemy. It would appear that the Turkish morale has been badly shaken. The enemy's artillery fire has been particularly weak, while our big guns fire inflicted losses which can only be described as appalling. The French artillery, especially the '75s,' has been notably effective.

People who arrive here from Constantinople bring news which shows that the position in the Turkish capital is on the verge of becoming desperate. Typhus is claiming a large number of victims, among whom are said to be nearly one hundred army doctors. Medical supplies have practically run out and flour is extremely scarce. More serious than that, perhaps, have been the results of the Russian bombardment of Zunguldak, as a consequence of the destruction wrought at the mines there. Coal has become extremely difficult to obtain and the water supply has been so seriously interfered with that the water famine is assuming alarming proportions.

Officials Are Anxious.

The official world in the Turkish capital no longer conceals its anxiety and the Germans have seriously advised the Sultan to quit the capital for Konia. His Majesty, fearing the effect of his departure, would have on the population, has so far refused Nearly all the German officers who brought out their families to Constantinople, have sent them back to the fatherland again, among them being the household of the German Consul. Turkish wounded who are being brought to Constantinople do not attempt to conceal their despondency.

Austrian Submarine Sunk.

Paris, June 8.—A submarine, believed to be of Austrian nationality has been sunk by the Anglo-French fleet at the western entrance to the Dardanelles, says a despatch from Mitylene to-day. The presence of an Austrian submarine in the Dardanelles sphere would indicate that Austria, as well as Germany, is placing her war supplies at the disposal of the Turks.

Dietetic Blended Menus Have Been Introduced

"How much may a man eat on a train journey and still not have indigestion?" Such was the problem facing Mr. W. A. Cooper, Manager of the C. P. R. Dining Car System, and this problem he thinks he has solved with the aid of Dr. Harvey Wiley, the well-known specialist of New York. Here, for instance, is a recommended selection of foods for breakfast, luncheon and supper on the Imperial Limited:

Breakfast—Cereal with Cream, Fried Eggs with Rasher Bacon. Corn Muffins. Cocoa. 85c.

Luncheon—Cicken Bouillon. Spanish Omelet. Peach and Tapioca Pudding. Coffee. 95c.

Supper—Mock Turtle Soup. Lamb Chops. Bread. Rice Pudding. Coffee, $1.15.

According to Mr. Cooper, one needs on a train journey only about two-thirds of the quantity of food which would be assimilated while engaged in ordinary occupations at home, and ascribes the overeating on trains as due to the desire for a pleasant interlude on the train journey. This new scheme of "Dietic Blended Menus" is therefore introduced not with the object of inducing travellers to spend more money, but to spend less, the object of the railway being to secure contented and not dyspeptic travellers. With each menu is presented a short homily on food written by Dr. Wiley to the following effect:

"The four essential elements of food are the proteins, or nitrogeneous foods, the carbohydrates, such as sugar and starch, the fats, such as oil and butter, and mineral matters, such as lime, potash and phosphoric acid.

"The dietetic blended foods on the Canadian Pacific dining car service menus have been arranged so that the traveller in choosing one of these suggested meals will secure a ration which is dietetic, that is, nourishing and wholesome, and at the same time properly blended. Thus each of these blended rations will supply all the nutritional need of the traveller and not burden the digestive apparatus with any excess of the essential elements of food. As a result, the traveller will be better nourished, will suffer less discomfort and be in less danger from injury by overeating than he could possibly be if, without expert knowledge of the nature of foods, he should select a meal for himself.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, gloom, rheumatic pains and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and aches and make you well again.

AN INTELLIGENT ARMY

Kipling's View on the Civilian—Soldier Compared With Professional

It is the opinion of Kipling and of other keen observers that in some respects the new army will eclipse the old. In brain power and enthusiasm it promises to rise to any emergency that may be in store for it. The new army is composed of men who are superior in intelligence to the professional soldier. They are not, at first, content to follow the routine of drill without understanding what it means and why it is insisted on. The old-fashioned recruit did what he was told, and left the thinking to his superiors By the time he was a seasoned soldier, probably, he had come to understand the cause for the tedious drill. He was a good soldier, anyway, but not quite the sort of soldier that is to be seen in the new army. One thing which the new army had to learn in a different way from the old army is the uselessness of "independence" as ordinarily understood.

On this point Kipling says:

"They are what is called "independent'—a civilian weakness which they will learn to blush over in a few months, and to discourage among later recruits; but they are also very quick to pick up dodges and tricks that make a man more comfortable in camp life, and their domestic routine runs on wheels. It must have been hard at first for civilians to see the necessity for that continuous, apparently perpickity, house-maiding and 'following-up' which is vital to the comfort of large bodies of men in confined quarters. In civil life men leave these things to their womenfolk, but where women are not, officers, inspecting tents, feet, and such-like, develop a she-side to their head, and evidently make their non-commissioned officers and men develop it too. A good soldier is always a bit of an old maid. But, as I heard a private say to a sergeant in the matter of some kit shucked into a corner: 'Yo' canna keep owt redd up ony proper gate on a sand hill.' To whom his superior officer replied: 'Ah know yo' canna, but yo' mun try, Billy.' And Heaven knows they are trying hard enough—men, n.c.o.'s and officers—with all the hasked and undervoiced effort of our peoples when we are really at work."

Even such men as the Canadians, he says, who are half-soldiers already in handiness, soon learn that independence of the wrong sort will not do. One Canadian officer said: "Just because we were all used to looking after ourselves in civil life we used to send parties out without rations. And the parties used to go, too!' And we expected the boys to look after their own feet. But we're wiser now."

"And I Am Satisfied"

They told a Spartan woman long ago
Her son had fallen as he faced the foe.
And "bury him," she said, with steadfast face,
"And let the younger brother take his place."
They told a woman yesterday in France
Her son was killed. She flashed a sudden glance
From shining eyes. And "promise me," she cried,
"Victory to France, and I am satisfied."

WIFE WITNESSED HUSBAND TAKE DEATH LEAP

NEW YORK, JUNE 11—Believing that if he jumped from the highest point of Brooklyn Bridge he could obtain work as a motion picture actor, Henry Clerk, thirty-one years old, machinist, of No. 2,633 Lancaster Avenue, West Philadelphia, climbed the bridge cables leading to the Manhattan tower, and leaped 250 feet to his death, recently. His leap was witnessed by his wife and several friends from Philadelphia. Up to a late hour his body had not been found.

Scores of persons were astonished to see Clark slowly mount the cables leading to the tower, and their cries attracted the attenion of Policeman Marin. He called Policemen Leddy and Kennedy, of the Bridge Squad, and they started in pursuit of Clark. The latter climbing hand over hand distanced the policemen, who were heavier men, and could not climb as swiftly. The sight of the four men constantly going higher up the cables caused intense excitement. Thousands to pedestrians, passengers in trolley cars and elevated trains waited with bated breath to see the result of the aerial pursuit.

Martin, who led the policemen, was seen to be gaining on Clark, who, when he had climbed about two thirds of the distance to the tower, and looked like a tiny spider holding to a gigantic web, suddenly stopped. Clark wound his legs around the cable, and, waving his arms to the policemen, shouted: "It's all right! I know what I'm doing!" Then he jumped.

The crowd gasped when the machinist struck the water like a stone and sank. He never rose to the surface. A small boat set out instantly from the Manhattan side of the East River and searched for the man in vain.

Mrs. Clark, her brother and several friends witnessed the tragedy from a pier at Dover Street. Anxiously Mrs. Clark awaited the return of the small boat which went to her husband's rescue, and when its occupants returned and told her that contact with the water evidently had broken her husband's back and that he had drowned, she wept. Policemen took her to the Oak Street police station, and from there to Police Headquarters. The woman's brother said he was John Mitchell and the others in the party gave their names as Mrs. Bella Robinson, of No. 4,611 Harris Street, and James F. Driscoll, of No. 3,612 Baring Street, West Phildalphia.

Mrs. Clark told the police that her husband had been employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad, but because he earned only about $2.50 a day he had been dissatisfied. Ten years ago he had jumped from the top of a bridge in Harrisburg, Pa., and four years ago from the Schuylkill River bridge in Philadelphia, she said. Recently he had said he would climb to the highest point of Brooklyn Bridge and jump, hoping that the notoriety might attract the attention of moving picture concerns and result in his obtaining lucrative employment. She said he talked about it for some time, and that about $2,000 had been wagered in the railroad shops over the success or failure of the daredevil performance.

"We arrived in New York city Saturday night," she said ,"and went to a hotel near the Pennsylvania Railroad. I tried to persuade my husband to give up his foolhardy attempt, but he insisted. I refused to accompany him when he left for the bridge just after breakfast. My brother and friends arrived on the ten o'clock train from Philadelphia, and we hastened to look for him."

They arrived on the pier just in time to see him jump, Mrs. Clark said.

It was said last night that Clark was known as an expert swimmer, and the opinion was expressed that he became excited as a result of the chase and did not dive properly.

Germans Are Shelling French Trenches Won Near Souchez

High Explosives Cause French to Withdraw From a Portion of Their Position But They Offset This by Capturing Trenches in the Jorette Hills---Belgians Take Offensive Near Dixmude.

CROSSED RIVER AND DROVE GERMANS BACK

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 14.—(French official communique.)—The Germans have begun a new attack on Souchez. They are hurling large quantities of high explosive shells against the French trenches and the walls of the old sugar refinery. An official statement this afternoon admitted they bombarded the wrecked part of the French trenches north of the mill and forced the French troops to retire. This reverse however was offset by a French victory on the east ridge of the Lorette hills. The French shelled and then occupied a portion of the German trenches, in a clash of infantry forces.

The Belgians have resumed the offensive near Dixmude. In a night attack a Belgian battalion crossed the east bank of the Yser, south of the railway leading to Dixmude and took up a strongly fortified position. They drove back the German troops in the direction of Dixmude.

The military authorities desire to leave the impression on troops here that insubordination will not be tolerated in the overseas forces.

The Bayern's cargo was found to contain eight aeroplanes, 14 quick firers and a large quantity of ammunition.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—"The heart of America will yet interpret the heart of the world." That will be the mission of the United States, in the opinion of President Wilson, if the people of the country are true to their great traditions. He so told a crowd of nearly 5,000 people, assembled on the south front of the Treasury building at noon to-day, in discussing flag day and the traditions for which it stands.

WILL RID MARKET SQUARE OF NUISANCE

Ald. McIntyre Will Co-operate With Sanitary Inspector Spence in an Effort to Have Refuse Kept Off the Market

Ald. McIntyre, chairman of the Property Committee, propose to lend his assistance towards obliterating the nuisance that has existed for some time past on the market square under the auspices of the Board of Works. Refuse that was collected on the streets was dumped there in the open until a sufficient quantity had collected to warrant removal. After considerable effort on the part of the Sanitary Inspector, Street Commissioner Evans was prevailed upon to supply a covered dump waggon which would be kept on the market square until filled, and then removed. Now Ald. McIntyre proposes that the nuisance shall be eliminated entirely and the refuse dumped somewhere else. The rear of a number of provision houses line the west side of the market square, while on the north is the city hall, the east, a number of boarding houses, and on the south, one of the largest hotels in the city. Then again it is claimed that the city had no right to make use of the market for this or any other purpose not named in the by-law under which it is leased to the market clerk. Ald. McIntyre will co-operate with Sanitary Inspector Spence in an effort to have the practice stopped no matter whether a covered vehicle or any other kind of a receptacle is used.

MORE MEN FOR FRONT

MORE GOING SATURDAY

Seventeen recruits for the new infantry battalion in this division left this morning for Barriefield camp in charge of Lieuts. Harold Hill and John Harstone. This is the second draft the 57th Regiment has sent to Barriefield, and another quota will leave at the end of this week, the recruits who joined the latter part of last week remaining here a few days for drill purposes. Recruiting is going on steadily, and in spite of the large numbers already sent out from Peterborough, there is not apparent need of going outside the city for recruits.

This morning's squad reported at the Armouries at 7:30 o'clock, and after the pay rolls had been signed, were each presented with a gift from the Daughters of the Empire. Then headed by the 57th Band playing the "Red, White and Blue," the squad marched to the G.T.R. station where they entrained for Barriefield. Lt.-Col. Walker, O.C. the 57th, marched down with the recruits, and Capt. A. G. Carruthers, quartermaster of the 39th Battalion, also fell in on the way down George St. Very few people except the families of the soldiers knew that the draft was leaving this morning, and the result was the crowd was not as large as usual, although there was a good-sized turnout at the station. Three hearty cheers were given as the train pulled out, with the soldiers waving a last good-bye and the band playing "The Girl I Left Behind Me."

To-day's quota were a smart, clean cut bunch, about half of whom have had previous military experience. Here is the list:

George Barrell—718 Harvey St., aged 30. Married, no previous military experience.

Edward Bedding—657 Concession St., aged 26. Married, no previous military experience.

Wm. J. Conners—Brown St., aged 29. Married, three years in 57th Regiment.

Frank L. Green—514 Patterson St., aged 20. Single, one year in 24th Field Battery.

Alfred E. Gardiner—559 Water St., aged 21. Single, no previous military experience.

Norman C. Hatton — Son of Crown Attorney Hatton, aged 26. Single, one year in 57th Regiment.

Harold H. Jolliffe—304 Wescott St., aged 18. Single, no previous military experience.

Harry Kelly—549 Patterson St., aged 23. Single, 2 years in the 2nd Manchester Regiment (Territorials).

Alexander McKenie — Stewart's Hall, Otonabee, aged 28. Single, one year in 24th Field Battery, one year in 46th Regiment.

Alfred George Spiller—2 Fradette Ave., aged 26. Single, no previous military experience.

Herbert Stuart—701 Stewart St., aged 19. Single, no previous military experience.

German Attempt on Lemberg Has Been Abandoned—Mackenzen Will Try a Drive at Warsaw Instead

LOST VERY HEAVILY

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, June 13.—Checked in his efforts to capture Lemberg, Gen. von Mackenzen is believed to be transferring his best troops from the Galician to the Polish front, where a new effort has been inaugurated to smash the Russian centre on the Rawka River, west of Warsaw.

In Galicia the battle on the Dneister at Zurawna appears to have come to n end, with the result in favour of the Russians who report officially that in three days of fighting, ending on Thursday, they took 346 officers, 15,431 soldiers, 17 cannon and 78 machine guns. On the following day the enemy started to cross the Dniester at a point further south-east. The Austro-German wing is only 20 miles from the Roumanian border, while its left wing reaches as far as Halicz, where many attacks hve been delivered against a bridge-head. The centre of the operations is Kolomea, from which point the main attacks, which have carried the Teutonic allies across the Dniester in several places, are being launched.

Frederick Rennet, in a despatch from Petrograd to the Daily News, states that Gen. Mackensen has abandoned his attempt on Lemberg from the direction of Peremysl, his main army having met signal defeat Wednesday night on the railway line at Mosaiki.

Enemy Forced to Retreat.

Mackenzen started the attack with three hours of terrific artillery cannonade, to which the Russians did not reply. When the enemy infantry were within 200 yards of the trenches the Russians opened a murderous fire and charged. They took the front line along both sides of the railway, and remained there. The Germans and Austrians attempted to fortify their second line, but the Russians, pressing on in great numbers on the north and south, pressed beyond the cross fire from both ends and killed over 20,000 before dawn, when the enemy began a disorderly retreat. The Russians are still in close contact with them, continuing the fight.

Throughout the exciting days of critical battle in Galacia the school boys were attending examinations in Russian history and geography in Lemberg. Many thousands of them are eager to join the Russian army.

Allies Progressing At The Dardanelles

Slowly Surmounting the 700 Foot Mountain of Aka Baba That Bars Their Way—Naval Guns Have Caused Great Damage.

MORE TROOPS ARRIVE

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, June 13. — The allied troops on Gallipoli Peninsula are still hammering away at Aka Baba, the 780-foot mountain, on whose sides the Turks are resisting their further advance. Aka Baba is just six miles from the point of the peninsula and midway between the straits and the sea. From it two arms extend in a slight semi-circle, reaching to the shore line on both sides. The mountain itself has a particularly forbidding aspect. One writer has described it as most resembling an old Chinese idol, with a great round, stupid-looking head and two short, thick set shoulders and then two long arms stretching out on either side as though barring the way to some forbidden inner temple. Between these arms the plain across which the allies have been charging with the utmost heroism in their efforts to storm the mountain.

Thus far the great Aka Baba idol has lost his two hands, and, following up flank attacks, the armies are slowly creeping up his long arms. These hands, stretched out along the coast on either side, have been particularly susceptible to the fire from the warships, and, to continue the simile, the naval guns, combined with land operations, have cut them off at the wrists. Credit for this on shore goes to the British on the Egean Sea and to the French, who are holding the right of the line.

The War Offices in London and Paris are not telling the size of the Gallipoli army, but it is being augmented every day by the arrival of additional transports. Only last week the Mauretania and Transylvania, turned into troopships, arrived at Lemnos filled with men who left their decks to enter the sun-baked trenches.

Observers who have come back from the Dardanelles say: "The straits can be forced. It is only a question of how many men and ships will have to be sacrificed in the campaign."

An Austrian submarine was sunk in the Dardanelles on June 7, according to a despatch from Athens. No details are given.

CHICAGO CARS RUN WITH ARMED GUARDS ON BOARD

No Passengers on the First Trains Operated To-day in the Effort to Break the Great Street Car Strike

TO USE STRIKE BREAKERS

Special to The Examiner:

CHICAGO, June 14. — Carrying armed guards, elevated trains shortly before noon to-day were sent away on their runs on ten-minute schedules in an effort to crush the biggest street car strike Chicago, and perhaps, the entire nation, has ever known. There were no passengers on the first trains. In the meantime several crews of professional strike breakers from Cincinnati and other eastern cities began to arrive for duty to-morrow.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The first bicycle trip for the members of the Boys' Department of the Y.M.C.A. was held Saturday afternoon to Chemong Park. The park is an ideal place to take boys for an outing. It has a good safe swimming beach, fine baseball grounds, and fine large woods to ramble through. The most enjoyable part of the trip was the return home. Coasting down the big hills was certainly delightful. Some of the boys would have liked to have kept at it all day, but there is a limit to all good things, so the boys returned home quite satisfied with their day's outing.

The members of the Employed Boys' Club will meet at Rye's Boathouse to-night at 7.30 for a trip down the river in the war canoe.

Flower Sunday Was Observed

Interesting Service at Charlotte St. Methodist Church Yesterday

Yesterday the beautiful service in connection with Flower Sunday was observed at the morning service of the Charlotte Street Methodist church. Primarily a function for the Sunday school, there was a large attendance of the adult members of the congregation, who took a deep interest in the service. The Sunday school scholars were out en masse, and the music was supplied by the Sunday school orchestra. Mr. Ivon Brock gave a most interesting and instructive address, taking "Growers" as his subject, and Miss Richardson sang in her usual most acceptable style.

"BULLY" FOR ITALY!

We must forget the word "Dago" as slightingly applied to Italians; or perhaps we might keep it and use it in a laudatory sense. When we see the victorious march of the Italians ever since they invaded Austria in search of the fragments of "Italia irridenta," we can well use the word, to adopt a playful derivation of the late Dr. Drummond, when we note how doy-go in their so far resistless onward sweep. The Italian troops, since they entered the war have made an unbroken triumphal progress; and if doy-go on like this all the time, it will be no discredit to call an Italian soldier a Dago. It took Italy a long time to get into the war; but, evidently, she was, like the school boy, simply "getting a good ready." At any rate she is making good with a great flourish. It is no empty or unwarranted commendation to say "Bully" for Italy!

OUR OVERSEAS COUSINS, TOO.

We naturally give most attention to the actions of our Canadian soldiers, and saddest attention to their losses in the battle line. We are cheered by the credit their exploits and bravery of bearing reflect on Canada. But we should not forget that there are other "colonials" who are upholding colonial prestige and maintaining "colonial" traditions of bravery and efficiency. Our Southern Cross cousins from Australia and New Zealand are splendid running mates of Canadians. Ever since their arrival on the scene of hostilities on Turkish soil, they have followed up their gallant entry by scaling the cliffs in the face of galling fire, with splendidly substantial services in the big task of forcing the Dardanelles. They, like the Canadians, have suffered heavy losses; as was inevitable. The scathless soldier is not he who figures in the thick of the fight, and bravely bears the brunt. We, while we mourn, can be proud of, the losses of our soldiers, especially if we think how humbled we should have been if our men had come out unharmed by shirking duty and keeping out of danger. Dying nobly while nobly doing duty, is a noble thing, and our Canadian boys and their antipodian cousins have so died.

BEWARE THE MIDDLEMAN.

It would be just as reasonable, if it were possible, to have the middleman taking his toll between the artillery man who works the gun and the enemy, for whose benefit it is fired, as to have the middleman interpose between the government and the manufacture of ammunition. If the government, with full authority, and with no desire to make unholy gain, cannot place orders for shells directly, or through the authorized Shells Commission, certainly no middleman is in a better position. The only middleman that can be tolerated for the moment is a member of parliament, and his activity should be confined to the parliamentary district he represents, if it is an industrial centre. And his activity should be confined to gaining knowledge of the manufacturing capacity existent, or to be developed, of local industries; and to placing the facts before the government, without thought of preferring any manufacturing establishment, except from considerations of capacity, and with utter disregard of the patronage list. We know that the middleman and his "graft" appetite have been responsible for the scandals that have not only discredited Canada, but, handicapped our soldiers, weakened our strength, and impaired the efficiency of our contribution to waging this war. In this connection the Toronto Star aptly says:

> These middlemen are trying to make fortunes out of the grief and wounds and sufferings of the country that is busy there. While our young men in thousands are sacrificing their lives in battle these specimens are trying to wedge in between the soldiers at the front who need ammunition and the factories at home that can produce it, and graft into their own pockets a rake-off of one-quarter of all the money the country has to spend on arming our men as they go into battle. The utterly scandalous nature of the greed that is thus displayed, the murdering, grave-digging character of it in its effects on the lives and fortunes of our sons and brothers as they fight and fall in battle, may not be apparent to the speculators who engage in it, but the people of Canada see it in its true light, and will in time mark the men who engage in it. The business men of the country who own the factories ought to turn down such men, have nothing to do with them, and deal directly and only with the Shells Committee acting for the Government, and indirectly through the Government with the accredited agents of foreign Governments.

Canada is doing her level best to give the greatest possible help in waging a war from a bottom principle—honour, honesty, fair dealing, and it would be monstrously inconsistent for us to accompany our little contribution by the most cruel and culpable dishonesty as represented by the operations of the "grafting" middleman, who indirectly fills his purse by filling the battlefield graves with the bodies of our brave young Canadians. There is no middle course open to us in dealing with the war contract middleman.

WHAT THE EMPIRE MEANS.

Sir Percy Girouard, right-hand man of Rt. Hon. Lloyd George, as Minister of Munitions, in addition to being a man of action and an administrative genius, is like nearly all educated French Canadians, an orator. Speaking at Cardiff, from the same platform as Lloyd George, and following his address to the mighty gathering of masters and men, when they were urged to "plant the flag on their workshops," he used these words—

> "I stand as a British subject, and, French-Canadian. My forefathers resided in Canada for 250 years. We have enjoyed under the British flag the Roman Catholic religion, the French language, the old Napoleonic and pre-Napoleonic law without hindrance and with great tolerance. Is it any wonder the French-Canadians—and among them I must put in the highest place my great friend since boyhood, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, all feel what it would mean to them and to the Empire as a whole and to the whole world if anything occurred to upset the equilibrium of the Empire."

Not only would the Empire, in all its parts, as Sir Percy suggests be at loss if the Empire lost its level; but the whole world of civilization besides. Every day we are getting a deeper insight into what the British Empire, and the principles it stands for, mean to itself and to the world.

THE CHURCH AND THE OPEN BAR.

If the appointment of the Ontario License Commission was intended to take the liquor question out of politics it has failed of its object. The trade will be in politics as long as it exists, and those who seek to make an end of liquor selling must frequent the halls of Parliament instead of directing their protests to the Chairman of a Board of License Commissioners whose duties are administrative, not legislative. The Social Service Committee of the London Methodist Conference has put the present situation before the people of Ontario in plain words. No fault is found with the Commission as a licensing authority. It is regarded as a step in the right direction, and its metods are spoken of as far removed from the temperance peculiar to local License Boards. It may mean much:

> "But your committee calls attention to the fact that the Methodist Church did not ask for a Central Commission or for another dry holiday, but 'a dry Ontario' every day, and the appointment of a Commission is far from satisfying us; or, in the words of a recent Press article, 'spiking our guns.' Until the Central Commission spells probihibition we will cry mightily unto God, and a Book of Remembrance will be written, and in that cry the iniquitous three-fifths' clause will be remembered." That is plain, unmistakable English, and the situation called for its use. The pleas of Messrs. Aycarst and Dingman, good Methodists both, who are members of the License Commission ,cannot obscure the fact that the overwhelming sentiment of the evangelical Churches is in favour of far more drastic action respecting the liquor traffic than the Government of Ontario has taken. In France the authorities are publicly burning the materials used in the manufacture of absinthe. In Russia the habits of a great people are being transformed by the suppression of the manufacture and sale of alcohol, while in this Province, which prides itself on its advanced standard of civilization and its high ideals of social reform, the saloon opens its seductive doors as widely as it did before the war. The leaders of the various denominations in Ontario would be false to every declaration of the past two decades were they to express satisfaction with the policy of the Hearst Government as disclosed in its temperance legislation. They asked for bread; why should they pretend to be satisfied with a stone? —The Globe.

LITTLE LESSON IN GERMAN.

"Lazaret," which occurs too often as the address of some of our Canadians boys, prisoners in Germany, pronounced "Latzaret," is German for "military hospital." "Kriegsgefangenlager" is a combination, in German style, of these words—"Kriegs," meaning war; "gefangen," meaning prisoner; and "lager," meaning camp. —Toronto Star.

Contrast Between British and German Colonizing and Trading Policy and Practice

Poultney Bigelow, the American author and traveller, has written to the New York Times the following illuminating letter on Britain's attitude toward world trade in contrast with that assumed in a similar connection by Germans. He says:

On the two occasions when I had the honour of addressing Princeton University I carried away admiration for the intellectual elasticity of that audience, and was inclined to give the credit to the excellent men composing its Faculty.

It is for this reason that I marvel at the long letter in to-day's Times contributed by Ernest Johann Spaeth of that Faculty. For in that letter this learned Ph.D. of Leipsic takes as a compliment to German Kultur President Wilson's masterly sarcasm when referring to the massacre of the Lusitania as having been perpetrated by a government hitherto "humane and enlightened."

It is not my purpose to argue a point of humour with Princeton's Professor of English Letters; but to point out an error in the field of history — a department where exactness is of more importance than even this elegance of diction. Dr. Spaeth describes England as the "most gigantic conspiracy in restraint of trade ever organized"—and as truth is dear to the American reader, who may be impressed by the academic titles of my Leipsic friend, permit me in a few words to examine gently this strange statement.

Not many years ago I sat on the club verandah at Singapore and counted twenty-five funnels of a single German steamer line. From Singapore I went to North Borneo; there was but one line, a German, and that line carried the British mail. Later I went to Siam from Singapore. It was on a steamer of this same German line, carrying British mail. There was no other. Thence I went to Hongkong by the same excellent German line. Later I went to Australia—it was by one of this same line. To Java and the Eastern Archipelago, to Penang—it was always this vast German company doing not only all the German, but the British mail service as well. The German traders, with whom I mixed, freely, marvelled at the infantile generosity with which Great Britain opened all her ports to German enterprise, although long-headed people shook their heads at the thought of German skippers having a better acquaintance with British waters than their own people.

Nowhere in the British colonial world have I found the slightest evidence of commercial monopoly and certainly no favouring of Englishmen at the expense of Germans.

Even in India the German commercial traveller has roamed at will and driven Englishmen out of business under the very noses of the Calcutta Council. Germans have assured me on what they deemed the best authority that in the event of war India would immediately rise as one man and chase every Englishman into the sea. Yet when I was there the whole British garrison numbered a mere 75,000 white men over a native population of nearly three hundred million.

Officers close to the Berlin Court have welcomed this war to me on the ground that all South Africa would rise and fight for Germany. It was idle for me to tell them that my experience led me to a different conclusion; they knew better. They were all Doctors of Philosophy, and besides: Wir Deutsche wissen das Alles besser.

In my studies in the economic field, studies that have carried me to most of the British no less than German colonies, I have searched in vain for that "restraint of trade" which Dr. Spaeth attributes to John Bull. On the contrary, where I found a "most gigantic conspiracy in restraint of trade" has been in the Imperial German colonies, where competing English traders have been treated to a systematic course of petty official restrictions so vexatious that finally they have given up the attempt to do business under German conditions. When I was in German New Guinea this official prosecution went so far that a British trading steamer was even forbidden to get water, in order to force it to abandon trade with the natives of that neighbourhood.

Why is it, lieber Herr Doktor, that British colonies are crowded with Germans? Why is it that no German is willing to colonize on German soil! Does Dr. Spaeth know that nearly every one of Germany's colonies was virtually a gift from England, at a time when Bismarck was anxious to amuse his people by foreign toys, and when Lord Salisbury held all tropical colonies as of doubtful value? He gave away the western section of South Africa, which has been ever claimed as part of Cape Colony. He gave away an empire to the north of Australia, which the people of that Commonwealth have bitterly resented. Wherever the Black Eagle has shown itself on colonial soil, that soil has suddenly pined as with blight, Prussian rule alone has flourished; the natives have been reduced to slavery or escaped to the jungle; German colonists have been conspicuous by their absence.

For the benefit of Dr. Spaeth whose colonial experience has been gained in the Aula of Leipsic, let me state that to-day the British fleet in every one of her various colonial possessions represents to Germans, no less than to the natives, more of justice and liberty than either of them have ever tasted before. Germany to-day is cordially detested in every German colony—or was at the time of my last inquiry. On the contrary, England could raise volunteer regiments in Basutoland or Rhodesia; North Borneo or Hongkong; Jamaica or Barbados; and as to India, her Sikhs, Gurkas and Pathans have given but a foretaste of what is yet coming from the Indus and Ganges to vindicate Britain's honest rule in the Far East.

In a short letter I cannot enter into details, or I would develop the distinction between India and all other British possessions. I anticipate my German friend, who remarks that British colonies do discriminate in favour of the mother country; but we also know that colonies who do that are beyond the mother country's control, like Canada. But in so-called Crown colonies, like Hongkong, the German trader has the same advantages as every other—or did have these advantages until God smote his rulers with megalomania, and called forth war on a scale of magnitude and misery undreamed of in the best days of the wars for religion or for the conquest of Peru.—Poultney Bigelow.

THE IRISH RETREAT.

The Tablet, relating an account of a spiritual retreat which a battalion of the Royal Irish Regiment of Longford, Ireland, has been making remarks that is is the only kind of a retreat an Irish regiment ever makes.

Progressing.

The five-year-old daughter of a well known humorous writer appeared one morning at the breakfast table with suggestions of a cold beginning to manifest itself.

"Why, Kathleen," said her father; "you are a little hoarse."

"Am I?" said Kathleen, resentfully. "You said I was a little pig yesterday!"—London Telegraph.

Preparing a Substitute.

"We are to have company for dinner, and I don't believe there is a grapefruit to be had in town! What in the world shall I do?"

"Get any oranges?"

"Plenty of them."

"All right. You be splitting the oranges, and I'll run down to the drug store and get a pound of quinine to fill them with."—Houston Post.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

AT THE FORGE FIRE

Why an Old Blacksmith Heeded the Appeal of an Escaped Convict.

By H. M. EGBERT.

The hunted man who had emerged from the mangrove thickets that fringed the road stopped, straightened himself, and passed the sleeve of his ragged coat over his eyes to wipe away the sweat that blinded him. Not fifty yards ahead he saw the red blaze of a smithy fire, its bright tongues darting among the cloud of whirling sparks that spun like midges in the darkness. Beside it the black silhouette of a huge old man bent over the anvil, the flail-like arms threshing upon a red-hot shoe.

The hunted man crept forward. The fine white dust of the roads had powdered him, ooze from the lagoons had plastered him, so that the pattern of his suit was indistinguishable; it would have been hard, too, to tell whether he was old or young, negro or white.

Though the warm February night gave promise of a Florida spring, though he dripped sweat, the man stretched out his hands toward the blaze as though to warm them. What he desired, however, unconsciously symbolized by the action, was rather the warmness of human intercourse. It was days since had heard a human voice.

At that moment there sounded, very musical and very far away, the bay of a hound. The man's straining ears caught the sound; he hesitated no longer but, gripping his knife, filed from a soft iron bar too short for any other offensive use, he slouched toward the smithy and peered in at the door.

"Can you give a stranger a shakedown, mister?" he called to the smith.

"Come in, friend," answered the smith, not looking up. "Sit down beside the fire and rest you a spell."

The man obeyed, taking his seat in the shadows and pulling the ragged hat well over his eyes.

"You be from Tampa, friend?" inquired the smith, pausing in his work and looking up for the first time. Something about the man's appearance arrested his attention and he surveyed him again with a casual glance which, nevertheless took in all details.

"It's a goodish walk from Tampa," he continued, without waiting for the other to reply. "Nigh upon five and twenty miles it must be."

"You are a Cornishman!" exclaimed the other, rising from the stool which he had occupied. "I was born in Bodmin. I haven't heard the speech in seven years. I—"

The hound's note sounded again, far over the marshes, and another hound took up the call, and another.

"You're from the convict camp, I reckon," said the smith quietly, as he began to hammer again. "When did you get away?"

"Five nights ago," the stranger cried, advancing into the glow of the fire. The smith could see the hideous stripes plainly now, the shaved head, and the hands blistered with resin. "You'll help me?" the stranger pleaded in eager, rapid accents. "You'll tell them I'm your help and give me some bread and put an old suit about me? I wouldn't have asked you if you hadn't been a Cornishman. I'd have took what I wanted. Look!"

He showed him the sharp knife and then replaced it in his coat, running it between the lining and the cloth.

"Friend," said the smith, laying his hammer down and approaching the other man, "you've time to answer a question or two before I answer you. I've heard those camps are hell on earth, but there's men hellish enough to deserve to suffer in them. What was your crime and how long did they send you away for?"

"They sent me up for life!" shouted the convict. "That was seven years ago and I've been in hell all that time. I guess I've paid the price."

"What was your crime, friend?" the smith continued inexorably.

"Murder!" the other shouted.

Was Days Since He Had Heard a Human Voice.

killed a man, the lowest and meanest vermin that ever crawled."

The smith stood facing the convict quietly, but the kindliness in his eyes had given place to loathing.

"I'll give no help to a murderer!" he cried. "Whoso sheds man's blood, by man his blood shall be shed. That's in the Good Book. Be you gone, for you'll get no help from me."

Standing there defenceless, he yet cowed the man who had the knife in his coat. The fugitive did not even remember it.

"You'll hear me first," he pleaded. "If ever murder could be justified, this was. Wait, now! I'll tell you everything there's time to tell and then I'll go, if you won't help me." He went on rapidly, disregarding the old man's threatening gestures. "I was raised in Bodmin and came to this country eight years ago to marry my girl, the girl who was pledged to me. She'd come here first as lady's maid. There was another Bodmin man. I told him of Milly before he set sail to work in the mines."

"The mines, you say!" shouted the smith, staring into the other's face. "What mines?"

"The phosphate mines at Hicks Crossing. He came here. I'd sent Milly a message by him, the black-hearted hound! I heard no more of them, but when I reached the town I found them both. They had been married four months. They had a cabin in the fields. I met her at the door. Her eye was blackened and her arm bruised. He'd done that the night before. I found him in the mines and put my knife through his heart."

"Whose heart?" screamed the smith, trembling violently. "What was his name? Whose heart?"

"Hinman's. I tell you—"

The old man's hand fell heavily upon the shoulder of the convict and in his eyes was a strange look of peace.

"There's an old suit behind that curtain, friend," he said in an expressionless voice. "Put it on; then sit by the fire. After a while I'll have a bite for you. Haste you! Hark!"

The hounds were giving tongue along the road.

"But—but—" stammered the convict, "you knew Hinman?"

"He married my girl," answered the old man quietly.

SURELY A BENEDICT'S JOB

Care Taken by Burglars to Remove Traces of Their Work Somewhat Convincing.

The burglars who, after blowing up a safe the other evening, thoroughly washed their finger prints from the prying minions of the law, led the careful observer to meditate on their antecedents and speculate on the probable consequences of this novel application of an old idea.

At a venture we would say that these ingenious disturbers of the peace have in their time trodden the uncertain paths of wedlock. Where else could they have learned to cover up the tracks of their misdoing in so masterly a fashion? Where but on the conjugal hearth are found the most effective devices of dissimulation and disguise? One can easily picture a typical illustration.

While he was waiting for her mother. In the parlor hubby sits expectantly with a smile of anticipation curling about the half-burned end of his cigar. A ring at the door bell! Enter, in hilarious procession, half a dozen intimate friends with bundles carefully concealed about their clothing. The bundles are produced, the corks drawn, the company gathers round the polished board, the cards are dealt and loathed melancholy, of blackest midnight and wife's scruples born, promptly hences.

It is now time for wife's return and the point of the story. The sin has been committed and the transgressor must cover up his tracks. Here is where your safe-washing burglar learns his game. The ash-stained table is scrupulously washed; the cigar butts gathered on a tray and thrown to the mercies of the night; the smoke-laden air is purified with breezes from the outer world; the bottles carried away and everything put in order. Now bring on wife and Sherlock Holmes! The washing of the safe is inevitable; emphatically so if we concede that our burglarious friends may on occasion have been relegated to the kitchen, aproned and betowsled, with a clutter of dishes waiting in the pan.

The idea promises to have interesting ramifications. From now on the unscrupulous gentleman who lives by his wits will take pains to wipe his pen after forging a check, and the absconding bank cashier will have the vaults thoroughly whitewashed before he leaves, thus throwing the detectives completely off the track.—New York Evening Sun.

HEROISM AT ITS BEST IN THE PRESENT WAR

Belgian Author Says Heroes of the Ancients Performed No Deeds Like Soldiers in the Great War

Maurice Maeterlinck, in an article in the London Daily Mail, contrasts the heorism displayed in the present war with that of previous conflicts, saying that "one of the consoling surprises of this war is the unlooked for and, so to speak, universal heroism which it has revealed among all the nations taking part in it."

"We realise with amazement," he continues, "that until to-day we had but an incomplete and inaccurate idea of man's courage. We looked upon it as an exceptional virtue and one which is the more admired as being also the rarer the farther we go back in history."

Of Homer's heroes M. Maeterlinck says:—

"These models of antiquity, the first professors, the first masters of bravery, were not really very brave. They have a wholesome dread of being hit or wounded and an ingenuous and manifest fear of death. Their mighty conflicts are declamatory and decorative, but not so very bloody; they inflict more noise than pain upon their adversaries; they deliver many more words than blows.

"Their defensive weapons — and this is characteristic—are greatly superior to their arms of offence; and death is an unusual, unforseen and almost indecorous event which throws the ranks into disorder and most often puts a stop to the combat or provokes a headlong flight that seems quite natural. This kind of courage is that of all antiquity more or less."

Courage is Different To-day

In the great wars of the Empire M. Maeterlinck sees a courage which begins to resemble that of the present day but with notable differences. The troops engaged were solely professionals, and never, as to-day, embracing every man between the ages of 19 and 50 capable of bearing arms.

"Again, and above all," he continues, "every war was reduced to two or more pitched battles, that is to say, two or three culminating moments; tremendous efforts, but efforts of a few hours or a day at most, toward which the combatants directed all the vigor and all the heroism accumulated during long weeks or months of preparation and waiting. Afterward, whether the result was victory or defeat, the fighting was over; relaxation, respite and rest followed; men went back to their homes.

"Nowadays everything is changed, and death itself is no longer what it was. Formerly you looked it in the face—you knew whence it came and who sent it to you. It had a dreadful aspect, but one that remained human. At present, to all these horrors, it adds the great intolerable fear of mystery. It is always ready, always on the watch, everywhere present, scattered, intangible and dense, stealthy and cowardly, diffuse, all encompassing, innumerous, looming at every point of the horizon, rising from the waters and falling from the skies, indefatigable, inevitable, filling the whole whole of space and time for days, weeks and months without a minute's lull, without a second's intermission. Men live, move and sleep in the meshes of its fatal web. They know that the least step to the right or left, a head bowed or lifted, a body bent or upright, is seen by its eyes and draws its thunder.

Heroism At its Best

"Hitherto we had no example of this preponderance of the destructive forces. We should never have believed that man's nerves could resist so great a trial. The nerves of the bravest man are tempered to face death for the space of a second, but not to live in the hourly expectation of death and nothing else. And so, at the very moment when man appeared most exhausted and enervated by the comforts and vices of civilization, at the moment when he was happiest and therefore most selfish, when, possessing the minimum of faith and vainly seeking a new ideal, he seemed least capable of sacrificing himself for an idea of any kind, he finds himself suddenly confronted with an unprecedented danger, which he is almost certain that the most heroic nations of history would not have faced nor even have dreamed of facing; whereas he does not even dream that it is possible to do aught but face it.

"It is not man's life that is at stake, but the idea which he forms of the honor, the happiness and the duties of his life. To save his life he had but to submit to the enemy; the invader would not have exterminated him. We are not therefore speaking of a heroism that would be but the last resource of despair. No, it is heroism freely donned, hailed deliberately and unanimously, heroism on behalf of an idea and a sentiment; in other words, heroism in its clearest, purest and most virginal form, a disinterested and whole hearted sacrifice for that which men regard as their duty to themselves, to their kith and kin, to mankind and to the future."

PRISONERS' LETTERS VIA SWITZERLAND

Great Clearing House For Mail For Captured Soldiers of All Belligerent Nations in All Warring Countries

It must have puzzled many people to know how the prisoner of War receives communications in the shape of letters, parcels, and money from his relatives at home, and by what means he is able to send news of himself to his friends while he is in the prisoners' camp of the enemy.

The Swiss Government has taken upon itself gratuitously the generous and humane work of acting as intermediary for enabling prisoners of war to receive letters, postcards, and small parcels from their relatives, and thus keep in touch with them.

The work is carried out by a military postal department, aided by a few specially qualified bi-lingual sorters. The French and German Government authorities do not sort any of the prisoners of war correspondence with their relatives. Letters are collected into bundles at Pontarlier and Frankfort respectively and forwarded to the office of the Berne "transit post." These letters have previously passed through the hands of the camp commandant and are stamped "Approved." Similarly, letters addressed to the prisoner bear the Censor's stamp from the place of origin. The letters are all read again on their arrival at destination before being delivered.

The method of dealing with the transfer of money to prisoners of war is a rather more elaborate affair. The money orders are issued on large sized distinctive colored cards. They are not put in envelopes, but are simply addressed to the "transit post" at Berne, where they are replaced by a Swiss order for payment on a yellow card, which is honored by the postal authorities of both France and Germany. The work of transferring the details from the French or German original order to the neutral Swiss order is done by girl clerks. In four months no fewer than 221,687 money orders, representing 3,376,956 francs, passed through the Berne "transit post" to French prisoners in Germany, and 61,045 money orders, representing 1,195,614 francs, to German prisoners in France.

The Swiss Government extended the same facilities for the transfer of money to Russian prisoners in Austro-Hungary and to the Austro-Hungarian prisoners in Russia.

The neutral Swiss order has to be returned to Berne, so that a settlement of the sums paid out to prisoners of the respective Governments may be made, and in this way it has often been the means of discovering whether a "missing" is alive or dead.

ITALY AS WORLD POWER

Italy has 4,060,000 soldiers of all classes. Of this total 1,060,000 are first class fighting men, splendidly equipped; the other 3,000,000 are well trained reserves.

In addition, Italy has a strong navy, consisting of eighteen battleships, thirty-one cruisers, forty-five destroyers and twenty-two submarines.

Service in the Italian army or navy is compulsory and universal. The total period is nineteen years, beginning at the age of twenty.

Among the crack regiments are the Bersaglieri, the sharpshooters of the Italian army. Light, active soldiers, wearing a picturesque but serviceable dark green uniform, and hats with dark plumes of cocks' feathers, they have always been to the front, alike in the Crimea and in the struggles that resulted in Italian unity.

There are over 46,000 Bersaglieri in the regular army. Akin to them are the Alpini, a force of mountaineer sharpshooters, organized since 1876, whose chief duty is to defend the mountain passes leading to Italy.

A magnificent shot and keen soldier, King Emmanuel has done much towards bringing the Italian army up to its present tate of perfection. The motto of his great house is firmly graven on his heart, and over and over again he has shown that "Fear and Savoy never meet."

His Majesty has many sympathies with Russia and Montenegro. His wife, who has taken a prominent part in organizing voluntary ambulance and hospital workers for the front, is a daughter of Nicholas, King of Montenegro.

About four years previous to his ascending the throne, King Emmanuel fell in love with Princess Helen of Montenegro while on a visit to Russia, and the marriage took place in October, 1896.

The present population of Italy is nearly 36,000,000. Its area is 110,659 square miles, 10,000 square miles less than Great Britain. Included in Italy's population are nearly 11,000 Germans and 12,000 Austrians. The number of Italians abroad has been estimated at about 5,555,000.

The Roman Catholic Church is nominally the ruling State religion of Italy, but the power of the church and clergy is subordinated to the civil government, and there is freedom of worship to the adherents of all recognised religions. Of the total population nearly 32,000,000 are Roman Catholics.

A GERMAN SPY IN RED CROSS

The staff correspondent of the New York Times tells a striking story from the American orderlies with the Red Cross ambulances in the war zone of northern France. The tale centred in the fantastic arrest of a German spy. He says, as a preamble, that both the First Orderly and Trevelyan were Somebodies. It was apparent. It was their caste that attracted them to each other. The First Orderly was a prominent figure in the Paris American colony. He knew the best people on both sides of the Atlantic. Now he was an orderly on an ambulance because he wanted to see some of the war. He wanted to do something in the war. There were many like him — neutrals in the ranks of the Red Cross.

The detachment of the Royal Medical Corps to which Trevelyan belonged arrived late one night and were billeted in a barn. The American corps were in the school house, sleeping in straw on the wood floor. There was a small evacuation hospital where the wounded from the field hospitals were patched up a little before we took them for a long ambulance haul.

Trevelyan as only an orderly. The American corps found this "quaint," as Trevelyan himself would have said. For the orderly of the medical corps corresponds to the "ranker" of the army. In this war, at a time when officers were the crying demand, the gentlemen rankers had almost disappeared.

He showed a disposition to chum with us. He gravitated more particularly to the First Orderly, who reported to the chauffeur of the second 'bus that Trevelyan had a comprehensive knowledge of the war; that he had also a keen knowledge of medicine and surgery, in which the First Orderly had himself dabbled.

They discussed the value of the war in several branches of surgery. The chauffeur of the second 'bus heard Trevelyan expounding to the First Orderly on the precious knowledge derived by the hospital surgeons in Paris and London from the great numbers of thigh fractures coming in, and how amputations were becoming always fewer. The men walked again, though one leg might be shorter.

A CHAP ONE LIKED.

Trevelyan in his well-fitting khaki uniform seemed cast from the same mold as hundreds of clean-built Englishmen. He had a lean face and blonde hair. His accent was faultlessly upper class. The letter "g" did not occur as a terminating consonant in his conversation. The adjective "rippin" or "rotten" conveyed his sentiments one way or the other. His hand clasp was firm, his eye direct and blue. He was a chap you liked.

At our midday meal, which was served apart for the American contingent, the First Orderly asked the corps what they thought of Trevelyan.

"I've lived three years in England," said the chauffeur of the second 'bus, "and this fellow seems to have far less 'side' than most of his class."

The First Orderly explained that this was because Trevelyan had become cosmopolitan. He had travelled a lot, spoke French and Spanish, and understood Italian, whereas most Englishmen scorned to learn any "foreign" tongue.

"Why isn't he in a regiment—he's as superior?" wondered the second chauffeur. The First Orderly maintained that there was some good reason, perhaps family trouble, why his new friend was just a common orderly like himself.

At coffee next morning our squad commander, after his customary talk with the fat Major, admonished us to have little to say concerning our affairs; talk, he said, was a useless adjunct to war.

MIGHT BE ANYTHING.

Subsequent conversations revealed that Trevelyan was well acquainted with prominent American families and their residences in detail, so he had told the First Orderly and the corps jeshed the latter as to whether he, the mystery, had said why he was in the ranks. The First Orderly said:

"He may be anything from an Honourable to a Duke," he said, "but I don't like to ask, for you know how Englishmen are about those things. I've found, though, that he did the Vatican and Medici collections only a year ago with some friends of mine, and I'm going to sound them about him some time."

There were sharp engagements that afternoon and the corps was kept busy. At nightfall the booming of the artillery was louder and nearer, especially on the left, where the French heavy artillery had come up the day before to support the British line. The ambulance corps was ordered to prepare for night work. They snatched plates of soup and beans, and sat on the 'buses, waiting.

At 8 o'clock a shell screamed over the line of cars, then another, and two more.

"They've got the range on us," the fat Major said, "we'll have to clear out."

Eighteen shells passed overhead before the equipment and the few remaining wounded got away and struck the road to the main base at B——.

The American squad was billeted that night in the freight station, dropping asleep as they sank into the straw on the floor.

At midnight an English Colonel's orderly entered and called the squad commander. They went out together; then the squad commander returned for the orderly of the first 'bus. The chauffeur of the second 'bus was awakened when they returned after several hours. Through the gloom the squad commander was groping his way to his place. The First Orderly half stumbled down in the straw. They said nothing.

It was explained in the morning at coffee. "Trevelyan" was shot at sunrise. He was a German spy.

A Great Musical Artist Well Known in City Joins Celestial Choir

Rose D'Erina, the noted musical artist, died in St. Paul, Minnesota, last week. The late Mrs. Vontom, as she was known in private life, is well known to Peterborough people. She not only has been a frequent visitor, but a temporary resident of Peterborough, for some time, with her husband, staying for a considerable period at St. Joseph's Hospital in this city. While here she presented the statue of St. Joseph, which adorns the western facade of the hospital building.

The name Rose D'Erina, familiar to musical lovers on two continents, a name given to the talented Irish singer by Empress Eugenie of France, was sad and regrettfully spoken when the word was passed that Rosa D'Erina, whose maiden name was Rosa O'Toole, had passed to rest.

Mrs. G. R. Vontom was born in County Armagh, Ireland, 68 years ago, made her musical studies in Ireland and to the continent, and was the first great artist to sing in the Twin Cities, being brought to St. Paul by Bishop Grace and later by Archbishop Ireland, says the Irish Standard. At that time Rose D'Erina gave a concert in Minneapolis; that was 40 years ago. In 1898 she built a chapel on St. Joseph's Island, in the St. Mary's River, Canada, where she had her country home. Her friends in the Twin Cities will recall the account of the dedication of this chapel some months ago. On the occasion of the dedication she was honoured with a personal letter and the blessing of the late Pope Pius X.

She was the professional organist of the Catholic cathedral at Armagh, Ireland, before she was 12 years of age, and at 14 she was organist of the Carmelite church in Dublin. Her operatic debut was made in Paris, and on going to London she immediately sprang into popularity, and was honoured by a special command to sing at Marlborough House before the King and Queen, being appointed vocalist and organist to the latter. In Ireland the people called her "Rosheen na nan," the Rose of the Songs.

Peterboro' Knights of Columbus at Cobourg on Sunday

Over fifty members of Peterborough Council of the Knights of Columbus motored to Cobourg yesterday morning, arriving in time for the 10 o'clock mass, which they attended with other members from Port Hope, Cobourg and Oshawa. Before his sermon on the Gospel of the day, Monsignor Murray welcomed the visitors, remarking that it was the first occasion on which the Knights of Columbus had attended St. Michael's Church in a body.

In the afternoon a meeting was held in the C.M.B.A. rooms at which it was announced that an auxiliary Council may be established in Cobourg in the near future. Among those present were Grand Knight Fred Garden, Rev. Father O'Sullivan of Port Hope, J. B. McColl of Cobourg, M. J. O'Brien of Peterborough, Messrs. Maher, O'Neill, Bulger, Butler, Flemming, Rooney, Casey, Hogan Cauley and others of the Cobourg.

The proposal to form an auxiliary Council in Cobourg was received with enthusiasm. Peterborough Council has been for years drawing members from the lake town, and it is now felt that the Cobourg members should have their own quarters and become at least an auxiliary Council with the ultimate object of having a purely Cobourg Council.

The question will be discussed later at greater length. Cobourg members are heartily in accord with the idea, which will likely be gradually materialized. Efforts will also be made to bring the various members of the Peterborough Council into closer relations.

While the visitors lunched at various hotels, those who registered at the Balmoore found excellent service and cuisine at this house under its new management

Supply New Rifles For the Allies

New American military rifles have been perfected and the delivery of them to the allies soon will begin. When the war started there was no army rifle to be had in the United States from private companies, for they came under the sporting goods category. The United States arsenals were turning out the Springfield rifle, and although there is no express prohibition against this model being copied the government was not aiding in that process and it tactily was understood that such a procedure was not desired.

Most of the rifles to be had of the manufacturers here were of the lever variety, while the buyers for the allies were seeking one with bolt action similar to the Springfield.

One company with extensive works in Connecticut obtained a contract for 400,000 rifles for the allies, to be delivered as early this summer as possible. It is understood that the shipment of the weapons soon will begin. The new rifle resembles in some ways the Springfield model, but is simpler in construction and is well adapted for the rigors of campaigning.

Another American military rifle recently has been introduced by the Savage Arms Company. It is known they are considered effective by the European buyers. The few which have been inspected have been turned out largely by hand, but it is understood machinery for making them is ready and that the company is about to execute contracts. This weapon also resembles the Springfield type, and it is said to be capable of sending a bullet with greater velocity than does the present army rifle of the United States.

HEROIC EXPLOITS IN SECOND BATTLE IN THE DEFENCE OF YPRES

There were many heroic exploits due to attacks by gas in the second battle of Ypres.

During the night of the 31st the Lancashire Fusiliers and Essex held a line which was suddenly enveloped in clouds of this poison. The Lancashire Fusiliers suffered most, although some of the Essex battalion were also incapacitated. A man of the former regiment, named Lynn, was in charge of a machine-gun. When he saw the thick mass of vapour drifting towards his trench he jumped on the parapet without a respirator and played his machine-gun on the gas and the German trenches behind.

The gas swept over the Fusiliers, enveloping Lynn, who still worked his gun, although coughing and hardly able to see. The Germans were advancing cautiously beyond the vapour, and he poured a steady fire into them, still crouching on the top of the parapet in an exposed position. They fell back, and when a second half-hearted attempt was made later, Lynn again turned his gun against them, and they failed again.

In consequence of the presence of mind shown by our troops, the Germans never profited by their gas attacks. Many men, driven out by the fumes, charged back through them again, and reoccupied the trench after it had been vacated.

The height of the wall of gas varied, but it appears to have been at least seven feet above the ground. Sergeant W. Cooke, of the Dublins, had a curious experience. He was hidden on the roof of a farmhouse, sniping Germans with great success, when the gas swept over the ground below. He was untouched. Later, he came to earth, and the remaining fuses made him dizzy.

"It's not healthy down here," said Sergeant Cooke, and he climbed back on the roof, where he was constantly under fire.

During his vigil at this post Cooke killed a patrol of ten Germans who were crawling down a trench, shooting one after the other. Then he jumped down, ran along the trench, and captured the lieutenant in charge, bringing him back with his hands in the air and his face purple with rage.

The gas was felt for a considerable distance behind the front trenches. One brigadier came out of his dug-out long after a gas attack, and the fumes affected him. A number of men who passed through the gas zone after the vapour had partially dissipated suffered no ill effects at the time, but a day or two afterwards, went into hospital with a temperature of 103.

Commanding officers and surgeons alike worked hard under fire to revive the victims of gas. Captain Chipp of the 6th Middlesex, found about twelve men of his company gassed during the bombardment on the morning of the 25th. He went to each in turn and succeeded in reviving them with handkerchief soaked in water. Lieutenant James, the doctor attached to the 2nd Seaforths (a civilian who served with the regiment in South Africa), although suffering from the gas himself, worked throughout May 2nd, the day his battalion suffered, all the next day, and until the morning of the 4th, when he collapsed, and was put in ambulance with some of his own patients.

Charged Through Gas.

Charges through gas described by eye-witness: The 7th Argyle and Sutherlands, sent to retake a trench cleared by gas, dashed headlong through the fog and came to the goal unhurt. In the language of one officer, "they simply sidestepped the gas." The brigadier who afterwards went through "the thin of the gas" in order to be near his men, was very ill, but refused to go back.

It was difficult to get the men to abandon trenches even when necessary. The 5th Welsh Fusiliers were exposed to a galling fire from two sides, but their commanding officer kept sending back cheery messages something like this:

"Our right is being turned, but we are quite comfortable." And later:

"I have two machine-guns in my rear, but we can hold on without trouble. Think it better to wait until dark.

When the remnants of this gallant battalion fell back on the second Verloenhock line it had few surviving officers unhurt and no non-commissioned officers. The fragments of companies were mostly commanded by lieutenants.

Here is the story of the Durham miners who helped the Canadians on the Grafenstafel ridge. They were unused to trench work and by no means seasoned troops, yet when called on in the middle of the night of April 24th to relieve the Winnipeg Rifles they performed a difficult task with the steadiness of veterans.

They were the 8th Durham Light Infantry, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Turnbull, who is known as "the miners' friend." They were sent to Verloenhoek at 11 p.m. and attached to a regular brigade, which made the attack to relieve the increasing pressure on this portion of the salient. The enemy were only 300 yards away.

At half past twelve the next afternoon they were heavily bombarded with gas shells. Two companies were in the trenches, and the others in reserve when, at two o'clock, they were attacked by a German force at least twice their own strength. They held on until 7 p.m. when they retired in an easterly direction. One Company had lost all but one officer and fifty men. Yet they fell back in perfect order, some of the men even grumbling that they were not allowed to stay.

The Germans did not come on at once, but at four o'clock next morning began smashing the two supporting companies, attempting an enveloping movement, which made another temporary retirement necessary. When the battalion arrived back next day it had lost heavily. Other battalions of the Durhams Territorials) were sent under Lieutenant-Col. Bridgeford of the Shropshires, to hold the line Fresenburg-Zonnebeke on the morning of the 26th, and fought with great tenacity.

The Brave Territorials.

Equally gallant was the work of certain Northumberland Territorial battalions during the bombardment of the 26th-27th. They attacked St. Julien on the afternoon of the 26th, and, after advancing steadily, isolated parties of the 26th Batalion got 250 yards forward of the first line, and occupied some small trenches which the enemy had abandoned. These they held until dusk, when they retired to the first line. Brigadier-General Riddell who was in command of these operations, was killed about half-past three. He was on his way to a farmhouse in order to get in closer touch with his men, and while walking along an exposed road, was hit by a rifle bullet.

When one battalion of the King's Own was blown from its trenches and Lieutenant-Colonel Martin, the commanding officer, had been killed, Captain Weatherhead, the Adjutant, collected a few survivors—"not more than ten," said one of them — and started back through the blinding smoke to the support trenches in the hope of driving the Germans out of the firing line. They got within thirty yards, when the Adjutant and 8 men were killed by a gas shell. The fumes of which nearly suffocated the others.

A non-commissioned officer of the Kings Own worked a machine-gun, after the other men with him had been killed, till the gun was useless. Before the survivors of this Battalion fell back into their support trenches, 600 yards behind the firing line, they were continually digging out comrades from the piles of debris thrown up by explosive shells. They were black as sweeps, and their uniforms were in tatters.

One German attack was frustrated by a battalion of Northumberland Fusiliers. The bombardment had been intensified—the usual prelude to a bayonet attempt—and when it suddenly ceased, to allow the infantry to come on, our waiting reserves were rushed into the weakened first line.

"You should have seen the Northumberland Fusiliers come tumbling into the trenches," said the eye-witness, "turning their machine-guns on the enemy almost at the same moment, and cutting great swaths in their ranks." The disordered column turned tail and sought cover again."

Thus we held what was seemingly an impossible line day after day, while men were being continually blown out of trenches and dying in hundreds on all sides.

Shell Trap Farm.

"Shell-trap Farm" was the pivot of some of the most desperate hand-to-hand fighting, which showed that whenever our men had a chance of meeting their foes they were always in the ascendancy. The farm was a group of old Flemish buildings—now mere piles of brick—in the north-eastern part of the salient. It was deluged with shells daily until the ground was carpeted with fragments of metal, and the Germans made frequent dashes to establish machine-gun parties in the shelter of the ruins.

During one frenzied burst of shelling it was reported that the enemy had gained a trench near the farm. A company of the 2nd Essex was ordered to dislodge them. Up they came at the double, "dodging the shells," as one officer told me, "and, disregarding every rule of warfare," and with heads down, dashed through the impenetrable smoke straight into the trench, bayonetting every man there. Then men of the London Rifle Brigade, who watched the charge, stood up in their trenches and cheered as the men of Essex came back.

"Shell-trap Farm" was held by us that day, but taken by the Germans at night. Two platoons of the 1st East Lancashires went forward early next morning and retook it with the bayonet. The Germans took it back that night. Then the South Lancashires charged the farm, swept like a whirlwind through the shelters and improvised dug-outs, and cleared it of Germans. We still hold it. Most ground about is choked with the bodies of British and German soldiers. The enemy has not dared to attack since.

While the 4th East Yorks (Territorials) were being heavily shelled, and it appeared that the entire battalion would be wiped out, Captain Easton, although wounded three times, staggered up and down the trench encouraging the men, and refusing to go to a dressing station.

Two wounded men of a Rifle Brigade Battalion appeared at a brigade headquarters and said that very few were left in their trenches. Captain Railston, the only surviving officer, would not abandon his position.

"I'm damned if I retire," he said, just as a "Ypres express" shell exploded in front of the half-wrecked trench, burying him in the debris.

His men dug him out. A moment later he was buried again by another explosion. Again his men dug him out, this time wounded. Then the German guns began destroying the traverses one by one. Finally only three men and Captain Railston were left alive. The men refused to leave him, and ran up and down the trench stumbling over sandbags and corpses, firing first at one point and then another, and "bluffing" the German infantry so that they did not dare attack. Finally two companies of the York and Lancasters came up and reinforced the position.

117 Casualties by Shell Fire.

The London Rifle Brigade lost 117 men from shelling in one day while their left rested on Fortuin. That night a German party was seen from their trenches. The Londoners rushed their machine-guns forward and wiped them out.

A patrol of the Monmouths (Territorials) occupied a farmhouse in the north-east quarter of the salient, and was cut off by shell fire. It was vital that the position should be held, although the enemy were pressing forward repeatedly. One man swam the moat surrounding the farm in order to bring water to his comrades. The brigadier sent a message that he 'hoped they would stick," and a bandolier was tossed across the moat to the waiting despatch rider, bearing a scrap of paper with the words, "Of course we'll stick." They did—to the last man.

One trench near Fresenburg was defended until every man in it was killed. When fresh troops reoccupied it the trench was so full of corpses that the commanding officer decided to turn it into a grave. It was filled to a few rough wooden crosses stuck in the earth, and a new trench dug a few yards behind.

While we held the greater salient communication with certain areas was maintained wholly by despatch riders. There were four orderlies to each battalion in the trenches, and these men had to make perilous four-mile journeys at night under fire. Many were killed. I was told of one orderly who, when wounded, fell from his motor-cycle and handed his message to a soldier. "Get it through," he said, "I'm done."

Foresters and Woodmen at United Church Service

Court Chemong No. 530, I.O.F. and Sherwood Forest Camp, No. 50, W. O. W. Attended Knox Church Last Evening—Addressed by the Pastor.

"Tis the honest grip of comradeship
Makes a fellow take heart again;
'Tis a word of cheer, from a friend so near
Makes him feel life's not in vain.
When the way is dark and the luckless bark,
Is drifting from safety's strand,
Why, God bless the man or the woman who can,
Hold to us a helping hand."

The congregation at Knox Presbyterian Church was considerably augmented last evening by the presence of the visiting members of Court Chemong, No. 530, I.O.F., and Sherwood Forest Camp, No. 50, W.O.W., who attended the united Church services o fthe two societies there. They were addressed by Rev. Jas. A. Mackenzie, Pastor of Knox Church.

Salvation Army Band.

The parade was an imposing one, the members of both societies turning out in large numbers. They met at Woodmen Hall at 6 p.m., and were marshalled to the Church by Bro. J. W. Byers and Sov. E. J. Waterman, headed by the Salvation Army Temple Band. The route of the march was down George to Charlotte, west on Charlotte to Rubidge, and south on Rubidge to Knox Church. After the service they were again met by the Temple Band and escorted to their hall. The committees on arrangements were: Court Chemong—I. O. F., Bro. D. Wallace, C. R., Bro. G. W. Powell, F.S., and Bro. J. W. Byers, Chairman and Marshall; and, for Sherwood Forest Camp, W O. W.—Sov. C. J. Hicks, C.C., Sov. E. J. Waterman, Clerk and Marshall, and Sov. A. Graham, Chairman.

The Text.

Rev. Jas A. Mackenzie, after extending a hearty welcome to the visiting societies, announced his text as being verse 17, in the 2nd Chapter of the First Epistle General of Peter: "Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the King."

For his sermon, the speaker changed the order of the duties, thus: Love the brotherhood. Honour the King. Honour all men. Fear God. St. Peter told those who comprised these organizations to follow the above duties. The speaker took occasion to emphasise the observance of them, which would enrich any organization in this world. "This was one of the elements on which Jesus Christ builded the foundation for His Church. He builded it on fraternity."

Love the Brotherhood.

"The strength of the society," continued Mr. Mackenzie, does not depend upon the members. There must be a coordinating force. The strength of anything does not descend entirely upon the numbers or supporters. It depends on the spirit in it. The same is true of the Church. Its power is in its spiritual usefulness. The same is true of your society. It should be a spirit of friendship. "Love the Brotherhood." It is this spirit which prompts you to visit your sick brethren, and to look after payment of sick benefits to him. If this spirit dwells within you, you will accomplish many friendly acts—duties not laid down particularly in your rules. Bring with you the uplifting passion of sympathy. That is what the world is looking for to-day.

Honour the King.

"Honour the King." These are days when great demands are being made upon patriotism. The love of country is one of the uplifting forces of to-day. Your societies are going to be enriched by those who live for their country. What was known as patriotism a year ago cannot be considered patriotism to-day. These are days when sacrifices for the safety of our country are in evidence on every side. Is it meet that these days we should give way to lesser issues? I have no quarrel with politics, socialism, capitalist or labourer, for as capitalist or labourer we to-day look to the same place for protection. It is not meet that we should to-day give way to lesser issues. Our patriotism to-dey may demand that we keep silent, that we may endure in silence what we have endured for years.

The world is enriched by those men who have lived for it. If your organisation is to be blessed as it may, and enriched, it means that you must be prepared to live for your country. There are those, too, who may be called upon to die for it. I note upon your arm a white ribbon, in honour of your members who have died fighting for the cause of the Empire. Your society is enriched for those who have died, for they lived for their country. It is a greater thing to say to-day: "I am a Woodman" or "I am a Forester" than it was a year ago, because some of your number have given up their lives for their country.

Honour All Men.

But patriotism is not enough. We must honour all men. We are not only citizens of this country, but of the Empire. We are imperfect unless we have the spirit that includes not only our own community and country, but every community in the world.

I have here a clipping of interest from the London Times: "In the modern world nations have tried to think of their nationality as the chief treasure to be prided by, and we, ourselves, have fallen into that error. We need, some years ago, to talk of our Anglo-Saxon race as if it were something outside Europe and superior to it.

It was ignorant and vulgar and provincial of us; but now we are cured of that folly by a nation which is showing us what may come of it. The war has made us European again and we are fighting for Europe against a people who have fallen into our error far more resolutely than we ever fell into it. For the Germans, because of their struggle to protect Germany against Napoleon, are filled with such an overwhelming sense of their own nationality that they have lost the sense of Europe, and this more than vast ambition, is the cause of their present conduct."

Could there be any greater indictment passed upon any nation than this? We need that vision of the world to keep us true.

Fear God.

And, more than that, fear God. Have religion. We cannot succeed without it. Where can you find the true discretions for your patriotism, if not in the word of God? God's spirit must be in our patriotism if it is to be kept within bounds. We can take His words: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel."

Wore White Band.

The visiting brethren each wore a small white band on one arm in honour of those of their societies who had given up their lives on the battlefields of Europe, and for those who were fighting there at present.

There was special music by the choir, including a solo by Mr. John Anderson and a quartette by Misses Williamson and Penrose and Messrs. Smith and Humpage.

A. Helson Is Answering To Three Charges

Civic Employee is in Trouble—Accussed of Having Had Improper Relations With Very Young Girls

Alfred Helson appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning for a preliminary hearing on three very serious charges. Two were for having carnal relations with girls under the ages of fourteen years, and the third was one of seduction, the girl in this case being over the age of 14 years and under the age of 16 years.

Helson, who is a man of about 50 years of age, has been employed at the incinerator where he looked after the burning of the refuse. According to the story of one of the little girls, in the Police Court this morning, she went with the two others to the Canadian Canoe Company plant, which adjoins that of the incinerator property, on the afternoon of May 22 last, to get a baseball bat. They met Helson who persuaded them to go to an old building where the offence is alleged to have been committed. The little girl who gave her evidence this morning was not yet nine years of age. She was the youngest of the trio.

The evidence in full is not fit for publication. Helson has a wife and family and it is understood that at present his wife is very ill.

Mr. C. R. Widdifield acted for the accused this morning. In behalf of the prisoner he declined to elect. Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton conducted the case for the prosecution.

If counsel so desires it may be possible to have the trial at the present sessions of the Peace, before His Honour Judge Huycke, as the jurors have not yet been dismissed.

St. Paul's Choir Had Fine Outing

Annual Picnic Held at Chemong Saturday

St. Paul's Choir held their annual picnic on Saturday, and the fates, as usual, were kind, the weather being ideal. The party, numbering forty-five, drove in three large brakes to Chemong, where all kinds of pre-arranged and also unarranged sports were indulged in, including a game of baseball, under the direction of Mr. Maurice Park and Mr. Steer, the umpire coming in for the usual abuse. After a sumptuous repast, provided by the lady members of the choir, to which all did full justice, Mr. Allan said that every member of the choir regretted extremely to say farewell to two members—Mr. Dickson and Mr. McBride, the former leaving for Quebec and the latter for Ottawa.

Mr. Dickson had been in the choir ever since he (Mr. Allan) came to St. Paul's, and had proved a most faithful, useful and loyal member. Every one would miss him greatly. Their only consolation was that he was going to the Ross Rifle Co. to do his part towards defeating Germany.

He had much pleasure, on behalf of the choir, in presenting him with a gold pin as a remembrance and a small acknowledgment of his services. The gift carried with it their heartiest good wishes.

Mr. McBride, though only in the choir a few months, was popular with every member, and was as keenly interested in the success of the choir as if he had been in it for years. He hoped that any time either he or Mr. Dickson happened to be in Peterborough over a Sunday, they would come and occupy their former seats in the choir.

Mr. Dickson thanked Mr. Allan and the choir for the altogether unexpected token of their regard. He felt leaving the choir very much as he had been very happy with them all, but perhaps some day he might return to Peterborough, and, if so, they would certainly see him in the choir again.

A surprise was then sprung upon Mr. and Mrs. Allan, it being the twentieth anniversary of their wedding day. Mr. Oliver Steer, on behalf of the choir, presented Mrs. Allan with a beautiful Limoges china fern pot with fern complete, and knowing Mr. Allan's weakness for the "cup that cheers," Miss Jessie Garrow presented him with a very pretty china teapot. Both the gifts conveyed their best wishes for many more happy anniversaries. Mr. Allan expressed most sincere thanks for their good wishes and also for their beautiful gifts. Rev. Mr. Fogue added his good wishes for "many happy returns" to Mr. and Mrs. Allan, and also expressed his regret at the departure of Mr. Dickson and Mr. McBride, and wished them every success. He also thanked the choir for inviting him to come with them on such a glorious day. He had thoroughly enjoyed himself.

Cavalry Swam Isonzo River

ROME, June 9.—Stubborn fighting continues in the Friulian sector of the Austro-Italian battle line. The tricolour of Italy now waves from Caporetto, eight miles northwest of Tolmino, to Porto Buso, in the Gulf of Trieste. All along the line of the Isonzo the Italian artillery has beaten down the fire of the enemy. The Italians have succeeded in driving back the Austrians and establishing themselves at several points on the left bank of the Isonzo, where they are now entrenched. The most adaptable places for crossing in masses have been seized by the Italians preparatory to a general offensive.

Threatening Tolmino.

In the high valley and rough mountain ridges near Coporetto there has been intermittent fighting. For wo days the Italian guns have been pounding away at the Austrians, who have burrowed into cover on the opposite slope. Alert Italian snipers who crept forward far in advance of their artillery positions, have been worrying the enemy night and day. The Italians have gained ground which now enables them seriously to threaten Tolmino.

On the lower Isonzo the Italian cavalry have been given their chance and carried out some brilliant exploits. Two bodies of cavalry, operating from different points, crossed the Isonzo by swimming, and gaining the east bank, rode far into the enemy's territory to reconnoitre his positions on the river, quickly spanned by pontoon bridges, and a strong force of infantry crossed in the wake of the amphibious horsemen. Reinforcements of the enemy are reported. His resistance in this sector seems to be well organized. The Austrians, however, show no inclination to abandon their defensive for an offensive.

Guard Against Surprise.

The Italians in their operations are proceeding carefully, so as to guard against a surprise. Once Tolmino falls before the forces of Cadorna, the Italians will be in possession of the important railway running through the middle of the valley of the Isonzo south to Corisia and Trieste. Tolmino alone excepted, the whole middle and lower regions of the Isonzo are actually in possession of the Italian troops along a front of about 40 miles.

In the northern section of operations the guns are still having it all to themselves, the Italian gunners displaying great tenacity and courage. The high plain of Lavarone is one, fort, comprising the bulwark of Roveretto. The Austrian artillerymen are well aware of its importance, and are exhibiting more obstinacy and determination than hitherto. It appears that fresh guns and men have been flung in the struggle here, and also at Folgaria, still closer to Roveretto.

On the confines of Monte Nero, to the northwest of Tolmino, the Italians for days have been exercising considerable pressure on the enemy. Here the Austrians, on some spurs, have taken full advantage of the ground, strongly entrenched behind barbed wire entanglements and long-range artillery. The enemy has been reinforced by a powerful ally in the shape of tempestuous and rainy weather. The Italian pressure on Tolmino has been exercised chiefly from two points on the north, descending from Monte Nero. They are slowly driving the Austrians before them on the west by the passage of the Isonzo.

The Italians are able to threaten the Austrian communications, Cadorne's armies being skilfully handled, and shortly the enemy will have to run or make a serious effort to break through the enveloping wall of Italian steel.

What Austrians Claim.

Vienna, June 8.—The following official statement was issued tonight:

"In the Italian coastal district the enemy apparently is preparing a general attck against our positions on the Isonzo River. In his isolated attacks before Gradisca and Grado he has been repulsed with heavy losses.

Prisoners Were Taken to Kingston

LINDSAY, June 14—The two suspects, Corp. Graum and Corp. Gross, were taken to Kingston Saturday morning under guard. There has been no charge laid definitely against either men, but their actions denoted something which, in the eye of Major Anderson, meant that something was radically wrong, and to drive away this mist which surrounds their military horizon, deemed it expeditious that they pay a visit to headquarters.

It has been rumoured that Corp. Graum had incriminating letters upon him, which would form the connecting link between him and the enemy of the Allies, but this is not corroborated, nor yet is denied point blank. The men evidently had some secret mission to perform, judging from their actions.

Graum, it is reported, paid several visits to Toronto in civilian clothes. This information was given out by a lady friend, with whom he kept company, when asked by her why he violated the military rules in regard to discarding his uniform, he replied that he got permission from his superior officer, and the lodge which he attended in Toronto called for all members appearing in plain clothes. He was an American born citizen, of German parents, and was engaged with the Hydro-Electric Company in Toronto previous to joining the company in Lindsay, and had a military training.

Little is known of Gross (or Groll), any more than the fact that he is a German.

Three privates—Hart, Beggs and Hayes, were under guard with the two prisoners. The latter were not handcuffed, which is customary under military regulations.

Troops Go Into Battle Often With Very Great Suddenness

It was as I had imagined it would be—we went into battle suddenly, almost without warning, writes "Rifleman" in the Montreal Standard. From a French farmhouse, in the lofts of which we had been billeted, we marched out in full kit, bound we knew not where. Even our officers were ignorant until, after seven or eight weary miles of travel over the hideously uncomfortable roads of France, an official in high authority met us, and we heard that we were for the trenches.

The roar of the great guns was in our ears, and frequently we caught the rattle of machine guns and rifle fire. We passed many graves beneath whose rude wood crosses rested British soldiers. We saw great mounds of earth on which were boards briefly stating 40 or 30 or 28 Germans were buried there. The huge holes that shells make were on every side, and among the remains of shattered houses English fighting men, worn and soiled by battle, were resting. These turned out as we marched, and examined us critically. Many "Good lucks!" were shouted to us, and we felt that the men of the trenches made us welcome.

At dusk we halted, footsore and tired, and some men of a kilted regiment gave us huge dixies of hot tea. This, with biscuits and marmalade, made our evening meal, and after a half hour's rest we marched on.

Now the noise of the firing was behind us and before us, and to the left and right we were in the midst of a sea of noise; the deafening, terrible noise of the great guns, and the sinister crackle of the smaller arms.

Under Fire.

Dusk had faded in darkness as we marched, in dead silence, along strange lanes, and across muddy fields, crossing wide trenches deep in water, by way of crazy, slippery plank-bridges. A drizzle, cold and penetrating, soaked us to the skin, and soon we were encased in a yellow covering of slimy clay. Suddenly, with a great hiss, a blue light flashed upward from our front, and along the ranks came the order. "Down!" We stopped and halted, but the enemy had seen us, and the music of many bullets sounded over our heads. For a minute we remained stooping, crouching from death. Then on again, slipping in the clay, stumbling into shell holes filled with water, slithering over the slippery bridges. The work was exhausting, and the tension of the imminence of danger made one breathe heavily. we crouched; always we prayed that the Germans would not play their machine guns on us. We were in the open, exposed and unprotected, and it was the first time we had been under fire.

But at last the tortuous journey ended; and we entered the trenches.

It was a pitch-black night, and everywhere there was darkness. We knew we were in the trenches by the whispered welcome given us by the Highland regiment whose dug-outs we were to share. We were housed with wonderful rapidity, and soon, in twos and threes, we were quartered in the waist-high plank houses, crouching on the wet flooring, listening to the pinging of the bullets and they heavy thuds the shots made as they crashed into stone or woodwork. Against the wall of the trench which stood by the dug-out door we had already placed our rifles with bayonets fixed and magazines charged and ready.

The rain was falling heavily now, and it was bitterly cold; soaked to the skin, I took my place behind the wall of earth and sandbags, facing the enemy's lines 250 yards away. Every minute or so the blue flares would spring into being and the ground between the fighting lines would be illumined by the weird, ghostlike light. The firing was incessant from the German lines; we did not waste ammunition. Silence absolute silence reigned among our lines: it was only at dawn next morning that I learned that fronting us, 250 yards ahead, was another British trench, the advance trench, from which our men returned the Germans' fire. The first night I could see nothing. And I was glad when it came to my turn to lie on the wet straw of the dug-out and fall into sleep, deep and dreamless, in spite of the incessant clatter of war around me.

In The Fighting Trenches.

In the morning, at dawn, I rose and surveyed the battlefield. The trenches! No picture in words or pencil, no camera effect would perfectly portray to those who have not seen them the fighting trenches.

Behind us, distant 20 yards, stretched a single row of shattered houses. Houses without roofs, and roofs minus half their supporting walls. Scarred and blackened by fire; smashed by shells, looted by the Germans, the ruins showed in a sickening fashion the horror of war. Such desolation cannot be imagined, it must be seen to be realised. The shattered houses of a thousand people—comfortable, home-loving, peaceful—stretched behind our lines, a fitting background to the picture we presented. Mother Earth herself had been battered and scarred to make the trenches just as the village houses had been shattered by the Germans to make France a hell. From the point of view of art the British trenches are ghastly, but in modern war art has ceased to find a place.

ELDER JOHNSTON'S FAREWELL SERMON

In delivering his farewell sermon last evening in Woodmen Hall, Elder F. W. Johnston presented a most interesting and important line of thought. Basing his remarks on Heb. 2: 1-3, where it says in verse 3, "How shall we escape if we neglect," he showed both scientifically and scripturally what it really means to neglect. Neglect of any kind, so Mr. Johnston said, whether it be in the natural or spiritual realm, will inevitably result in ruin and decay. If it be a garden it must needs run to waste. If it be our bodies it will naturally become weak and emaciated and the some is true of the mind. Only by incessant discipline and drill can either mind or body develop and get strong. Mr. Johnston also referred to the animals of Mammoth Cave. Because they have chosen to live in the darkness and absolutely refuse to dwell in the light their vision as a result has been completely destroyed. The same is true of fish who have lived in dark water, and have totally refused to live in the light. And so it is everywhere. The neglect of anything at all, no matter what it may be, will bring ruin and decay in every instance.

If this be true naturally, how much more is it true spiritually. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great a salvation?" Many a soul, so Mr. Johnston said, will be lost, not because they have openly rejected, but rather because they have repeatedly neglected. In this connection, Mr. Johnston spoke concerning the sin against the Holy Ghost. He showed how that a sinner who sits from time to time and listens to the preaching of God's word, feels the wooings of the Spirit, but continues to neglect, that man, he declared, will finally lose his desire. When this time arrives he has sinned away his day of grace, and the work of the Spirit is no longer effective.

Mr. Johnston ended up with an earnest appeal to all. He desired that not only those who have taken their stand for what he has been preaching might remain loyal, but that the many others who have shown their interest in listening might give their hearts to Christ and that finally they with others might be saved in the Kingdom.

Mr. Johnston and family will soon leave for Ottawa and before very long another is expected to take his place here.

TURNBULLS

Fitting Memorial to The Late Corp. Carpenter at St. Luke's

Large Congregation, Including Boy Scouts and Members of Orange Lodge Attend—Reference to Christian Life of Deceased Soldier

Splendid testimony to the high esteem in which the late Corp. Herbert Carpenter, who was killed in France on May 23rd, was held by hosts of Peterborough friends, was fittingly shown in the large congregation of St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, last evening, when special reference was made to his exemplary Christian character, and to his devotion in the discharge of his duty on behalf of his King and country.

Seats in the middle aisle of the church were occupied by a number of Boy Scouts and members of L.O.L. No. 80, organizations with which the late Corp. Carpenter identified himself, and in which he took a very active part. He was a faithful member of St. Luke's congregation and the pew where he always sat was draped with the Union Jack. The pulpit, too, on this occasion, was covered with the flag of the nation.

The rector, Rev. Mr. White, spoke from the words of the texts, "He was a good man, full of the Holy Ghost and of faith," and "A good soldier of Jesus Christ." The foregoing eulogies, he said, were spoken of St. Barnabas. Barnabas was not the brilliant, eloquent man that St. Paul was but in his life was a complete absence of self. He delighted to take second place. He was ready at all times to render service, unselfishly and unostentatiously. He was full of the Holy Ghost. That was how God's work was very often done, an unknown army of consecrated men labouring for God, even against great obstacles. The reverend speaker referred to an eminent lawyer he had met during his stay in London, England, who, he said, reminded him more than anyone else he knew, of Barnabas. He was a great worker for God and ever since the war broke out he had bent all his energies to Britain's cause. Recently he gave up his practice and although over fifty, had enlisted for active service. In a letter received a short time ago, he spoke with admiration of the work of the Canadians at the front. He was a good man and a good soldier.

"Another splendid example of such an unselfish character," remarked the preacher, "was he whom we commemorate to-night, Herbert Edward Carpenter. He was born March 21st, 1895, and admitted into the church family at baptism in May of the same year. He was then marked with the sign of a soldier and servant of Jesus Christ. That sign was not marked in vain and it is with thankfulness we now remember him before God. Born of military stock on both sides, his ambition was to be a soldier and at the age of sixteen he wanted to join the Canadian regulars. He identified himself with the Scout movement and took a keen interest in its activities. The call always comes when we are doing our duty, and Herbert Carpenter being a good man, was ready when he call came. When asked why he wanted to go, he replied, "I want to go because it is my duty. I would rather die doing my duty than die at home." According to the testimony of a superior officer, he led a steady, God-fearing life, and in a letter written after the Battle of Langemarck, he said, 'By the grace of God I came through safely.' What better consolation can be offered the bereaved family and friends than found in the words, 'He was a good man and a good soldier.'

The music was especially appropriate for a soldier's memorial, the choir during the offertory singing the hymn "Holy Father in Thy Keeping" with solos by Mrs. A. A. Perrin and Mr. W. A. Greenslade.

MAKING MORE SHELLS HERE THAN IN ENGLAND

LONDON, June 14.—Gen. Bertram's statement concerning the ability of Canada to produce tenfold the amount of munitions being made at present is supported by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, who points out that Canada is already supplying more shells than all the British manufacturers grouped together, and yet this is not up to ten per cent. of her capacity output.

Mr. W. W. Butler, vice-president of the Canadian Car Company, who has postponed his return to Canada, has made a proposition to the War Office that the latter should, where necessary, purchase plants for the Canadian manufacturers and sell after the war if desired. This course has already been adopted in England. Mr. Butler has made an offer to the War Office to supply between two million and five million shells, delivery to begin in ninety days, at a minimum rate of 400,000 shells a month. The appointment of J. P. Morgan and Company by the Government as purchasing agents in America is criticised by Mr. Butler, who has encountered opposition from that firm to Canadian war contracts.

What's Doing in Civic Circles—Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

Flower Beds.

The small yard at the rear of the Utilities Commission office has been converted into a thing of beauty and joy forever. Flower boxes have been placed in the window and a small-sized lawn has been created.

King Edward Park.

The first band concert will likely be held in King Edward Park sometime next week. The new bandstand has been completed and a coat of paint applied. It is not known which of the local bands will have the honour of inflicting the park.

Committee Meeting.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council will meet this evening. It is altogether probable the committee will make a trip of inspection around the city with a view of ascertaining the number of street lights required.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

The extension of the term of office from one to two years of county councillors is favoured by the Middlesex County Council.

Paving Contracts Let.

The contract for paving some 12,000 yards of city streets in London was let to the Standard Paving Company, at the rates of $2.23 and $2.35, varying with the locations.

The firm offered to accept payment in the form of 5 per cent. city bonds on a 4½ per cent. basis instead of cash.

Clark-Spencer Case Reviewed By the Lawyers

Mr. G. N. Gordon and Mr. F. D. Kerr Present the Case in Its Various Salient Features —Goes to the Jury

AFTER FOUR DAYS' HEARING

The jury sittings of the County Court entered upon their second week this morning, His Honour Judge Huycke presiding. Before beginning their concluding addresses, Mr. Kerr and Mr. Gordon argued the questions which His Honour proposed to present to the jury for their consideration in deciding this case.

Mr. Gordon spoke first in reviewing the evidence before the jury, emphasizing the feature which he said merited a verdict in favour of Spencer Brothers.

Mr. Gordon said that the plaintiff had worked for a considerable time in the Spencer Mill and could not be regarded as a green hand. There was dangerous machinery in the mill, as there is in even the best manufacturing houses in Peterborough or elsewhere. The Spencer mill is one of those little mills which are necessary and occupy an important position throughout the country in providing lumber for dwellings, warehouses in various communities widely separated from cities and large towns.

They would be told shortly how a saw mill should be operated and guarded as a lawyer sees, but as to whether they accepted this information or not was a matter for the jury to decide for themselves. Lawyers were prone to give advice on all kinds of subjects, from preaching a sermon to running an airship or a saw mill.

Reviewing the evidence Mr. Gordon said that Clark was offered a job in the mill and before there was an intimation to Spencer Brothers that a law suit was pending. The feeling of Clark towards the Spencers was not of the same character as that of the defendants.

Repeating, Mr. Gordon said this was one of the little mills that are found in various parts of the country. It was not as well equipped as the large structures into which people sink their money.

Mr. Gordon proceeded to say that the Spencers were honest workmen of small means.

Mr. Kerr objected that there was no evidence regarding their means. Mr. Kerr understood that their means were not small.

Clark was instructed to fire up that day, and was not directed to work near the packer. Mr. Gordon said that it was shown that the plaintiff had done work he had no right to do, and was thus guilty of contributary negligence. There was no evidence to show that Clark had done any work even as he claimed of packing shingles.

His story of his foot slipping asserted in the early evidence of the case seemed to have passed over. He later stated that he was working on his knees and was reaching forward. Clark, himself, admitted that he "never thought" when he was thus leaning forward. No matter what improvements might have been made to the machinery the last act in the case of an accident remained with Clark and he said "I never thought."

Mr. Gordon stated that Spencer Brothers had done what the Factory Inspector had told them. Mr. Kerr objected that there had been no evidence on this point.

Judge Huycke remarked that the Inspector had been referred to in cross-examination.

Mr. Gordon continued that the Spencers had done all the Inspector had told him.

Mr. Kerr's Address.

Mr. Kerr opened his address by a review of some of the legal features of the case. Reasonable care might be exercised even in a moment of thoughtfulness or of some inattention. Mr. Kerr used an illustration of the embarrassing mishaps that occasionally happen when at dinner—one reaches for a glass or cup, and actually knocks it over.

Mr. Kerr recalled the evidence that going home at noon on Dec. 19th, Clark was told by Alfred Spencer to "fire up" in the afternoon, and to clean up the room in which the jointer was located. The most that Spencer could say in regard to this evidence was that he did not remember.

"I give Spencer credit that he did not make an absolute denial to that assertion."

Mr. Kerr said that the witness had been pressed by his counsel, who doubtless hoped that Spencer would be able to make a flat-footed denial. But all Spencer said was that he did not remember.

To emphasize his client's claim that he had business in the jointer room, Mr. Kerr recalled a conversation during that afternoon as related by Clark. Alf. Spencer was 'gumming' a saw in a nearby room. Clark happened in and observed: "You're taking a long time gumming that saw. Spencer replied that it was too cold. Mr. Kerr said that Spencer did not deny his part in this conversation. He was glad that he did not wilfully say it had not happened. Mr. Kerr remarked that he was of the opinion that there was a certain amount of perjury among witnesses, but Spencer had remembered that he was on oath before God.

Referring to the evidence of Ald. G. Walter Green, Mr. Kerr said that he was an employer of labour and had developed that bent of mind that says: "Oh, the fellow that is hurt is practically always to blame."

Some men would say that workmen were never to blame, that accidents were always the fault of the boss. Ald. Green had the "boss" prejudices and his experiences should not "cut any ice in this question".

Mr. Kerr repeated Clark's statement of the accident—"I never thought." By other illustrations he said that most men had mental lapses at times, when their perceptions are not of usual keenness. The accident was ever before the impression "there's that saw" recalled Clark's mind. There was a form of thoughtlessness aroused by the act, but it was such thoughtlessness that most Governments were making provision for in laws compensating workmen.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

EAST CITY AND CLASSICS WERE SATURDAY WINNERS

East City Beat Thistles 2 to 1 After the Finest Game of the Season---Great Pitching Duel Between Kirn and Huycke --Classics Had Easy Time With the Empires.

The Classics and East Citys were Saturday's winners in the City Baseball League and as a result are tied for the League leadership, with the other two teams a game behind. Classics had an easy win over the Empires. The latter were strengthened for the game and in the early stage had a three run lead, but blew up with all hands on board in the last few innings and were beaten 15 to 5.

The East City-Thistle game, however, was a great battle, East City winning the finest exhibition of the season by 2 to 1 in a struggle that was not settled until the last man was out. It was a genuine pitcher's battle, with Kirn doing the heaving for Dan McCabe's team, while the Thistles had Merry Huycke in action for the first time this season. Both twirlers pitched fine ball and honours were about even. Huycke was probably a little steadier and had better control, but on the other hand allowed seven hits, while Kirn was found only four times safely. Both had the batters pretty well sewed up all the way, and both were well supported, the players of both teams showing lots of pep. There were no sensational fielding plays, but nearly everything was taken care of in steady fashion and the result was a game that sent the fans away happy.

East City won because they bunched a pair of hits in two innings where they would do the most good, and because the Thistles threw away their scoring chances by bad base running. Twice they filled the bases with none out and got only one solitary run out of the combination.

East City scored their first run in the first innings with two gone. After Butcher and Hagerman had been thrown out by Jackson and Cavanah, Shaw hit safely and stole second. Lowe hit a wild pitch for a single and Shaw counted on the play.

The Thistles threw away a great chance in their half. Knapman, first up, singled through second. Cavanah was passed and Smyth singled, filling the bases. Huycke fanned, and when Hill drove an easy fly out to Lowe, Cavanah was doubled up. If he had held second, Knapman would have scored on the play.

From then on to the eighth the lid was on tight and neither team came near scoring. In that session the East City team increased their lead to two, when Kirn came through with a long double that scored Barrie.

The lead of two was enough to win on, although it did not look like it for a while in the Thistles' half of the eighth. Jackson, first up, was safe when his bunt to Kirn was mussed up. Then Kirn lost control and passed Knapman and Cavanah, filling the bases with none out. Smyth's sacrifice fly to Lowe scored Jackson, but Knapman failed to go to third on the throw to the plate. A run was thrown away on that play, as the next moment Huycke went out on a fly to centre, that would have scored a base runner from third. Knapman was nipped in an attempt to steal third a moment after.

East City filled the bases in the ninth with two out on two singles and a base on ball, but the next batter popped to Rahmel.

The Thisles had a chance to tie it up in their half. Hill beat out a bunt to start with and went to second on Munro's infield out. He started for third with Kirn holding the ball and was run down and tagged out. A moment after Long was safe on a fumble and stole second, but Rahmel ended the best game of the season by striking out.

Developing Milch Cows

J. P. Fletcher, Fulton Co., N.Y.

The process of developing milch cows should commence with calfhood and be judiciously followed up. The idea that young animals may be grown cheaply on the poorer qualities of feed is a mistake. As heifers are expected now to begin giving milk at two years of age instead of three, as was once the practice, it follows that they must be kept thrifty and growing steadily from the first.

During the first and second winters they should have the best of hay and a small amount of grain, especially the first winter. This should be of a kind that will assist in the growth of bone and muscle. Ground oats or oats and bran will be good for this purpose. They should have warm, comfortable quarters and always be kept clean and well cared for. In this way they will grow right along, and if rightly handled become quiet and docile, and make good and profitable additions to the dairy at the proper time.

Where winter dairying is followed to any extent, extra attention should be paid to the raising of calves. At least enough of the most promising heifer calves should be selected to supply the dairy with fresh stock as wanted. This will be found better, all things considered, than to depend upon buying cows for this purpose.

Feed Skimmed Milk Best

Where small separators are so generally used on the farm, both in buttermaking and in disposing of the cream in other ways, the conditions are much better for raising good calves than when the milk is delivered to the creamery or skimming station and the skimmed milk returned. This is one of the greatest arguments in favor of the use of separators on the farm. With good warm, dry quarters in the stable and skim milk that can be fed clean and warm to the calves, it is found that they will do as well as in warm weather, and will get a good start over those same new along in the spring.

Care in not over-feeding is necessary, thus inducing bowel trouble. Increase amount of milk gradually as the calf grows older, and there should not often be trouble. In a few weeks these youngsters will begin to eat a little nice hay, and then they should have it every day. A bit of good grain feed will also soon be appreciated and repaid by these thrifty growing animals. With this kind of treatment these early calves should become well grown and ready to turn to pasture another spring. This kind of work requires quite a little attention, but it will be found to pay well, according to the experience of the writer.

VISIT TO DESOLATED CHAMPAGNE

Chalons-Sur-Marne, June.—"During the past three days I have been motoring and walking along the battlefields of Champagne, writes Phillip Gibbs to the Montreal Standard, where after nine months of desperate fighting, the guns are still at work, ceaselessly and great armies of France and Germany are still divided from each other by a few barren meadows, a burnt wood or two, a river bank, a few yards of trenches, and a zone of death.

The spirit of war broods over all the countryside. Gradually as one gets nearer to the front the signs of ordinary life are left behind, and one comes into a region where all the activities of men are devoted to one extraordinary purpose and where they live in strange conditions.

No civilian comes this way unless as a correspondent under the charge of a staff officer. The labourers on the roadside—carting stones of this country of chalk—are all in uniform. No women invade this territory except where, here and there, by rare chance, a wrinkled dame drives a plough across a lonely field. No children play about the brooks, or pluck the wild flowers on the hillsides. The inhabitants of this country are all soldiers, tanned by months of hard weather in war-worn clothes, dutsy after marching down the long, white roads, hard and tough in spite of a winter's misery, with calm resolute eyes in spite of the daily peril of death in which they live.

A Race of Earth-Men.

They live in a world which is as different from this known of ours as though they belonged to another planet, or to an old race far back behind the memory of the first civilization. For in this district of Champagne the soldiers of France have been earth men of trogodytes, not only in the trenches, but for miles behind the trenches. When the rains came last autumn they were without shelter, and there were few villages on this lonely stretch of country in which to billet them. But here were soft chalky ridges and slopes in which it was not difficult to dig holes and caverns. The troops took to picks and shovels, and very soon they built habitations for themselves in which they have been living ever since when not in the trenches.

I was invited into some of these subterranean parlours and ducked my head as I went down clay steps into dim caves where three or four men lived in close comradeship in each of them. They had tacked the photographs of their wives or sweethearts on the walls, to make these places "home-like," and there was space in some of them to come back, who have waited so patiently and so long through the dreary months.

But now that spring has come the earth men have emerged from their holes to bask in the sun again, and with that love of beauty which is instinctive in a French mans heart, they are planting little gardens and shrubberies ouside their chalk dwellings, with allegorical designs in cockie shells or white stones.

Mirage of Peace.

"Tres chic!" said the commandant to a group of soldiers proud of their handicraft.

And "chic" also, though touch in its sentiments, was a little graveyard behind a fringe of branches which mask a French battery. The gunners are still at work plugging out shells over the enemy's lines, from which come answering shells with the challenge of death, but they have found time to decorate the graves of the comrades who have been "unfortunate." They have twined wild flowers about the wooden crosses and made borders of blossom about these mounds of earth. It was the most beautiful cemetery in which I have ever stood with bared head.

He was a soldier in every fibre of his being, but behind those keen piercing eyes of his there was the sentiment of France stirred now by the beauty through which we passed, in spite of war. We drove for a mile or more down a long, straight road which was an avenue of cherry-trees. They made an archway of white blossom above our heads, and the warm sun of the day drew out their perfume. Away on either side of us the fields were streaked with long rays of brilliant yellow where saffron grew as though the sun had split bars of molten metal there, and below the hillside the pear-blossom and cherry blossom which bloomed in deserted orchards lay white and gleaming like snow on the Swiss peaks in summer.

The sky was cloudlessly blue, but as I gazed up into a patch of it where a winged machine flew high with a humming song, five tiny white clouds appeared quite suddenly.

"They are shelling him," said the commandant. "Pretty close, too."

Invisible in the winged machine was a French aviator, reconnoitring the German lines away over Beausejour. Afterwards he became visible, and I talked with him when he had landed in the aviation field, where a number of aeroplanes stood ready for flight.

He was a young man with the keen profile of his class and a matter-of-fact manner which made one hide one's hero-worship.

"They touched her three times," he said pointing to his machine. "You can see the holes where the shrapnel bullets pierced the metal sheath."

He showed me how he worked his mitrailleuse, and then strolled away to light a cigarette against the wind. He had done his morning job and had escaped death in the air by half an inch or so. But in the afternoon he would go up again —2,000 feet above the German guns —and thought no more of it than of just a simple duty with a little sport to keep his spirits up.

"We are quite at home here," said one of the French officers, leading the way through a "boyau," or tunnel, to a row of underground dwellings which have been burrowed out of the earth below a high ridge overlooking the German positions opposite Perthes, Mesnilles Hurtus, and Beausejour, where there has been some of the most ferocious fighting in the war, so that the names of those places have been written in blood upon the history of France.

THRIFTY HOTEL GUESTS.

The Mania For Stealing Little Souvenirs of Their Visits.

We often hear complaints from tourists about inattention and lack of courtesy on the part of those whose duty it is to cater to the traveling public. But there is another side to the story. For instance, the custodians of places of historic or scenic interest frequently visited by tourists are obliged to maintain constant watch against the vandalism of souvenir hunters.

What satisfaction can be found in mutilating and demolishing things of interest and value to possess a souvenir or to appropriate from well known hotels such property as knives, forks, pepper and salt shakers, napkins, towels and bath mats? The manager of a prominent hotel in New York even reports the disappearance of pillows from the bedrooms.

The value of this stolen property yearly amounts to a very large sum. It has been the underlying cause for the appearance of such items on the following en masse: "Children on shipboard in individual staterooms;" on "European cocktail," in which the apparatus is served in a compartment bearing the hotel's name, and which can later be given to the patron.

These are numerous little souvenirs, such as silver plated trays, teaspoons, etc., for sale by various hotels to satisfy collectors.

Not all things that disappear from hotels are taken with deliberate intention. The manager of one of the most fashionable hotels in New York has concluded that linen is not always pocketed, but is taken away unconsciously as mementos for whom and other actions when packing, and such he says, unconsciously taste two dollies in their coat pockets after using them, and these are dropped on the next hotel visited.

This wholesale pocketing of hotel articles has led to the formation of a linen exchange. Many of the leading managers now have stock-taken of all the foreign linen in their hotels, and at regular intervals this material is sent to the agencies overseas, who then return linens not belonging to them.—Leslie's.

"Men are too easy with their wives. They should assert themselves more and make the women understand they are to obey and not command. That's my creed."

"I'm with you. Have a cigar?"

"Don't care if I do, if you don't mind coming outside. My wife won't allow me to smoke in the house."—Baltimore American.

Home, Sweet Home.

Wife—What, going out again to night? Husband—Yes, dear. Going out occasionally, you know, heightens the pleasure of staying home when one gets a chance to. Wife—But you go out so often. Husband—Well, it's a pleasure that really requires a great deal of heightening.—Boston Transcript.

A Scriptural Weapon.

Children tumble into strange morass as when they grapple with theology. They trip over words. For example the other day a teacher at Stepney took for the Bible lesson the story of Samson. At the end of the lesson questions were put to test the understanding of the scholars. "With what weapon did Samson slay a thousand Philistines?" was the question. For a space there was silence. Then a little girl spoke up. "With the ax of the apostles," she said.—London Chronicle.

STRANGE PEOPLE LIVING ALONG THE ADRIATIC

"A much mixed, backward, and strangely superstitious people are those who dwell along the western shore of the Adriatic sea," according to a bulletin issued by the National Geographic society, which sketches the latest folk to be brought upon the battle frontier in their pleasant hill-and-valley homes, stretching from Triest to the southern tip of Dalmantia. Continuing, the bulletin says:

"Greek colonies and Roman municipia; Byzantian officials and sick Franks abandoned on the rocks of Zara by crusaders; Italians exiled during the centuries of strife among their petty states or brought thither by trade ventures; the flood of Slavonian and, later, of Ottoman invasion; all these are the elements of the people living among Austria-Hungary's seacoast. Franks, Byzantians, Croats, Bosniaks, Turks, Hungarians, Genoese, Neopolitans, Germans, and, of first importance, Venetians have ruled various parts of this coast at different times. The heavy groundtone of this shore people is Slavonian, but there is besides a jumble of almost every other racial element under the sun.

"From Trieste, downward, the Slavonians predominate. Latin writers noted that these Slavonian tribes knew no form of monarchal government, but that all matters of the tribe were dealt with by a common national council. And to-day the individual Dalmatian and Istrian is one of the sturdiest independence. These Slavonians worshipped a god of thunder, sacred, groves, nymphs, and genii, special-powdered beings, of all descriptions; and they still do many odd fetish services, though more Christian people, of more simple and abundant faith, are not to be found.

"Vampires, diabolical ghosts, witches, 'Vilen,' and vengeful spirits are held in great respect throughout this country, and the folklore is rich in their doings and in the precautions to be taken against them. Dalmatian orgies in the guise of a man or woman, lately dead and of faulty existance, and is said to be merely a human skin filled with blood and covered with a shroud. This creature waits at night along byways and graveyards for his victims, and, also, at times, rattles the window shutters or throws down tiles from the roof. A thorn-stick for 'thrusting the vampire through' is a means of protection found adequate through experiences. It is, moreover, usually to call to a vampire.

"Witches are bad weather creatures; their evil is unfettered only with the storm and mist. To kill them, one throws three grains of corn and a wax candle a the lightning before the thunder sounds. Thus, they are best killed while the storm is yet a great way off. 'Vilen are maids, with horse's hoofs. Mostly these 'Vilen,' or wood creatures, are good and tolerant of human happiness, but they have a fatal tendency for stealing handsome, new-born children. The newly arrived baby, therefore, in a Dalmatian district frequented by 'Vilen' is closely watched until baptism, when the abductors are powerless.

"To preserve their vineyards from summer hail, the peasants throw salt and shredded garlic at the black clouds. In order to force the vines to bear fruitfully, children are taken into the vineyards on Innocents' day, when they switch the vines and sing: 'Bear, bear fruit, pretty vine, else will I cut off they head.' This exhortation is said to be very effective. To spill wine on one's self is great luck, and a luck often enjoyed along the rocky coast. To meet a viper in the house is also good luck, and a luck often enjoyed along the rocky coast. To meet a viper in the house is also good luck; while the birth of black lambs or the entering of a house left foot first on the other hand, are sad misfortunes."

The Prince's Family Name.

The appearance in the list of members of Oxford University on active service of "Wales, H.R.H. the Prince of," in strict alphabetical order among the "W's," third from the end, recalls an amusing incident recorded in Sir F. C. Burnand's "Reminiscences."

The late Duke of Edinburgh was very friendly with Sir Arthur Sullivan, and often dropped in at the composer's house in St. George's Road for a quiet cup of tea with him and his mother. One evening Mrs. Sullivan startled her son by saying to the duke, "Sir, your family name is Guelph?"

"Certainly," replied her royal guest. "What is the matter with it, Mrs. Sullivan?"

"Nothing; only I can't understand why you don't call yourself by your proper name," said the blunt old lady.

"Oh," the duke answered, "there's nothing to be ashamed of in my name."

"That's exactly what I think," was Mrs. Sullivan's retort.

As a matter of fact, the family name of the Prince Consort was Wettin, and if the Prince of Wales had been entered in the university books by his family name he would still be among the "W's," his grandfather, King Edward VII., being the first monarch of the Wettin line, though Queen Victoria could trace her ancestry back for twenty-five generations to Ase II., who consolidated the Guelphs as king-makers in the eleventh century.

King George's Economy.

Simple fare is quite the rule now both at Buckingham Palace and at Sandringham, and this will continue as long as the war is on. Meals in the royal household have never been so elaborate during the present reign as they were in King Edward's time. King George is not nearly so much of an epicure as his father was. He has to be exceedingly careful what he eats, and he avoids rich food both for preference and of necessity, for he occasionally suffers from gastritis.

Both the King and Queen prefer boiled fish, and meat cooked quite plainly, without an abundance of cunningly seasoned sauces which delight the heart of a clever French chef. A recent dinner menu at the palace consisted mainly of boiled turbot, a dish of cutlets, a fruit salad, and a savoury. Champagne is rarely drank except on special occasions, and when it is the bottle is not placed in a silver holder or covered with a napkin. But the label and everything which might signify the brand is removed.

Beef Was Second.

A man in a condition of inebriety was walking up a small side street when he saw on a restaurant a board with the words: "Eleven to 2, beef, mutton, vegetables, cheese; 5 to 9, soup, joint," and so on. "Hello! Eleven to 2—decent price!" he said to himself. "That sounds all right." He walked in, placed a shilling on the cashier's desk and muttered thickly: "A bob on beef. D'y'ear?" Then he zigzagged out. An hour later he made his way back to the establishment. As he entered one of the waitresses was giving her order. "Mutton and, beef two." "Confound it all!" remarked the basher of beef. "Just my luck—a second again!"—London Tatler.

Donkey Living Yet.

Not long ago when Mr. Lloyd George was speaking at Cardiff in public, a heckler called out: "Do you remember when your grandfather drove a donkey and cart?" "You will have to forgive me, ladies and gentlemen," replied Mr. Lloyd George; "the cart had quite escaped my memory, but I see that the donkey is living yet."

THE PIANO'S ROMANCE

The piano, or properly speaking, the pianoforte, has a most interesting history, and investigators generally agreed that the inventor was Bartolmeo Cristofori, an Italian. As an instrument for the drawing room the piano has passed from inventor to inventor through a cloud of romance. In its antique form it is too much mixed up with other instruments of the lyre order to be worth while tracing. But Cristofori was in reality the inventor who established the principles upon which the piano of to-day is constructed.

Cristofori was a harpischord maker of Padua, and he had as his most eminent patron Prince Ferdinand, son of the Grand Duke Cosmo III., who was a skilled harpischord player. Ferdinand prevailed upon Cristofori to leave Padua and settle in Florence. Two of his pianos are fortunately still existing. The early one, dated 1720, belonged to Signora Ernesta Morenni Hartelli of Florence, and it has found its way to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City, where it is one of the most interesting of the exhibits.

The second piano, dated 1726, is in the museum of the eminent collectors and musicologists, the Signori Kraus of Florence. Both instruments, the 1720 and the 1726, have the overdampers and check, the latter the mechanical completion of the action. Both pianos are bichord and have white natural keys, but the compass differs, the earlier having four and a half octaves.

Cristofori died in 1731, aged 66. The year previous to his death his assistant, Giovanni Ferrini, made a pianoforte which became famous. It was bought by the Queen of Spain and by her bequeathed to the singer, Farinelli. The fame of the Cristofori invention soon spread through Europe and there were many inventors to follow him up to the time that Sebastin Erard made vast improvements in the construction of the instrument, almost revolutionising it.

Erard, at the age of 18, left Strasburg, his native place, for Paris, where he bound himself apprentice to a clavichord maker, soon proving himself so skillful as to excite the jealousy of his master. They quarrelled and parted. Sebastien entered the service of another constructor of clavichords, who appreciated his skill so much that he set him to make an instrument that was to surpass everything that had up to that time been done in this line.

Young Sebastien accomplished the task with complete success, and when his master took the clavichord to the purchaser and was asked to explain the mechanism he was unable so to do, and was obliged to confess that Erard had made it.

This invention at once procured the youthful mechanic the friendship of distinguished persons. A duchess offered him the hospitality of her house, which he accepted, and it was for her that he made his first piano being spurred on to his effort by having had one of German construction brought under his notice. The piano he made was pronounced to be a distinct improvement upon the German instrument.

MAJOR BOLSTER'S FATE

Was Left in Trench and May be a Prisoner.

COBOURG, June 11. — There has been much uncertainty about the fate of Major Bolster of Cobourg, who was officially reported wounded and missing just after the battle of Langemarck. His friends here have made many enquiries, but have received no further information that positively confirmed this.

Lt.-Col. Russell, O.C. 40th Northumberland Regiment, has received a letter from Lieut. F. E. Birdsall, of the 40th, who is at the front, and who was recently made a captain, in which he says: "Your letter to Bolster was handed over to me, and as no doubt you already know Bolster is missing, I thought I would answer it. We went into action on the 22nd and in the skernoon were ordered to retire to hold the line, as both flanks were broken. Bolster was the last man to leave his trench, and so nobody really knows what happened to him, for the Germans immediately occupied it after he vacated it. So you see there is a big chance that he was wounded and is a prisoner.

"Lieut. Doxsee, also of the 40th, was in No. 2 Co., and was in charge of a house with one or more machine guns. He was shot through the head and immediately killed on the morning of the 24th.

"I was in No. 3 Co. We have one officer missing and about one-third of the men killed, wounded or missing."

Capt. Birdsall states that he is now in command of No. 3 Co.

Early Tomatoes For Ontario

An experiment which, if successful, may mean that Canadian tomato lovers will be able to obtain the domestic variety a week earlier than at present is being conducted at Pelee Island, on Lake Erie, by Mr. S. C. Johnston, vegetable expert connected with the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

At present most of the early tomatoes come from the U.S., and if the [illegible] will mean the practical cutting out of the New Jersey trade. In former days Pelee Island was practically given over to the growing of grapes, but that industry has fallen on evil dyas, and now the farmers are going into tomato growing.

KNEW NOTHING OF REPORT THAT ENGLAND WAS READY TO COMPROMISE WITH GERMANY

Officials Very Reticent About Berlin Report That England Was Ready to Modify Her Blockade Decree if Germany Changed Her Plans of Submarine Warfare---Other Morning Despatches.

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Eng., June 15.—Official circles here to-day were extremely reticent regarding the report cabled from Berlin that England was willing to modify her blockade decree if Germany changed her plans of submarine warfare. Government officials said they knew nothing of report that England had informed the United States she was willing to reach a compromise with Germany.

LONDON, June 15.—It is rumoured Sir Edward Grey is in the Roumania capital and has arranged that country's immediate entrance into the war.

AMSTERDAM, June 14.—Couriers arriving here declare that British airmen shelled and destroyed a big Zeppelin at [illegible] last Sunday.

THE HAGUE, June 14.—The Dutch Government has prohibited the export to the United States or any other country, goods bought in Germany and now lying in Holland.

PARIS, June 14.—Reports this afternoon from the front say there has been no change in the situation since noon, though the Germans have made very violent attacks.

SHELL MEN CALL IT A MISTAKE

TORONTO, June 15.—"Canada," said an official of General Bertram's engineering firm here, is "turning out from 30,000 to 40,000 shells per day. Wolwich Arsenal in England is making 70,000 shells per day. Woolwich Arsenla is only one of hundreds of shops in Braitain now engaged in the making of shells. The statement credited to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, that Canada is alfeady supplying more shells than all the British manufacturers grouped together is a ridiculous mistake."

"I don't believe that Sir Thomas said that," said Colonel Frederick Nicholls, president of the Canadian General Electric Company and Canada Foundry. "There has been some mix-up in the cable transmission. So far, however, as the remark goes that Canada has not yet been called upon for 10 per cent. of her possible output, that is absolutely correct. Canada could turn out many times the number of shells she is making now. But Canadians are not getting large enough orders to warrant the expense of setting up special machinery The orders that do come are split up and divided among so many firms that no one concern is handling really a big order."

"An Old Man At 40"

How often you hear that remark! How many such men there are! And how needless it is!

Wrong food is the big cause.

When one feels old at forty the first thing is to correct improper diet. The main fault with the dietary is often a lack of the vital mineral salts in food. Without these mineral elements old age steals on rapidly.

To meet this very condition a food was devised which supplies those mineral elements such as phosphorus, iron, sulphur, etc.

That food is

Grape-Nuts

Made of whole wheat and barley, this delicious food retains all the nutriment of these grains, together with the priceless mineral elements—notably lacking in white flour foods—which the system must have to build and maintain vigor and elasticity of body, brain and muscle.

One can avoid this "old-age-at-40" business by proper eating and living.

JURY AWARDED $500 DAMAGES TO JOHN E. CLARK

Result of Four-Day Case Was Returned by Jury Last Night—Accident in Spencer Saw Mill at Havelock

MR. GORDON GETS STAY

The County Court jury which heard the case of Clark vs. Spencer Brothers of Havelock brought in a verdict last night awarding the plaintiff, John E. Clark, $500 damages for the injury to his right hand, sustained on December 12th, 1914, while an employee at the Spencer saw mill.

Retiring shortly after 3 o'clock the jury remained out until five minutes after eight o'clock, when they returned and presented the following verdict, arranged in the form of answers to summarize questions drawn up by His Honour Judge Hoyeke and presented to the jury for their assistance:

Was the plaintiff injured through the negligence of the defendants?

Answer.—Yes.

If so, wherein did such negligence consist?

Answer.—By not taking the saw off the shaft."

Was the saw and other machinery connected therewith by which the plaintiff was injured dangerous machinery, which should have been, as far as possible, securely guarded?

Answer.—Yes.

If so, was it, as far as practicable, securely guarded?

Answer—No.

If not, what further should have been done by the defendants in the way of guarding to make it reasonably safe?

Answer.—Take the saw off shaft when not in use.

At the time the injury was received was the plaintiff acting or working where he was, pursuant to instruction from the defendants or either of them?

Answer.—Yes.

Or did plaintiff go to the room where he was injured contrary to instructions and when he should have been at the engine, firing?

Answer—No.

Could the plaintiff, by the exercise of reasonable care, have avoided the injury.

Answer.—No.

If so, wherein did he fail to exercise reasonable care?

No answer.

What damages, if any, do you award the plaintiff?

Answer—$500.

Stay of Judgment.

Mr. Kerr moved that judgment be entered in accordance with the verdict of the jury.

Judge Huycke accordingly entered judgment for $500 and costs in favour of the plaintiff.

Mr. Gordon moved a stay of thirty days, doubtless for the purpose of considering the advisability of appealing the judgment.

The Jury.

The Jury deciding this case was composed of J. Worboy, H. Mowry, D. M. Minnicola, W. A. Robertson, W. A. Thompson, Jas. Robertson, P. McMillan, Albert Nicholls, R. W. Wilson, Fred Board, Wm. Cavanagh and Thomas Stevenson.

A Protracted Case.

Commencing with their selection on Thursday morning the jury spent four days on this case. The evidence was all in on Saturday afternoon, and Monday was occupied up to 3 o'clock by the addresses of the counsel and Judge Huycke.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the Spencer Brothers (Alfred and Ernest) and Mr. F. D. Kerr represented the plaintiff, John E. Clark.

TRIEST GOVERNOUR GETS OUT TREASURY ALSO TAKEN AWAY OCCUPATION OF CITY EXPECTED

Italians Cut Goritz Railway---Valentine Pass Occupied ---People of Captured Parts Well Treated

SPECIAL CABLE:

ROME, June 15.—The Governor of Triest has transferred his residence to Adelsberg. The Chamber of Commerce has been transferred to Vienna and the Triest treasury has been sent to Lebiana.

Fierce fighting on three sides of Goritz, and the partial destruction of the Austrian fortress of Malborget, in the Carnic Alps, were reported in official despatches from Gen. Cadorna yesterday.

MALBORGET FORT DAMAGED.

Explosion of a munition magazine during a violent bombardment Sunday afternoon blew out the wing of a fort of Malborget. Italian aviators reported that several high explosive shells appeared to have crashed into the magazine simultaneously. There was a dull roar that shook the mountainside and the masonry was blown to bits. A column of smoke shot high in the air and Italian artillerymen burst into cheers.

A furious battle is being fought along the east bank of the Isonzo, six miles north of Goritz, where Italian infantry crossed the river and cut the railway leading north from Goritz after occupying Plava. The enemy has been reinforced by detachments from the garrison at Goritz and has launched a determined attack to drive the Bersaglieri back across the river.

As rapidly as new pontoons can be constructed, Gen Cadorna is rushing troops across the river at this point to support his forces on the east bank. The losses on both sides have been heavy and hundreds of bodies have gone floating down the river.

From in front of Goritz, heavy bombardment of the outer forts continues night and day. To the south another Italian infantry force cut the railway leading from Goritz to Triest by seizing the station at Sagrado, and are moving northward toward the village of Rubbia.

AUSTRIAN COMMUNICATIONS IN DANGER.

The Italian armies north of Goritz, near Plava, are descending upon the [illegible] lines of communication from Goritz eastward.

The official statement from the War Office yesterday did not confirm the report that the Austrian naval base at Pola has been seriously damaged by Italian aviators.

"In the Carnia region our offensive continues," said the official statement. "Our troops advanced rapidly on Saturday, occupying Volaia and Valentina passes, the Alpinists taking numerous difficult trenches and peaks. At several points along the frontier, our artillery destroyed enemy barracks, trenches, and observation posts.

"Along the frontier from Tonale to Carnia, the enemy made desperate attacks against our positions all Saturday night and early Sunday, particularly in Val Grande and Val Piccolo and at Freikopel. These attacks were completely repulsed.

"On the Isonzo front we continue to fortify captured positions on the left bank, after destroying the dyke of the Monfalcone Canal and cutting the Goritz-Monfalcone railway."

Details of the capture by Italians of Monte Zugna, situated approximately four miles northeast of Ala, reached here yesterday from the battle front.

The position was strongly fortified and surrounded by strong wire entanglements and three lines of trenches. A platform had been built upon it for cannon. The position comprised also two large barracks which are reported to have cost $200,000 and which possessed the most modern equipment.

FRIENDSHIP FOR AUSTRIA'S RECRUITS.

The Official Journal yesterday published the decree seizing merchant tion of the inhabitants in the districts just conquerpd, has decided to give the families of Italians serving in the Austrian army from those districts the same allowance as the families of Italian soldiers, it is said. This will be announced in the new districts.

The Official Journal yesterday published the decree seling merchant ships of Italy's enemies in the ports of the kingdom and of the colonies at the beginning of hostilities. The decree says that boats recognized as destined for service as auxiliary cruisers will be captured. Other ships may be requisitioned by the Minister of Marine for the duration of the war.

CANADIANS BACK TO FRONT

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 15—Six hundred men and 23 officers from the Fort Garry Horse recently proceeded to France as reinforcements for Col. Seely's Canadian brigade now operating as dismounted cavalry. Four hundred went within the past few days. A medical officer of the British Army who inspected them before they left England, remarked emphatically: "They were the finest set of men" he ever passed. An officer in the brigade, home to-day, says: "They are holding their own, getting a yard or two occasionally from the other fellows."

Only about fifty per cent. of the original force is now there, but every day those who have been slightly wounded are returning from the base.

Last week a large number of Winnipeg men were enjoying a swim when shells started coming over them The fellows just kept swimming and not a single swimmer was hit, but two women and a child in a house on the banks of the canal were killed.

The country where the Westerners are now operating is so far unspoilt by the war. Farming is going on all round. The Canadians last week gave a hand with threshing and were much struck to find machines made in Canada were in use all over.

War Debt Already $11,250,000,000

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BUDAPEST, June 15.—The national debt of the belligerent powers have been increased $11,250,000,000 since the beginning of the war, according to figures compiled by Dr. Elemer Hantos, a Hungarian financial authority. Great Britain's increase is set by Dr. Hantos at $3,150,000,000; France's at $2,250,000,000, and Russia's at $2,700,000,000.

Smaller amounts are chargeable to Serbia, Montenegro, Belgium, and Japan.

Was in the Barnardo Home Here

TORONTO, June 15.—The question of the disposal of Louisa Markesfeldt, the alleged spy now on remand at the police station, who comes before Registrar J. Russell Snow on Friday next is proving a puzzler for the registration authorities. If she is interned as appears most likely, she should as a prisoner of war be in the custody of the Government. There is no internment camp for women in the country and all the institutions in the vicinity are municipal ones...It is thought probable that special permission will be obtained for her to be put in the Mercer. The only letter or written matter found in her possession Detective Maurer said thes afternoon was a scrap of paper containing in German the words, "God punish England."

To the matron of the Margaret A. Cox Homes for Girls at Peterborough, where Miss Markesfeldt was sent by Dr. Barnardo's Home in London in November, 1897, she seemed a perfectly normal girl. Speaking to The Star this afternoon the matron said: "She came to us, aged 10, and before that had been in the Lambeth Workhouse, London. do not think she is likely to have known very much before that age. We have kept track of all her movements up to September last. As regards her own story of travel in the United States and her work as a spy, I think it is pure romancing. The war has probably gone to her head, or what is quite likely, she may have fallen into the hands of Germans in Toronto, who have used her for ther own ends."

Force Straits In a Month

ROME, June 14.—The plans of the allies based on the belief that the Dardanelles will be forced within a month, provide for the resumption of Serbian offensive against Austria next month. When the Strait is forced British and French troops will be released, and it is intended to send them to the Balkans to aid the Serbians. Salonica, on the Aegean, will be the military base for these operations.

The Serbians, who reached the interior of Albania and made an agreement with Essad Pasha, the Provisional President and friend of Italy, are marching on Durazzo and Alessio in conjunction with a large force of Montenegrins. An Italian force now occupies Avlona, south of Durazzo, and it is believed that large Italian forces will be sent against Austria through the other port when the Serbian and Montenegrin armies have opened a way.

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

The old hermit fixed his eyes on Tom Smith. "And you?" sez he.

"I can't," sez Tom Smith; "but I don't stand in any one's way and if—"

"Good" sez old Josiah. "I've allus bene prejudiced again' takin' the whole world into my confidence; and I think we can tend to Big Jeff without its causin' much talk or costin' the state a cent. Would you be willin' to turn his hosses back to him?"

We both said sure we would and then he offered his pouch of tobacco sayin' a little smoke after a meal made the journey just that much shorter. Me and Tom Smith rolled us a cigarette apiece out of his pouch and it was as different from ordinary as—well, as that old codger was different from ordinary men.

He thumbed a small wad into his red pipe, sat beside the door and puffed just as slow as usual while his eyes took on the way-back-yonder look. I had been around Injuns enough to know 't this was every bit put on; but he did it as well as I'd even seen it done. An Injun is given' a show his whole life long, and when no one else is around, he acts to himself. I knew that Josiah was achin' to have us begin to fidget; but I pertended to be drowsy, and even Tom Smith kept purty quiet.

Presently the old hermit knocked the bowl of his pipe on the palm of his hand, got up, shook himself, and said: "Come on."

We followed him around the corner of the house and there stood two saddled hosses and one with a blanket on. "Well!" sez Tom Smith, and I felt like shakin' him for it. I was beginnin' to think a heap of old Josiah; but I didn't intend to over-humour him in his show-actin'.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN.
Old Josiah Takes a Ride.

Among the rest of the old hermit's bag o' tricks was a habit he had of pullin' an extra good hoss on ya once in a while, and this time he had three unusual good ones that I'd have driven in all my teeth with an ax before I'd a mentioned it.

We started off bunched close with old Josiah a stride in the lead and pickin' out the way. All he ever did as a rule was to sit and smoke when he wasn't eatin'; but when he did go anywhere it seemed that a regular made path opened before him and he just followed along it trustin to luck. This time he split the difference between the Canadian and the Washita, and rode out the divide. It was the only sensible way to go, but I'd never 'a' thought of it.

He rode with his buffalo-gun across his lap, and his legs grippin' his hoss clothes-pin fashion accordin' to the Injun custom, and it irritated me to see a feller who rode as seldom as he did, do it so everlastin' comfortable. He had me purty well weighed out in his mind by this time, but he was still sendyin' about Tom Smith, and I saw him take note of every move he made.

Tom Smith stood the test all right that mornin'; his shave had brought out the hang of his jaw, his moustache was purt nigh recruited up to a peace footin', and his mind was busy, which allus put the best expression in his eyes. He rode his hoss light, and I took considerable satisfaction in the way he stacked up.

"You got a gel o' your own?" sez old Josiah to Tom Smith.

Tom Smith hung silent for some time. "I'm afraid I have," sez he.

"You?" sez the old hermit, turnin' to me.

"Well, not that I know of," sez I; and then I thought of the child Barbie and how she had said I was to come back and marry her, and I added, "that is, not a gel that I'm sittin' up with."

"Well," sez the old hermit, speakin' of the gel after whose father we were ridin', "she might marry you, but I doubt it."

"Oh, that's all right," sez I, "just so she lets me know after she's got her mind all made up."

"What do you intend to do, now?" sez old Josiah to Tom Smith.

"I wish I knew," sez Tom Smith.

"Why don't you take on with us again?" sez I. "I'm boostin' Phil McLaughlin to be foreman after me, but he lacks some qualities that you've got. If you steady down you and him between ya could handle Jim and that ranch and do mighty well for yourselves."

Tom Smith shook his head. "I'm mighty obliged to ya," sez he "but, truth to tell, the cattle business don't appeal to me any more than it does to you."

"What do ya mean?" sez I.

"I've watched ya," sez he. "You don't hunger an' thirst to be within reachin' distance of a lot o' cows night and day, any more than I do. You've got the details down to so fine a point that you can make yourself needful and this leaves you free to give orders and to do as you please a lot o' the time. I don't take to the details and so it would be me for steady dustgatin' with the orders all goin' one way and no chance of a change."

"Now, we know what you don't intend to do," sez the old hermit, "and the next question is, what do you intend to do? From all I've heard most lines are somethin' alike, you've got to know 'em before you can run 'em."

"Is that the reason why you never engaged in business?" sez Tom Smith.

A quick shadow flicked across the old hermit's face, but it was followed up by a good-natured grin. "Boy," sez he, "if your disposition allows you to live to be half as old as I am, you will have had to learn a right smart about some one thing in the meantime. I don't give many orders; but it's been a long, long spell since I've taken any. I live about as I please, can go wherever I wish, and I allus have a little more money than I have any use for."

"I suppose you were just the same at my age?" sez Tom Smith.

The old hermit pulled his beard a time or two, and then his face softened. "I apologize to ya, sah," sez he, without any put-on in his voice "At your age I was just a bottle o' nitroglycerin in the hands of a child."

Somethin' in the old hermit's voice held us quiet for some time; and then I poked in again; "But, Tom Smith," I sez, "what are ya goin' to do? Your last venture didn't turn out overly well."

"Seems to me it did," sez he. "I'm not claimin' any credit for it; but at the same time it was a lucky thing 'at I happened to be at Big Jeff's."

"The's two ways o' livin' successful," sez the old hermit, "Just two. One is to plan every step and never change, and the other is never to plan more than a minute ahead and always to act on your first real impulse. The first thing 'at pops into a man's head is allus the right thing to do if he'll just keep on allus doin' the next first thing 'at pops into his head but the minute he starts to argue about the rights or wrongs of what he's minded to do, why he's like an army o' generals."

"That last plan is the one I'm sayin' right now," sez Tom Smith, "but I'm not altogether free. To tell you the truth, the law wants me for somethin' I never did, several outlaws want me for what I have done, and one outlaw wants me for what I don't want to do—so you can easy see that it's somethin' more than obstinacy 'at keeps me from prophesyin' about my own future."

He dropped back and rode by himself, and we didn't do any more talkin' for some time. "You'll have to just let him find his own wath," sez old Josiah after a time. "Neither a nation nor a man can fight a righteous outside war until all the inside rebellions are put down, and that boy's badly torn up. The gel has eyes for him already, I can see that and so long as he's not free, he'll have to keep away from her."

"If he'd go entirely out of her life," sez I, "it might make it more comfortable for her; but I don't estimate him to be that kind. He's got too much knee-action about him to ever make a good traveller, and about every so often he's bound to fly up. If he was to stay around close to her she'd soon begin to savvy what a gump he was about a lot o' things; but if she just hears of him she'll keep on studyin' about him until even his jack o' common sense'll look grand to her. The only way to stop a gel from manufacturin' a hero out of a damned fool is to make 'em work side by side."

"Did you find that out yourself?" asked the old hermit of me.

"No," sez I, "it's one of my old boss's theories."

"I thought you was a little young to learn what it took be a heap longer to find out," sez old Josiah. He looked off into space a while and then sez: "And it wasn't any laughin' matter when I did learn it—especially to the damned fool."

While I was puzzlin' about whether he or the other feller was the damned fool, he turned to me and sez, "How would you like to marry the gel, yourself, Happy Hawkins?"

That meant I'd have to make up my mind to settle down at the Lion Head and give my attention makin' money, and right now the' came a tuggin' at my heart for the old Diamond Dot and the child Barbie. Even at that very minute I knew this was foolish, but takin' it by and large, I've had full as much joy out of bein' foolish as out o' bein' practical.

Had Heart Trouble FOR YEARS.

Weighed 87 Lbs.
Now Weighs 128 Lbs.

Miss Beatrice Lougheed, Staples, Ont., writes: "I feel it my duty to tell you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had heart trouble for quite a few years. I doctored for it, and altogether my bill amounted to $400, and still no cure. One day when very sick I was lying on a couch close to where some almanacs were hanging. I took one down, and was reading about what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills cured, and thought I would try them. I got six boxes to start with; have only taken three boxes and I never felt so well in my life as I do now. I only weighed 87 pounds when I started to take them, and now I weigh 128 pounds. I hope all poor sufferers will be benefitted by them as I have been."

Wherever there is any weakness of the heart, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will strengthen it and build up a strong healthy system.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HIS "FALSE FRIEND".

Time Proved Him to Be All Good, but Very Easily Influenced.

By GEO. ELMER COBB.

"I will never trust a friend again!" It was a broad and bitter declaration for a man, young, ambitious, in love with life and all its pleasant promises and rewards to come; yet at that supreme moment of disappointment and loss, Lane Percival meant every word he spoke.

He stood in the room where he and Duke Vernon had spent many a hopeful, happy hour during the past year. They had been like brothers. Each had come to the city from a country home to carve a way to fortune. To one of them, Lane Percival, had come as well the glory of youth—love, deep, tranquil, abiding. Even in that the faithful Vernon seemed to share his joy and take Myra Little to his heart's thoughts as a cherished sister.

And now—this! An opened disordered drawer in the bureau, an overturned tin box with its strong lock broken—and empty. Two days before it had contained $400, the savings of two years. Percival had got leave of absence for a day to escort Myra to a town forty miles away, where she was to spend a week with an old school friend, and he had returned to find DUKE VERNON THIEVER.

"He has taken it all," muttered Percival, dark browed, and his heart for the moment was filled with cruel hate. "I couldn't have believed it of him. He knew that I drew the money out of the bank yesterday to pay on the little home Myra and I had decided to purchase. I suppose he has also drawn his own funds from the bank. He has sold his friendship, his honor, his future for a paltry four hundred dollars."

On the sill of the open window was an overturned ink bottle, and Percival concluded that the false friend had been writing there a check to draw his own savings and disappear with everything in sight. That night he wrote all the truth to Myra, with a heavy heart telling her that he must begin all over again, and they must—wait.

Two days went by but no word was received that explained the sudden departure of Duke Vernon. Percival went around to the mercantile house for which Vernon had worked. Its head was disturbed, almost cautious at the summary disappearance of a valued employe.

Percival did not have the heart nor will to expose his friend. He simply left the impression that Vernon must have had a sudden call home.

"I guess it is my fate to meet with disappointment in my friends," he wrote Myra. "You remember what I have told you about my brother, Rupert. I could never restrain him in his wild speculative ways, and I have still the mournful memory of his inducing me to invest my share of the little money father left us. He lost it all in some worthless oil well. This makes two bad inroads on my money bags, as you see. Next time I shall make you my banker, and shut out from my life every bit of human love except for you."

"A telegram, sir," announced a messenger boy just as Percival was sealing up this letter.

In regular Lane Percival read a brief dispatch. It was dated at a point in Michigan and it was signed Duke Vernon. It ran:

"Better than I left you word. We have made it."

What word—made what? In bewilderment Lane Percival sought vainly to read the riddle. A score of wild theories as to what might be crossed his thoughts all that night. Had he made a mistake? Had he misjudged his tried and trusted friend, or was this some offcastory on the part of his missing chum?

He slept a little towards morning. He arose dull and oppressed, and bothered. There was a knock at the door.

"Come in," he directed.

"It's me," announced the man who cleaned the halls and washed the windows and kept the place generally in order. "I found a letter, and a check I guess it is, in the court just now. I'm not much of a scholar but I spelled out your name."

"My name?" repeated Percival vaguely.

"There they are," and the man handed Percival a sheet of paper and a check.

The latter was made out for $400 and signed by the missing Vernon.

The letter bore the initials of the same signature, and ran:

"Dear Lane.

"I have a hurry call for funds, ready cash. Urgent. A big thing. I have taken your money and leave you check. Expect great news."

Slowly the truth began to dawn on the startled Percival. He had cruelly misjudged Vernon, for there was the check which with the letter had been left on the window sill and then blown into the court. And that telegram? What could have induced the steady-going Vernon to plunge into some venture of speculation?

There was another summons at the door of his humble room the next evening. Some one tried the knob. Lane Percival sprang to his feet with a loudly beating heart. He had recognized a familiar footstep he had begun to miss sorely.

He flung the door open widely. Then he drew back. The open happy face, the bluff hearty tone of his friend, returned, were a reproach that made him shrink from the extended hand.

"I can't do it, Duke," he said, "I have wronged you."

"Wronged me?" rang out the cheery tones of Vernon. "When? How?"

"I believed you had stolen my money."

"I'd have done it if there had been no other way!" cried Duke Vernon. "I've made it. No more scraping and saving and creeping along. Look there!"

He drew forth and flaunted before the eyes of his bewildered friend a certified check.

"Ten thousand dollars!" were the words that dazzled the eyes of the astonished Percival.

"See who it's made out to."

"Duke Vernon and Rupert Percival; my brother!"

"Yes—the ne'er-do-well, the wild rover, the poor fellow you lost faith in. But I had faith. He was all good, only impulsive and easily influenced. He lost your money and his in an out and out swindle. But that was education. I didn't tell you, but for a year I have been staking him, off and on, up in the copper mining district—as a partner."

Lane Percival swallowed a bitter emotion tinged with shame. A stranger had been kinder to his wandering brother than himself.

"You wouldn't see him a year ago when he called here," said Vernon. "He's made good—won't you see him now?"

"Yes," said Lane Percival humbly, "and ask you both to forgive a man who needs to begin the study of human nature all over again, to make himself worthy of being called friend and brother."

And Vernon went out and brought the wanderer back with him. It did not take long, even after his abject confessions, for Duke and Rupert to cheer up their repentant companion.

And they spent that evening in planning what a lot the $10,000, received for a claim that the $400 had come just in time to secure, would do for three young, ambitious fellows and the bonny girl who need not now wait longer for Lane's start in life.

How You Can Make Hairs Quickly Disappear

(Helps to Beauty)

Even a stubborn growth of hair will quickly vanish from the face, neck or arms after a single treatment with delatone. To remove the hairs, make a stiff paste with a little powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be left free from hair or blemish. To avoid disappointment, be quite certain you get real delatone.

CRICKETS SING FOR JAPANESE

Males Are Kept in Cages to Furnish Amusement for Their Owners.

One of the most curious things to be seen in Japan, alike in the houses of rich and poor, is a small cage of bamboo fibers which houses the singing cricket. The male only has the "voice," which can hardly be called a singing voice, because the sounds emitted are much more metallic than those which ordinarily proceed from the throat of a bird.

The westerner who hears these sounds for the first time starts up under the impression that he is hearing an electric call bell, an exchange states. In order to execute his song the cricket goes through a very amusing performance. He raises himself on his front feet, grasps with the others a kind of "platform" arranged in the cage for his convenience, expands his wingshells and rubs them against each other with great rapidity. The rhythm of the movement varies with individuals, and this explains why the sound produced offers a certain variety in meter as well as in pitch.

The Japanese have reared this insect from time immemorial. For a long time the exportation of these crickets was prohibited under severe penalties, originally because a religious superstition against it existed among the peasantry. The imperial family has cultivated the most tuneful species, but no one but a member of the royal family has heretofore been permitted to own a specimen. The recently deceased emperor was a devotee of natural history, and it is said that he sometimes amused himself by taking the key from the cricket and evolving musical exercises from its peculiarities. These little insects pass the entire day in song if care is taken to maintain their food supply, which consists of lettuce leaves, with those of the tomato, carrot and cucumber. Salt puts an end forever to the song of this little insect.

Horrible!

MOSLEM LEADER'S VIEWS

"Kill the Germans Like Pagans and Perhaps They Will Repent"

Nothing in this war has been more wonderful than the absolute unanimity of all the peoples in any way connected with the British Empire that our cause is a just one. This was strikingly shown in a Blue Book issued by the British Government, which contained loyal messages from the native chiefs in Nigeria, forwarded through Sir F. Lugard, Governor-General of the Colony, to the Colonial Secretary.

Sheku Berkar Garbai, Emir of Bornu, wrote:

"We know that the King of England is waging war against the Germans. . . . Who knoweth the ways of Allah? We are warring against proud and stiff-necked people, as the Germans are. In such a case Allah is on our side. Our Lord Mohammed saith: 'Those who break friendship, kill them like Pagans. If you kill them, perhaps they will repent.'"

Sheku Bukar Garbai described himself as being "Son of Sheku Ibrahim, Son of Sheku Umar, Son of Mahamadu Liminoel-Kanemy, humble slave of Allah, Emir of Bornu, by the power of the King of England," and he gave money, horses, cattle and corn, his contributions towards the maintenance of the war.

"I am the King of England's servant. Why should I not help him?" he asked.

The Emir of Jema wrote:

"God give him (the King) greatness. May his lands stretch north, south, east and west. George, King of England, his most generous Majesty. May he live and reign long. The reason why I write to his Majesty is because he has helped us from being prisoners of the Germans. We are glad, we thank him.

"We pray God to help him still, and give him more greatness, and may he win all the German territories, all their lands and their properties. Because you are the helper and protector of the Moslems, the strong, the poor, the rich.

The subjects of the Emir of Kongera celebrated the fall of Duala by holding festivities for seven days and nights, and forwarding $1,000 towards the war funds said:

"We are continually praying God that He will give you the victory, and that He will destroy the Germans because we know well that they are an evil people of evil customs, therefore may God not help them at all, because theirs is the custom to spoil the land."

The Emir had intended applying the $1,000 towards the improvement of the land, and he explained in his letter that what was necessary to be done in repairing the roads he would do himself at his own charge.

Nothing to Fear.

Two chums were spending an hour in intimate chat at the club. The conversation veered round to the love affair of the disconsolate-looking one.

"Why don't you propose to her?" ventured his companion.

"I'm afraid."

"Afraid. And yet she loves you!"

"Oh, awfully."

"You agree with her father in politics?"

"Yes."

"You agree with her mother in religion?"

"Yes."

"You agree with her brother as to which is the best football team?"

"Yes."

"Then, hang me, old man, if I can see what you're afraid of."

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Miss Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations of the throat and bronchial tubes.

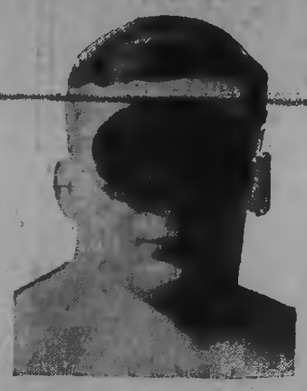
JUDGE LINDSAY ARRESTED FOR CONTEMPT

DENVER, June 15—Judge Ben B. Lindsey was arrested in his own chambers on a charge of contempt of court and connivance in the commission of perjury. The charge grew out of Judge Lindsey's refusal to divulge on the witness stand, in the Berta Wright murder trial last Wednesday, a confidential conversation with Neal Wright, 12-year-old son of the defendant.

HE WAS THIN

Weighed 135 Pounds, Now Weighs 160—A 25-Pound Increase



"When I started taking Sargol my weight was only 135 pounds," writes H. E. Beninger. "Now my weight is 160 pounds and I am the picture of health and stronger than I ever was before. You may use my letter for I am sure it will help somebody in the same shape I was. Would not take $100 for the good it has done me." "When I commenced taking Sargol I weighed 116 pounds. I have been taking it only 26 days and weigh 139 pounds," writes Miss Lillie Hayh. "I gained 7 pounds in 10 days," states W. P. Thackery.

And so it goes. Some folks take little stock in testimonials because they say people are apt to take treatment for some disease and just imagine they feel better. But Sargol is not a treatment for any disease. It simply puts firm, healthy, "stay there" fat and muscular tissue on men and women who are thin, rundown and underweight. There is no guess work—no imagination, about it. These people weigh themselves before they begin. They weigh themselves each week thereafter and the scales tell the story. Hundreds upon hundreds of Sargol users are constantly reporting increases in weight ranging all the way from ten to forty pounds.

Sargol is just a tiny tablet which you eat at meals. It mixes with your food and turns all the fats, sugars, starches and oils of your food into rich, ripe, flesh-producing nourishment for the tissues and blood. If you are underweight it is certain that the greater portion of the fat-producing material in your food is going through your body as waste. You eat and eat but get no benefit. Sargol stops this wasteful, dangerous leakage of fats and the result is quickly noted as the hollows of the body fill out with healthy flesh.

You risk no loss in taking Sargol, as leading druggists everywhere sell it with a positive guarantee of increased weight as contained in every package.

Absolutely harmless. Costs little if it succeeds and nothing if it fails. If you are ten pounds or more underweight you owe it to yourself to try it.

Sold in Peterborough and vicinity by all leading druggists.

DUMMER SLANDER CASE GETS AIRING IN THE COUNTY COURT

Frank Harding Claims $1500 Damages From William Batten—Witnesses Tell of Defendant Circulating Certain Reports of Theft

SMALL ARMY OF WITNESSES

The hearing of a peculiar case of slander was begun in the County Court Monday afternoon at the conclusion of the Clark-Spencer trial. Frank Harding claims $1,500 damages from William Batten for alleged slanderous statements to the effect that Harding had stolen 4,000 feet of lumber from the defendant. Both parties reside in Dummer.

At least thirty men crowded through the doors to several ante-rooms. With the County Police Court occupied by Magistrate Langley, there was a temporary premium on the accommodation of the usually commodious county building.

When the court announced that all witnesses must retire until they were called it seemed from the exodus that the big room would be entirely left to Judge Huycke and the jury.

Mr. Kerr and Mr. Gordon are again the opposing counsel. Mr. Kerr is acting for the plaintiff, Harding, and Mr. Gordon for Batten the defendant.

The Jury.

The jury selected for this case is as follows:

W. J. Northey, Andrew McIntosh, Jos. Sanderson, Wm. Preston, Thos. O'Reilly, Harry McDonald, Ira Goodfellow, Ed. Richardson, Wm. Jones, Uriah Payne, A. Olin, Nelson Beavis.

Judge Had Doubts.

As a preliminary, the two lawyers asked for permission to retire for a few minutes for a consultation.

Judge Huycke was unwilling to grant any delays. He remarked that already too much time had been consumed in this court sittings.

Mr. Gordon said that possibly the proposed caucus might result in abbreviating the work of the court.

His Lordship replied that he "feared the Greeks even bearing gifts."

The case finally proceeded.

Sydney Watley.

The first witness said he was a farmer living in Douro. On the day after the Lakefield fair witness met Batten on the hill at George Garbutt's. Batten said: "Harding is the man who stole my lumber and I can prove it."

Batten had introduced the subject and witness understood that Frank Harding, the plaintiff, was meant.

In cross-examination, Mr. Gordon opened questions that stirred up affairs of eight years ago. Judge Huycke refused to permit the lid to be lifted from gossip of such ancient vintage.

When Batten told him that Harding had stolen his lumber witness did not believe the statement nor did it change his opinion of the plaintiff.

Witness told Harding what being said about him. He felt it a duty toward Harding.

He had talked the matter over with Harding three or four times. They had known each other since boyhood and have always been intimate neighbours.

John R. Payne.

John R. Payne of Warsaw, said he had a conversation with Batten in the Lawless Hotel, Lakefield, about Sept. 10 and 11.

He said: "Go and tell Frank Harding that he stole 4,000 feet of pine lumber out of my pig pen loft, and I have witnesses to prove it."

The words were spoken loudly enough for others standing by to hear.

Batten was telling this same story to others when witness said, "That's pretty strong words unless you can prove them." Then Batten turned and told him to take the story to Harding.

To Mr. Gordon witness said he was a representative of the Peterborough Hamilton Co. Batten was agent for the Massey-Harris Co. He had always found Batten a decent citizen. Less than a month after that conversation witness repeated the Batten assertion to Harding.

Did Batten ask you in Lakefield before Sidney Manning and Bruce Reid if you had heard him say that Frank Harding had stolen his lumber and you said you had never heard him say it?

I won't swear it.

Witness said there was a crowd around and he could not recall what he said.

He might have said, "I never said any such thing," in a conversation in the Lawless house, but witness would not swear it.

Witness said Batten had helped him out of a scrap on one occasion, but he also helped him into that same scrap.

Witness said he did not believe the Batten story that Harding had stolen the lumber for he had known Harding all his life.

Garfield Dunford.

Witness said he had met Batten on Aug. 4, 1914 at Dunford's own place. In a conversation Batten said, "I believe as I have to meet my God that Frank Harding is the man who stole my lumber." First they began talking about the war, then Batten said it was an awful world and that led to his telling about Harding. Batten had come to Dunford's to repair a binder.

Who were there besides you and Batten?

My brothers.

Who were they?

My own brothers I suppose.

Mr. Gordon verbally scorched witness when he told him that freshmen would not go.

I suppose you were surprised when Batten told you [illegible]

Well no!

Witness added that he had once heard Harding blamed of theft of Mr. Cooper's wood. He didn't believe it.

When did you hear Batten's words last.

On Thursday of last week.

Witness said he did not believe the story about Harding.

You're a rather frequent visitor at Harding's.

Judge Huycke—That may prove an embarrassing question to the young man.

Mr. Gordon—Your keeping company with Harding's daughter?

Witness admitted it.

And you're not ashamed of that?

No, sir.

With marriage in the near future?

I'm not telling everybody about that.

Thomas J. Doughty.

Witness said he had met Batten in the Dummer cemetery. Batten said: "Did you not hear about Harding stealing my lumber?

I said "no."

He said, "I've been telling that to every person."

I said it was hard lines to tell about a man unless you were prepared to prove it.

He said—I want you to go and tell him that I'm telling it to other people.

Did you say you had heard Harding had stolen lumber before?

I never said it.

Or chickens?

No. I don't remember ever hearing of it. I didn't believe it then or now.

Your friend is a relative of Hardings?

Yes.

Your families have always been on friendly terms?

Yes.

John Cridland.

Witness corroborated Doughty's evidence. Batten said to Doughty, "You can go and tell Harding if you like." The conversation took place on May 9th, 1914.

"How many feet of lumber were mentioned," Mr. Kerr asked.

I forget whether it was 500 or 5,000 feet.

To Mr. Gordon—Did you hear Mr. Doughty say anything about Harding taking his chickens?

I heard him say something about chickens and wood.

And whom were you talking about. Harding I suppose.

If Doughty denies saying anything about chickens he must be mistaken?

That's what I would say.

"I think as much of Harding as ever. Batten is a good citizen."

To Mr. Kerr, witness said Batten could do his share of talk.

When Doughty was telling about chickens were you talking about Harding.

Yes.

Frank Harding.

Mr. Gordon opened his defence by the unusual proceeding of calling the plaintiff, quoting Black vs. Rogers.

You were not called by Mr. Kerr.

No.

Do you know Capt. Anderson?

Yes.

Did you go to camp when he was in charge?

Yes.

Did you ever remove an overcoat from the camp?

No, sir.

Mr. Kerr objected that the court could not be used to blacken the witness.

Mr. Gordon claimed that he could question the plaintiff to contradict him by witnesses.

Judge Huycke objected and wanted to know what authority he had for making the claim.

Mr. Gordon said he had asked for an adjournment when he hoped to be able to present authority.

Mr. Gordon then said he desired to ask Harding a list of questions regarding the camp.

Mr. Kerr objected on previous grounds regarding the propriety of the questions.

You have not lost the society of friends.

Yes I have.

Why did your lawyer then remove mention of that from the statement of claim?

I'm not a lawyer; I don't know.

You have claimed $1,500 damages by reason of things said by Wm. Batten. How do you decide it?

I will leave that to the Judge and Jury.

But how do you make up that $1,500.

Witness would not answer and His Lordship upheld him owing to the nature of the case.

When did you first see John R. Payne?

About 25 years ago.

When did he tell you Batten had said something about you?

Last fall in Warsaw.

Batten drove past and Mr. Payne told me that Batten said I stole his lumber and he had witnesses to prove it.

And when you say in your record.

Mr. Kerr objected that Mr. Gordon's examination was becoming a cross-examination.

When did Thomas Doughty make his statement to you?

On the way into Peterborough. I met him when I was going in to lay the information.

Witness said Doughty and Garfield Dunford volunteered their information.

Was Cridland the only one you asked about what Batten said.

I think he was.

Witness said he had never heard about wood or chickens as referred to by Cridland's story of a talk with Thos. Doughty. There had never even been a claim made on him for chickens.

Court adjourned at six o'clock.

THE BEST TREATMENT FOR CONSTIPATION

The Experience of One Who Knows and Places Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills First

It is not difficult to secure a medicine that will effect movement of the bowels To cure Constipation and the complications which arise from it is another matter.

Constipation of the bowels is usually preceded by torpid action of the liver. Hence it follows that if Constipation is to be cured the liver must be set right. And here lies the secret of the success of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They awaken the action of the liver and insure a good flow of bile, which is nature's cathartic. The liver, kidneys and bowels are invigorated and regulated, and the troubles with the digestive system disappear.

Mr. H. M. Bell, Innisfail, Alta., writes: "For some considerable time I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I have obtained through your firm. I suppose during my life I have used nearly all the best-known pills, as I have been subject to Constipation and digestive troubles. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I can honestly say that of all the pills I have tried nothing has suited me better—no griping—action always insured, and fine for the kidneys. This is how I have found them after a thorough test, and you may use this statement if you like."

This letter should convince you of the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but there is nothing like personal experience. If you do not feel like risking 25 cents for a box, write to us for a free sample box, mentioning where you saw this advertisement. Put this medicine to the test when you have indigestion, constipation, biliousness, backache or kidney derangements. The results will soon prove to you the superiority of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

A VERY CHARMING SACQUE.

By Anabel Worthington.

One scarcely expects to find a négligée or dressing sacque with any new features nowadays; it seems that every possible design has been evolved. But this pretty sacque is novel in several ways. The collar is the detail that gives it particular distinction, a collar conventional enough in front but reaching in the back nearly to the waistline. The ribbon belt disappears in front and back in an interesting way, the back being shirred across the centre. It would be pretty to buttonhole the edges in the manner illustrated, though they could be ribbon trimmed or even finished with plain hems, if desired.

The sleeve is a graceful one, not full, but a little wider at the lower edge than at the top. Cotton crepe is always a good selection for designs like this, and then there are dimity, lawn and plain and figured silks to choose from. The garment is very easily made and should be easy to launder if the materials are suitable. Medium size requires 2½ yards of 36 inch material. The pattern, No. 7,155, comes in six sizes, from 34 to 44 inches bust measure.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

ENEMY DROP SHELLS INTO COMPIEGNE WITH NEW GUNS

Weapons of the Kind Used in Shelling Dunkirk Are Employed But Little Damage Was Done---German Attacks Around Souchez Are Becoming More Violent---Fresh Attempt to Be Made to Recapture Village.

LEMBERG SITUATION NOT ALARMING

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, June 15.—Compiegne, 45 miles north east of Paris, has been bombarded by the Germans. A shower of shells has fallen all around the historic old churches of the town, but an official statement from the war office this afternoon said that little damage was done. The new long range guns employed by the Germans along the seacoast hurled shells into the city from concealed positions. French aviators are reconnoitering over the enemy's lines to discover the location of the German batteries. The German attacks around Souchez are becoming more violent. There is every evidence that the enemy is preparing to launch a great attack to recover the village South of Arras infantry clashes continue. The war office this afternoon announces a repulse of strong attacks against the newly captured French trenches near the Quennevoire farm.

PETROGRAD, June 15.—A semi-official statement to-day reported fierce fighting along the river Skio, fifty miles west of Lemberg. General Mackensen's centre is attacking the Russian positions on the highway leading from Jaroslau to Lemberg.

The right wing of his combined armies is again on the offensive near Kosciska, on the Przemysl-Lemberg Railway.

Though the war office admits that the Russian line east of Jasoslau was bent back by superior forces of the enemy and the village of Tuchla captured, to-day's statement said that there was nothing alarming in the situation west of Lemberg. The Russians are strongly entrenched.

In the north the battle for Shavli continues with the Germans heavily bombarding the town. The Russian troops have recaptured trenches taken by the Germans north of Przasnysz.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—With the immediate strain, so far as negotiations with Germany are concerned, lifted, official attention today was centred on the British-American situation.

It is intimated unofficially from London that the new British note replying to the American protest against the order in council, is being prepared. Whether or not it is because of the seemingly increasing certainty of an amiable understanding with Germany, reports here have it that the note will be a flat denial of all the American contentions. The British foreign office it is reported plans to use the existing billion dollar trade balance as a proof of its contention that American commerce is not suffering as a result of the war.

It is understood that President Wilson will not take any further action with reference to the allies' interference with American trade until the German situation is satisfactory.

OTTAWA, June 15.—Up to ten o'clock this morning Canadian casualties total 8698; killed number 1383, wounded 5750, and missing 1610.

LONDON, June 15.—Premier Asquith was won over to the creation of a coalition cabinet reluctantly, only after he concluded that the national interests demanded broadening of the basis of government, he declared in the House of Commons thisafternoon. "It was repugnant to me to part with my loyal colleagues," he said, "but it was necessary to demonstrate that in a national crisis all party distinctions should be obliterated."

ROME, June 15.—Some excitement was caused here to-day by a rumour that Bulgaria had placed a large order for arms and ammunition in the United States through a prominent banking house. It was pointed out however that this is hardly probable as shipments would not reach Bulgaria or any other country not friendly to the allies so long as Britain and her allies control the seas.

SEVEN LIVES WERE LOST

LONDON, June 15.—The steam trawler Argyll has been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine. Seven of her crew lost their lives.

BERLIN, via wireless, June 15.—The Frankfurten Zeitung suggested editorially to-day that "America should concede to Germany what she had conceded to England." "America might admit German agents to oversee the loading of steamers at America ports and notify Germany if their cargo carry no contraband," said the Zeitung." "Such steamers would then be safe from German submarine attack."

SET FIRE TO FOREST

ROME, June 15.—In their attacks around Monfalcone, the Austrians set fire to forests by using incendiary bombs, the war office announced to-day. The flames were extinguished and the enemy driven back; the Italians continue to progress towards Trieste.

LONDON, June 15.—An official denial was made to-day of the report circulated in the United States that the British battleship Agamemnon has been sent down in the Dardanelles by a German submarine. It was further announced that no other fighting unit, not already officially reported, had been lost in the Dardanelles.

SYDNEY, Australia, June 15.—The Australian casualties in the fighting in the Gallipoli peninsula, include 1113 killed, 6472 wounded and 248 missing, according to the official statement to-day

LONDON, June 15.—The British naval casualties to June 1, total 13,547. Premier Asquith made the announcement in the House of Commons this afternoon.

BERLIN, via wireless, June 15. — The French aviators bombarded Karlsruhe yesterday, killing 11 persons.

PTE. H. H. CLARKE, of the 57th detachment, 2nd Battalion, wounded at Laugemarck. His mother lives in Omemee, but Pte. Clarke was a local resident for several years before war broke out.

NEW APPROPRIATION OF $1,216,000,000 NOW ASKED FOR

Premier Asquith Informs House of Commons That War Has Cost Great Britain $7,365,750 Daily Since Conflict Began

GREATER EXPENDITURES

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Eng., April 15.—Britain has spent $7,365,750 a day for war expenses alone since the beginning of the European conflict, Premier Asquith told the House of Commons this afternoon. He estimated the expenditures in the coming year are nearly double that amount, or fourteen and one-half millions per day.

In moving a new appropriation of one billion 216 millions for war purposes, the Prime Minister called upon all parties to support the Government in its request. The nation, he said, is passing through a great crisis, which is taxing its tremendous resources to the utmost.

A situation without parallel makes continued demands upon the energies of the nation, said Premier Asquith, but the measureless new credit demonstrates that after nearly a year of war British people are more resolute than ever to prosecute it to a successful finish. There is visible co-operation and an unreserved and whole-hearted concentration that can only mean a victorious issue.

INQUIRY INTO THE SINKING OF THE LUSITANIA

"Murderers" Who Violate Every Law of Humanity" is the Way Sir Edward Carson Describes the Crew of the German Submarine

STEAMER NOT ARMED

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Eng., June 15.—"Murderers, who violated every law of humanity," was the epithet applied to the submarine crew who sank the Lusitania, by the Attorney General, Sir Edward Carson, at the opening to-day of the formal inquiry in Central Hall, Westminister. Lord Mersey, who presided at the Titanic and Empress of Ireland inquiries, is presiding at the Lusitania probe.

In his opening statement Sir Edward denied that the Lusitania was armed or that she carried British troops. Sir Edward added that the Lusitania was making 18 knots when torpedoed and that possibly their torpedoes were shot against her side. He intimated that the inquiry must consider whether or not the captain of the Lusitania obeyed the Admiralty's instructions regarding "safe" course.

Testifying at the Lusitania inquiry this afternoon, Capt. W. T. Turner, denied under oath that the liner carried guns, either concealed or on decks.

"We were proceeding at only 18 knots an hour when the ship was struck at 2:15 p.m.," he testified. "Though the average speed throughout the journey from New York city had been 21 knots it was impossible to make 25 knots because the company ordered only 19 boilers worked."

ARCHBISHOP LANGEVIN PASSES AWAY

Special to the Examiner.

MONTREAL, June 15.— The Most Rev. Louis Philippe Laugevin, Archbishop of Manitoba, died here this morning after several weeks' illness.

The Most Rev. Louis Philippe Adelard Langevin was born at St. Isidore, Que., in 1855. He was ordained to the priesthood in 1[illegible]. For eight years he occupied the chair of Theology in the University of Ottawa. On invitation of the late Archbishop Tache, he went to Manitoba as Superintendent of the Oblat Missions of the Northwest. He succeeded Mgr. Tache as Archbishop of Manotoba, in 1895. His prominent connectio with the Separate school question in Manitoba forms part of the history of Canada. In 1897 his Grace received from Rome an endorsation of his course in this matter.

SERGT. P. VICTOR THANKS PEOPLE OF PETERBORO'

Wounded Sergeant Who is in Hospital Writes to Express Appreciation of the Kindness Shown Him

CHANCE TO HELP OTHERS

Below, the Examiner publishes a letter received from Sergeant Peter Victor of the 2nd Battalion, the first Peterborough boy to be wounded. It will be remembered that Sergeant Victor was shot through the legs and dangerously wounded while repairing a wire entanglement shortly after the 2nd Battalion were under fire for the first time. He has been in hospital for over four months in England. Shortly after he arrived in hospital he wrote home to his mother here to say that he alone had no visitors of all those in the hospital. It occurred to the Examiner that some letters from Peterborough would be appreciated and accordingly the circumstances were published. As expected, the good citizens of Peterborough rose to the occasion, as will be seen in the following letter which Sergt. Victor has asked the Examiner to publish:

To the wellwishers of Sgt. P. Victor

Dear Friends,—The amount of letters, parcels, and papers I have received from Peterborough has made it practically impossible for me to answer them all. I cannot tell you how pleased I was to receive such a lot of cheering letters Nothing cheers a fellow up so much as news from his home town. Then when you get cigarettes, etc., as well as news, well, it's enough to make you feel glad you're shot.

Thanking one and all for your kind wishes, I remain

Yours truly,
P. Victor, Sergt.
2nd Battalion, C.E.F., Hampstead Military Hospital, England.

What has been done in Sergt. Victor's case can be done for the other wounded Peterborough boys. The Examiner feels sure there are many citizens who would be glad to send letters and gifts to those brave lads if they knew where to send them. The Examiner has no list available, and here is where their relatives and friends can help. If they would please let the Examiner know as soon as possible the addresses of any wounded Peterborough boys or of those who have been captured the information will be published and there will be an influx of letters into the different hospitals and detention camps that will let the boys know they are not forgotten.

And, by the way there are the boys who have so far escaped. It is to be hoped that their friends will write as often as possible. Mothers will, of course, but the chums of the lads at the front should not fail to write. The men cannot get enough letters. As Sergt. Victor puts it: "Nothing cheers a fellow up so much as news from his home town." The boys must be lonely indeed, with so many of their friends gone, and letters from Peterborough will be doubly precious just now.

To wind up with, the Overseas Club Tobacco Fund list is not complete yet. A large number of citizens have subscribed the 25 cents asked for, but there is still a chance to help The list is available at the Examiner Office, at any time. When are you going to bring your quarter in?

"THE BOYS WILL KEEP ON SMOKING JUST THE SAME"

Major General Hughes Intimates That the Resolution of Toronto Methodists About Tobacco for Soldiers Will Have Little Effect

NO CRITICISM TO MAKE

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., June 15.—"I have no criticism to make of the action of the conference," said Major-General Hughes this morning regarding the resolution passed by the Toronto Methodist Conference condemning sending tobacco to the men at the front. "I have never smoked myself and nevrr feel the need of tobacco. It is a free country, and the conference is at liberty to move whatever resolutions it pleases. But I am afraid this resolution will have the same fate as most other resolutions. The boys will keep on smoking just the same, for which, of course, I am sorry," added the General as an afterthought.

GUNNER BRUCE SLOAN WRITES FROM THE FRONT

Mrs. Johnston, 110 Dublin St., received a letter this morning from her brother, Gunner Bruce Sloane, with the 4th Battery, 1st Brigade, as follows:

My Dear Sister.—I received your letter and was glad to hear from you; also to hear that you were all well. I am real well myself, and came through the Langemarck battle all right, and certainly had a hot time. I was with Joseph O'Toole when he got his wounds dressed. It cast a gloom over the whole battery.

I received your parcels and mother's socks. The last pair were dandy. The second last pair I carried around in my kit bag and a piece of German shell it and cut the socks right in two and, believe me, I went after the Germans then, and I didn't stop at hitting their kit bag either. I would not bother sending anything else as we are issued with everything we want; only be sure and send me the Examiner paper. I am always glad to get them. The rest of the Peterborough boys are all well. Give my love to all.

From your loving brother,
Bruce.

THE REASON.

Our business is growing so rapidly, showing a steady increase month after month is: Because our work is dependable, our glasses are unapproachable in quality, our prices are absolutely fair, and, because we are prompt. Tait Optical Co., 410 George St. ts-139

JUNE SESSION OF THE COUNTY COUNCIL COMMENCED TO-DAY

Representatives of the County Were Banquetted By County Treasurer Elliott—General Rate of the County Will be Increased So as to Provide Additional Revenue to Meet Uncontrollable Expenditures.

MONTHY GRANT OF $400

The regular June session of the Peterborough County Council opened this afternoon in the County Council chamber with Warden H. C. Kindred of Havelock, presiding. The members arrived in the City early this morning and congregated at the Munro House, where after an exchange of felicitations and views of current events, they accepted the invitation of County Treasurer Elliott to dine at the White House. Those present were Warden H. C. Kindred, Havelock; Councillors B. Squire, Norwood; H. G. Fitzgerald, Lakefield; M. Brown, Asphodel; W. E. Griffith, Belmont; N. Lean, Burleigh; F. J. Bullied, Chandos; C. J. Darling, Dummer; M. Walsh, Douro; W. C. Crough, Ennismore; C. Coben, Galway; E. Shaw, Harvey; J. McIntosh, Monaghan; H. J. Foster, Monaghan; W. A. Anderson, Otonabee; E. Doyell, Otonabee; F. McKee, Smith, and A. Jobs, Smith. Mr. R. Shaw did not arrive in time to be present at the luncheon. The latter was featured by speeches and fervid oratory of a patriotic nature. Warden Kindred in a few well chosen remarks, outlined the work that is in prospect. He also touched upon the seriousness of the situation through which the Empire was passing and expressed the hope that the conflict would terminate at an early date, and with the complete submission of German militarism. Other addresses of a similar nature followed, closing with a hearty vote of thanks for the host of the occasion.

The Tax Rate.

Among the more important business awaiting the Council when it gets down to committee work is the striking of the tax rate. One extra mill will have to be levied for the use of the Provincial Government. This alone will cost the county over nine thousand dollars. The Council will also be invited to continue the monthly grant of four hundred dollars for patriotic purposes. This amount has been contributed since November last. One month it is given to the Patriotic Fund, the second month to the Belgian Fund, and the third month to the Red Cross Fund. That the general rate will be increased at least one-half mill is practically certain. The present County Court sittings will cost the county well over a thousand dollars, so that this year will mean an increase all round if all the unforseen expenditures are to be met.

LA GUERRA

SOMMARIO PER GLI ITALIANI

La fiumana italiana irrompe vittoriosa oltre le barriere imposte dalla tirannide austriaca. Monfalcon oltrepassata, gl'Italiani hanno preso porto Rosego, situato a tre miglia più presso a Trieste.

Nel Tirolo-Trentino, gli Italiani avanzano verso Rovereto, a tredici miglia al sud-ovest di Trento, e verso Mori, a diciotto miglia. Queste due citta sono in procinto di cadere in loro potere.

A Vienna si vede la piu grande ansieta. Gli Austriaci si avvedeano che gli sforzi loro son desperati ed inutili, e sono furiosi per non esser sostenuti dai Tedeschi.

Le truppe italiane si sono ora fortemente stabilite nella citta di Gradisca, la quale era considerata come la chiave delle posizioni strategiche austriache nella regione dell'Isonzo.

Si rende noto agli Italiani residenti nei distretti consolari di Canada che sia stata indetta la mobilitazione nel Regno, e quindi i riservisti dovranno nel più breve tempo possibile mettersi con più vicina agenzia consolare. THE ONLY GOOD RUSSIAN.

With the Russian habit of coming back and refusing to be "knocked out," Germany will come to consider the only good Russian is the dead one, as United States people used to say of the Indians, whom their unwise treatment had spoiled.

SOMETHING ABOUT WOOD PAVEMENT.

In another part of this page is a paragraph issued by the Department of the Interior regarding the use of wood for street paving. It calls attention to a pamphlet of the Department [illegible] investigations into wood pavement. At a time when Peterborough is considering considerable street paving, and when our civic authorities are not quite sure in their own minds as to what the best paving material is, the study of this brochure might be instructive. If advice were permitted, it might be advised that the street authorities send for some of these pamphlets—on "Treated wood block paving." It gives a great deal of pertinent information, the latest facts and figures in regard to wood paving in Europe, and on this continent, especially showing the things to be guarded against to secure the best results.

IMPORTANT ANNIVERSARIES.

To-day, June 15th, marks the day when one, to escape penalty, must pay light rates; when to escape penalty, one may go fishing—at midnight, to-night. It also is the year of two great anniversaries. This year is the one hundredth anniversary of the battle and winning of Waterloo; and, also, the seventh hundred anniversary of the signing of Magna Charta, to which absolute King John, signed his name—or set his mark, for kings in those days were not scholars. The battle of Waterloo, was significant as it marked the attainment of what a great war is now being waged for, destruction of royal absolutism and unbridled ambition. It was complementary, or at least corresponded with another great anniversary that falls to-day. Seven hundred years ago to-day, June 15th, 1915, King John signed Magna Charta, which, if it did not at once give, led to the liberties we are enjoying to-day. It led up to limited monarchy in Britain; and from that has flown the splendid democracy of to-day, which makes Britons at home and abroad, the freest people on the face of the earth. It would not be a bad thing, as it is a probable thing, if this year, 1915, ended Kaiserism and all its works. It is at least, we feel and know, the beginning of the end.

MONEY IN MUD.

It is a truth as old as the world that the greatest gold mine in the world is not in rocks deep under ground, but in the first ten surface inches of the farmers' fields. We strive and organize capital in millions to get a comparatively scant return from mines; but with comparatively little capital, and comparatively little labour, we get big dividends from the soil. Soil products rule the money market. The bankers and financiers are even now getting together and talking about the crop prospects over their luncheon. They forecast the financial future by the look and promise of the crops, especially, in this country, the western wheat crop. The prospects at present are that it will be a bumper crop. With the largely increased acreage under crop in the west as well as the east, our harvest, with reasonably good weather conditions, should be a large one. In the western wheat belt there is an acreage of between twelve and thirteen million acres. With the average yield of 1913—21.04 per acre—the wheat crop of the west, should, this year reach the unprecedented Canadian total of 250 million bushels. With good prices, of which there is also a good prospect, a tidy sum should be realized in cash, from the 175 millions that will be available for sale or export. We have spent, or appropriated 150 millions for the war, and it is a strong proof of the possibilities of our soil production, if the cash proceeds of one single crop, among our many, should equal or overpass, and meet, or more than meet, our great expenditure for war purposes. This fact should give us a new view of the immense potentialities of production of our limitless expanse of agricultural lands.

HOME HELP FOR THE EMPIRE.

Should we in Canada have much sympathy with the proposal, now being put into effect, to take Canadian workmen to the Old Country to help make shells? We have made great efforts to people this country, and we can't spare any citizens except for the direct work of soldiering abroad. There is at present some considerable unemployment, but with our industries busy, and becoming more busy in producing shells, and with the prospect of unskilled labour being needed soon in great numbers to harvest an unusually large acreage of grain, we have no workmen to spare. There is no doubt that Britain needs every skilled hand she can get to increase the output of ammunition; but that alone does not justify us in sending away our good mechanics to help meet this need. We can as effectively help in this matter and still keep our mechanics at home.

Canada for months, has in proportion to her capacities, been turning out more shells than the British factories, that is those outside the establishments especially devoted to producing munitions of war. And if Britain will give us the orders, our capacity for shell production can be greatly increased. If we enlarge our factories and specially equip them for this purpose, we shall need our mechanics. We are, in this regard, just as effectively serving the Mother country by producing shells here, as if we sent overseas our own mechanics. And we can serve our country better; for, after the war is over we shall still have our skilled mechanics with us to find employment in peaceful production, which will probably greatly increase when normal peace conditions shall return.

We are willing to make large sacrifices to help Britain in her time of need; but we should not be called upon to make unnecessary sacrifices. If we can in our own interests do our bit in the way of producing our share of war munitions at home, we should do it. By utilising our mechanics to make shells at home we shall not only be giving our mechanics needed employment, but we shall be keeping them in the country, and at the same time be helping the Mother Country better than if we shipped our mechanics across the water. One chief objection to our contributing 35 million dollars to build warships in Britain, was the fact that the money of Canadian people, would be spent away from home, without benefit to the Canadian workmen, who pay their share of revenue, and would be personally benefitted by shipbuilding in Canada, not to speak of the added benefit of the incidental development of home resources.

UTILIZING OUR OWN PAVING MATERIAL.

Canada has millions of acres of the finest timber in the world, and the men and the mills to handle it. Many of our woods are not used for certain purposes because they have not been tested for those uses. Sometimes we have actually imported woods when we had better kinds at home, but did not know it. To make the best use of our native woods the Dominion Department of the Interior has established in connection with the Forestry Branch a forest products laboratory. This institution is constantly at work testing woods for paper making, building, furniture, etc. An investigation of the use of wood for block paving has just been completed, and the results issued in a pamphlet entitled "Treated Wood-Block Paving". This gives the latest facts and figures in regard to wood paving in Europe and America and removes many misconceptions. It shows the points to be guarded to secure the best results. All citizens interested in wood-block paving may have a copy of this pamphlet sent free to them by writing to the Director of Forestry at Ottawa.—Department of Interior.

Sudbury's Send-off To Her Soldier Boys

The Sudbury Star prints a report of the send off to six of her soldier boys on the point of leaving to join the overseas forces. The programme included a banquet at the Nickel Range Hotel and a gift of wrist watches. One of the departing lads was a Peterborough boy and the report thus refers to them:

"Jim" O'Brien, bookkeeper for D. L. McKinnon, wholesale grocer. He is a native of Lindsay, Ont., but most of his life has been passed in Peterborough. He is a son of Mr. O'Brien, Provincial Inspector of Separate Schools. He is prominent in social circles, widely known and liked. His bright, jolly nature is a characteristic and his humour has pleased more than one audience. It was the remark of many that it would be lucky company that gets "Jim" O'Brien as a member.

At the entertainment end of the banquet, the report states that "Jim" O'Brien's two well-rendered selections brought rounds of well-merited applause.

HOW UNCLE SAM COULD SMASH GERMAN SUBMARINE PERIL

A Fifteen Thousand Mosquito Fleet Could Be Speedily Mobilized and Sting Submarines to Death

The Kaiser, apparently obsessed by a notion that the American people, lacking a large army in readiness, cannot much damage his murderbuyd, seems to be offering one more strong confirmation of the general opinion of alienists that he is really insane, writes E. W. Thomson, of Ottawa in the Boston Transcript. For it is, in the belief of marine experts with whom I have talked, entirely probable that Uncle Sam could destroy every Prussian submarine within two months. Many of them, not less than twenty, appear to have been shot dead or rammed dead by the small number of destroyers and slow armed trawlers that Britain and France have been able to divert from the necessary business of guarding troopships and vessels transporting food and munitions.

THE MOSQUITO FLEET.

What if there were ten thousand swift motor boats, cabins rased, plank-decked, each with a rapid-fire swivel-gun, as easy to shift and aim as an ordinary duck-hunter's swivel, hunting for periscopes in submarine-haunted waters? Why, one or another or several of them would be in view of every five acres of the haunted water. What chance would a periscope have of being unshattered the moment it emerged? Thus the one-eyed submarine would be blinded. Up it must come soon. Its "tin" sides would be raked, riddled, the boat probably sunk by the mosquito fleet before it could get into action. At the worst, a small proportion of destroyers amongst the armed mosquito boats would "get" the submarine before it could let fly shells at more than a very few of the little periscope-hunters.

Now, I am credibly told that Uncle Sam, by commandeering or merely calling for fast motor-boats, forty feet long or more, each capable of crossing the Atlantic when flush-decked, could have 15,000 of such craft, all now in operation, from the Great Lakes and from American seacoasts, as fast as they could be assembled.

Fitting them for periscope hunting would be a short job. Probably all would be ready and armed and fitted with capable volunteer crews of gentlemen and fishermen, about six men to each boat, within six weeks. Let them start in fleets of say three hundred each, every fleet with its cruiser and its destroyers. How long before Brer von Tirpitz's whole array of submarines would have been added to the collection of Davy Jones?

SEEMLY AND PLEASANT.

How seemly and pleasant to utilize the Eitel Friedrich and the other Prussian cruisers now interned in United States waters for some protection to the mosquito fleet, while the Vaterland and all the other similarly interned Prussian merchant craft were employed to provision and give petrol to the little chaps. I say "Prussian" because it would seem to me in the nature of slander to impute the all-round deviltry of Wilhelm, Von Tirpitz, and Berlin, to the usually lovable, admirable, presently misled and bedevilled German race, to which the Prussians really do not belong, so ethnologists relate.

The Odin followers of Prussia affect to be Germans by virtue of a claim that Germans belong to them. In the admirable preface of Jeremiah Curtin to Henry Sienkiewicz's great war novel, "The Deluge," it is remarked that the Prussians were subjects of the Polish crown until about A.D. 1350, a race not even professedly Christianised till near that time. Which may go far to explain Trietzke, Bernhardi, Wilhelm, Von Tirpitz, the excessive ferocity of Prussia, and the persistent, stupid, diabolism of Prussia's armed services in the present "Made-in-Germany" war.

Canadians Are Now Brigaded With the Indian Divisions

LONDON, June 15.—From a Montreal officer your correspondent learns that the remnants of the two Indian divisions and the Canadian divisions are now brigaded together on the extreme right of the British line at the front, having the French at their right. The amalgamated brigade is commanded by Gen. Alderson.

A party of medical men for the R.A.M.C., which arrived from Canada at the week-end, included Drs. Henri Lasnier and N. J. Costello. Lieuts. H. M. Dubrulle, Maurice Bauset and J. F. Verville have arrived to join the 22nd battalion at Shorncliffe.

SATURDAY'S GAMES IN CITY BALL LEAGUE

The bill of fare for Saturday afternoon's City Baseball League will be Empires vs. East City, at 2 p.m., and Thistles vs. Classics at 4 p.m.

The Empires are strengthening this week and expect to be in a position to present some new faces on Saturday's line-up.

Huycke will, it is expected, do the heaving for the Thistles, with Gus. Rose opposing. This should be an exceptionally good card. The Thistles and Empires are at the bottom of the heap at present, but a win for each on Saturday will put the four on an even footing.

Officers Elected

The schedule for the season was arranged.

GAMES WERE POSTPONED

The following Inter-Caholic League games, scheduled for to-night have been postponed until Friday evening.

Sacred Heart vs. Church of the Immaculate Conception at Riverside Park.

Knights of Columbus vs. St. Peter's at Sacred Heart Grounds.

CHALLENGE SPRINT AT RIVERSIDE PARK

E. T. Davis of the Foley and Gleason Company had an idea that he was a "good-enough" sprinter to trim Don Shook and Frank Pidgeon of the Oriental. As a result of numerous challenges and that sort of talk the three went over to Riverside last night to get a decision. Frank Brady was stake holder and W. J. Drysdale of Kingston, was starter. The 90 or 100 yards revealed the fact that as a sprinter, friend Davis is going back, if he was ever up there, which some doubt. The official time was 10 1-5 secs., with Frank Pidgeon taking the change.

GOLF

The fourth draw for the Stratton Trophy to be played by Wednesday night, is as follows:

ADELE BLOOD WAS ATTACKED AND ROBBED

BUFFALO, June 15.—Adele Blood, the actress, was attacked by a man in the home of H. Montgomery Gerrans, 513 Delaware Avenue, where she has been staying since her engagement here, and robbed of $3,200.

Miss Blood told detectives that she returned to the Gerrans' home shortly before midnight, going there direct from the theatre. She says she had $3,200 in a mashbag around her neck. Upon reaching her apartments, Miss Blood says she took off her street clothes and donned a kimono. She then went to the first floor where she used the telephone.

Turning from the telephone, Miss Blood told the detectives, she was attacked by a slim man about 35 years old. She says the man choked her and tried to tear a ring from her finger. Unsuccessful, Miss Blood says, he grabbed the mashbag. The actress and the thief wrestled for several minutes, Miss Blood told the police, and they struck a window which crashed, attracting the attention of Patrolman Henry Kercher, who was passing. The thief escaped through a rear door, it is believed, after breaking the window.

Patrolman Kercher found Miss Blood lying on the floor bleeding from slight wounds. Other persons in the house were aroused by the struggle and reached Miss Blood about the same time the policeman did.

Miss Blood told the police she drew $3,200 from the Manufacturers and Traders Bank. She says she intended paying royalties on her plays. The actress was soon revived after the attack, and outside of a few scratches, she was not hurt.

The police are looking for a man formerly employed by Miss Blood. Miss Blood discharged him two weeks ago.

CLOTH FOR THE FIREMEN'S UNIFORM

Tailor Who Secured Contract Has Difficulty In Securing a Supply

Mr. T. L. Anderson, who received the contract for the firemen's uniforms, reported to the Fire, Water and Light committee, his inability to secure a sufficient supply of cloth of the kind specified in the contract. He was informed by the firm supplying the cloth that they could only supply 5½ 1-4 yards. To fill the contract he would require 75 yards. He could get 14 yards of another cloth, a sample of which he submitted, which would be enough for the uniforms, but not the extra trousers. It was decided to leave the matter with Ald. Duffus, chairman of the committee, and Fire Chief Howard to deal with.

A letter was read from Walter Peters, calling attention to the lack of lights on Reid street, north of London street, and suggesting lights at the corners of Reid and Stewart streets, Reid and Smith streets, Reid street and Victoria avenue and Reid and Dublin streets, and saying that he would be willing to turn the lights off and on if a switch were placed on his verandah.

The matter will be considered when the committee report on the result of their inspection, which was carried out at the conclusion of the meeting. Streets reported inadequately lighted were included in the inspection.

Voice of The People

REPLY TO ALD. GREEN.

To the Editor The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I would like to reply to the article in last week's paper regarding the discussion by the Board of Works. I would like to ask Alderman Green as to how they sanded the city streets last winter with North Monaghan sand without him knowing where it came from. Also, if no sand was drawn from North Monaghan, I would like to ask him the size of the workmen's boots when they could hold a yard and a half. I am,

NORTH MONAGHAN.

Bryan Sent $500 to Canada In Aid of Interned Prisoners

WELLAND, June 15.—That former Secretary of State W. J. Bryan is not unfriendly to the German people is shown, says the Telegraph, by an incident that has not been related in the public prints. Some three months ago there was received at Welland a cheque of $500 from Mr. Bryan "for the alleviation of distress among interned Germans in this county." It was a personal gift from the United States Secretary of State and it was intended that no one should know anything about it. It was found, however, that we have not a solitary German interned in this county, so negotiations were entered into with a view to having the money diverted for the use of Austrians and Hungarians. The Telegraph has not learned that such diversion was made, but thinks that the money was returned to Mr. Bryan.

GERMANY'S GREAT MILITARY TRACTOR.—The preparedness of Germany is evidenced from the fact that there are now with the German-Austrian forces on the eastern front, in the fighting against the Russians, one thousand of these great draught machines, capable of pulling two hundred thousand tons altogether of guns or supplies for the Kaiser's hosts.

For First Time In Memory of Almost Every Inhabitant London Will Have No "Outdoor" Shows

London, June 12.—For the first time since almost any one can remember, London is exhibitionless this summer. Not, perhaps, that it matters much, as everybody has far more serious things to think about than "wiggle-woggles," mountain railways, "flip-flaps" and so forth. But it is indeed, a long time since a summer went by without something of the sort going on. Both Earl's Court and the White City are closed, owing to the stern necessity of war.

But something of the sort will remain; that is, the Royal Botanic Gardens, Regent's Park. The season commenced there on Saturday afternoon, when the band of the Coldstreams played under the direction of London's old friend, Captain Mackenzie Rogan. The grounds are beautiful at this season of the year, with their rock gardens, wood and glades and beds of gorgeous flowers, and when you are there you find it difficult to believe that you can get to Piccadilly Circus in less than ten minutes.

But, despite the glorious weather, the river is almost deserted. At Maidenhead and Taplow the other day only one boat was seen moving, and that contained two young boys. All the launches were still, and the engineers to keep them in trim take trips alone up and down the river. And May is near an end. Many of the houseboats and bungalows are to let.

For one reason, the "slacker" has not the courage to stand the taunts of persons on the banks. A few days ago two young men of military age ventured in a canoe up the river. They soon returned, for as they passed a group of soldiers they were greeted with cries of "That's easier than soldiering, isn't it?" Further on they had a dozen "Tommies" whistling and singing fortissimo "Your King and country need you."

But a sight that does one good to see is the "river girl" punting wounded soldiers about.

Hat Styles Change.

And the glorious weather, of course, has changed all the hat gear. The straw hat sprang up like a mushroom. The new straw hat for men is higher in the crown than its predecessors, a style that London owes to America, where it has been in vogue for two summers. Simultaneously with the heightening of the crown there is a narrowing of the brim. A hatter hard by the Temple keeps a special supply of old fashioned straw for Temple dwellers, who are conservative in their hat tastes and will have nothing to do with narrow brims.

Queen Mary always manages to do the right thing whenever she appears at a public place. When she was making the round of the stalls at the Industrial Fair at the Agricultural Hall all her questions implied that her sole interest was to hear of successful methods for defeating German trade and spoiling imports in this country. Her Majesty was all smiles to everybody, and distributed her friendly little nods right and left to delighted stallkeepers. She was wearing a tight fitting lavender gray dress, without any coat or cloak or furs, for it was very warm. Her black straw hat was adorned in front with a bunch of deep red flowers.

When she sat in the royal box with the King at the charity matinee at the Palace Theatre she was wearing exactly the same gray dress that she wore at the fair. But she had a white hat with a tall white feather and diamonds sparkled in her ears. Princess Mary was in pink, with a white hat that had a white scarf wrapped around the crown. The King sat between the Queen and Princess and wore, as usual, a big white flower in the buttonhole of his frock coat and dark brown gloves.

The Russian opera season at the London Opera House, which begins on May 29, is going to be a very brilliant affair. As there is no season at Covent Garden, everybody is of course grateful for it. It is really due to the personal enterprise of a young Russian tenor, Wladimir Rosing.

A special feature of the season will be the number of pieces which will be performed for the first time in London. Three of these are "Pique Dame," by Tschaikowsky; "Mozart et Salieri," by Rimsky-Korsakoff, and "Mam'selle Fifi," by Antonovitch Cui. All the operas will be produced in the new Russian method, with no footlights, but with special lighting effects elsewhere.

Japanese Woman in Opera.

Among the artists is Mlle. Mignon Nevada. Many nationalities with the exception of Germany are represented. There is even a prima donna from Japan, Mme. Tamaki Miura. She is to appear in special performances of "Madame Butterfly," for which special Japanese scenery has been painted. She is a dainty little person, full of vitality, and with a charmingly clear, sweet voice.

The war has added a new word, a German word, too, to the English language. During the German baiting at Smithfield one of the meat porters is reported to have said with true Cockney wit, "Strafe 'im, boys." It has been quoted so often since that it looks as if "strafe" had come to stay. At any rate, that meat porter has made thousands laugh in these days of gloom.

Talking about gloom, Mme. Tussaud is said to be in great trouble. People are said to be writing that the Kaiser's counterfeit presentment in the great work should be put up in the Chamber of Horrors. But it is said the other horrors are objecting and there is some danger that the wax may run riot. One man recently went up and smacked the Kaiser's face.

Too many people spend the best part of their time blowing holes in the atmosphere.

To obtain a powerful searchlight with comparatively weak current a Frenchman has mounted a number of tungsten lamps on a revolving disk, each in turn being illuminated briefly and their combined rays being collected by a reflector.

ENEMIES INTERNED IN THE DOMINION

OTTAWA, June 15.—Canada has about five thousand alien enemies on its hands at present, and in addition between seven and eight thousand dependents are being maintained. Since th sinking of the Lusitania, 1,500 of them have been gathered in, 800 being interned at Burnie, B.C., alone last week. With the opening of summer, the attempts to escape have been more numerous, but none got away.

Stumping machines and farm implements are being taken up to Kapuskasing and Spirit Lake, where model farms are being established.

Scout News

All members of the Boy Scouts are requested to meet at the Armouries at 7.30 p.m., sharp, on Friday, June 18th.

To the citizens of Peterborough:—The Boy Scouts are holding an excursion to Scotch Bush on Monday, June 28th. Tickets are as follows: Adults, 60c.; children 35c. It is hoped that the people of Peterborough will take heed, and join in the fine picnic.

J. J. CROWE OF DUMMER AMUSED COURT IN SLANDER TRIAL TO-DAY

Had a Good Natured But Blustery Clash With F. D. Kerr—Explained His Position Toward The Two Parties—Loved His Relative But Loved Honesty More.

This morning's evidence in the Harding vs. Batten slander action for $1,500 damages was mostly J. J. Crowe, of Dummer. He was called by the defense, but it was under cross-examination that he rocked the court in laughter at his exchanges with Mr. Kerr. It seems that J.J., whom everyone of course knows, is something of a Solon in Dummer, an oracle, and by his own testimony, a man who loves honesty and probity, and binds all his efforts to further it.

This morning's bearing was as follows:

Harding.

Mr. Gordon—Did you make a threat to Allen Payne yesterday?

Mr. Kerr objected.

Judge Huycke—I can't allow that question. He is your witness. Under cross-examination it would be different.

Mr. Kerr—Did I understand you to say yesterday that you had never taken anything of Doughty's?

Yes.

What are your relations with him?

The very best.

Mr. Kerr wanted to ask witness if he could say whether he knew Batten's story had been widespread.

The question was not allowed.

John J. Crowe.

To Mr. Gordon witness said he had a conversation with Harding during the summer at the Indian River.

Mr. Kerr interposed. "If Mr. Crowe got started the whole court would not stop him." Mr. Kerr questioned whether Mr. Gordon's query was relevant to the issue.

Mr. Gordon— There hasn't been a question in the last 24 hours which was not objected to by my learned friend.

Mr. Gordon said that Mr. Kerr did not know what question was to be poached.

Mr. Crowe—The conversation was in connection with Batten's story. I said it was too bad they were not friends and it was best to settle it. Mr. Harding said he wouldn't settle it. I told him he would not make any friends out of it. He said he didn't care a —— what he got, but he would put Batten in for the cost.

At this point a baby commenced to cry.

Mr. Gordon began to make a question and then warned witness not to answer.

Mr. Kerr objected to this method.

Judge Huycke said he was sick and tired of objections. Whenever Mr. Kerr and Mr. Gordon came together, His Honour remarked, that contentions were unending.

Mr. Gordon submitted another question. Mr. Kerr objected and Mr. Crowe grew weary in the box, waiting and watching the court and lawyers reading various volumes of rules and regulations regarding permissable evidence in this case.

Another baby grew too noisy and was removed.

Mr. Gordon said he wanted to examine witness in regard to plaintiff's general character and reputation.

Mr. Kerr suggested that Mr. Gordon should submit in writing questions which might not be upheld by the court, but which might influence the jury. Mr. Kerr said that apparently Mr. Gordon intended to question Mr. Crowe and other witnesses and the evidence after being stated would not be allowed. The jury would think that there must have been something up the court's sleeves, and they might be influenced by what would be said even though it was ruled out.

Mr. Gordon— Did or did not Frank Harding admit stealing lumber from Mrs. Cooper?

Question not allowed.

Mr. Gordon—Do you know the general reputation of Frank Harding for honesty in your township.

Question disallowed on the ground it was general evidence.

And again the court languished and no one invited Mr. Crowe to be seated in the box, while the law books were being delved for rules and precedents.

His Honour remarked that he considered he had power to allow the last question, but he did not know a good reason for allowing it.

His Honour finally remarked that he would allow that one question.

Mr. Kerr hurried another "Jack Johnson" volume into action and trained a shell or two (clauses) on the judge's decision.

Desultory interchange between the bench and the bar to the utter mystification of everybody but a couple of kindergarten law clerks.

"I think I understand your point," His Honour said to Mr. Kerr.

Mr. Crowe sat down weary but patient.

Mr. Crowe said he knew Harding well.

Is his general reputation for honesty good or bad?

It's bad.

Mr. Kerr asked witness if he had not gone with Batten up and down the sideroads getting evidence.

Witness said he called on three persons Name them.

Harry Bell—Harry Bell—Wait till I see ——.

Mr. Kerr—Out with them.

Oh, I'll out with them all right.

Witness recalled Mrs. Payne as a second.

He admitted being in the box twice before.

You worked up the case for Mrs. Calder?

I subpoenaed witnesses for her.

Is it not known in Dummer that you are a vindictive man.

I've a reputation as a straightforward man.

Aren't you known as a strife-maker?

No.

Witness subpoenaed Jos. Crowe also.

Did you talk with any of the witnesses before this case?

Not that I remember.

Do you know.

I don't keep a memoranda.

Apparently not when you come to court. You bear Harding no ill-will?

I want to see only justice done.

That's out of the kindness of your heart?

Mr. Crowe said he tried to uphold justice and truth.

Regarding his own reputation witness said—"I've not established a reputation of stealing all kinds of things, for Sabbath breaking or for driving to church on Sunday with a fish spear in my buggy.

Story of Scrap.

Mr. Kerr asked witness if his nephew, Gordon Crowe, had not been in a fight with Harding, and if it had no bearing in his attitude toward Harding.

I got word, witness said, that they were separated. The fight did not come to a finish. A constable took Gordon to court, and the next day Harding swore a deliberate lie in court.

Which was found guilty?

I don't know. One swore himself out, and the other paid his way out.

Which one paid?

I understand Gordon paid his fine. Is there anything more you want to know about it

Mr. Kerr—Did anyone lay an information against Harding for perjury?

No.

They just went around repeating "they say." Is that a habit you have up there?

Didn't Know Turtle Variety.

Since then you and Harding have been billing and cooing like turtle doves?

I never saw a turtle dove. Talk about something I know, a goose or—

Mr. Kerr—Or a hawk. You've not acquired any of the characteristics of that bird?

When you were at Harding's last you were there with a search warrant. Who asked you to get that?

I didn't get it. Don't think you can make a point on that. I got the warrant from Mr. Cochrane.

Wasn't Batten behind it?

No.

Will you swear it?

Yes.

Witness admitted he had a conversation with Batten.

Did Cochrane see Batten that day?

I don't know.

Mr. Kerr, continuing—J. J. Crowe.

Witness—He's a terror to you.

—From his duties as a constable and without any malice went to Harding's with a search warrant?

Yes. Would you like to know what we found?

Did you lay any information against Harding?

No.

Did Cochrane?

I don't know.

Does J. J. Crowe know that when a crime is discovered he has a duty to perform?

Mr. Crowe — If you'd look me in the face—I don't like you facing off that way.

Mr. Kerr—You want to see whether the questions I am asking are important or not?

Yes.

Is that out of your innocence of heart, or the sunning of your mind?

Put it down to both.

Laid An Information.

Did you lay an information against Harding?

You know I did.

Mr. Crowe refered to a Division Court case for $85 he won from Harding.

You were my counsel. I have to jog your memory. It's not very good.

Mr. Kerr—That was not a criminal case. You know the difference. Did you have any hard feeling toward Harding.

Witness—"When I beat him and made him pay his honest debt I had no hard feeling."

"When the case was going on you had no ill-will toward him?"

"I wanted to make him pay."

When you won the decision, and had the money in your pocket your love and affection toward Harding returned?

"Oh, no. I don't love anybody like I do my wife. (The Crier had to call order in the Court.) I told Harding I had nothing against him."

Talked to Witnesses.

Witnesses admitted talking to witnesses in this case.

The witnesses came to me and told me what they were prepared to prove against Harding. They came to me. I didn't go to them."

"They wanted me to know what they could prove."

And you know no reason why they went to you except that you were regarded as a man who was interested in Truth and Righteousness in your community?

"I was the only one who could explain any technical points of law."

"And the best speaker in the community?"

"You know that."

"The best talker from away back?"

His Honour—"Don't call Dummer away back."

A Breezy Passage.

Mr. Crowe again referred to what Batten said. If he could have proved that Harding had taken the wood he would have had him up in 48 hours."

"Did he tell you that more than once?"

"Yes, and more than twice. How many more times do you want?"

Witness said he had the witnesses who could prove it but Mr. Kerr was trying to prevent the evidence from coming out. In the midst of a real J. J. Crowe address Mr. Kerr told him to keep quiet.

Perhaps you want to get your own wind, was the laughing come back.

Further on, Mr. Crowe said: 'When a man says a thing to me once, I can remember."

"Is your hate and ill-will of the same variety?

"No, sir. I'm not built that way."

"You haven't a reputation as one who neither forgets nor forgives?"

"I have no reputation like that."

Story Was Spread.

Do you know from your own information that Batten repeated the same thing to quite a number of others?

"I guess he has."

"This story about Harding has travelled extensively."

"Yes, I guess Harding spread it as much as anyone else."

Witness said he hadn't been around Dummer to see who knew it. My duties don't take me up and down Dummer to find out what people hear.

Question of Arrests.

How many men have you arrested in the last two years?

"None."

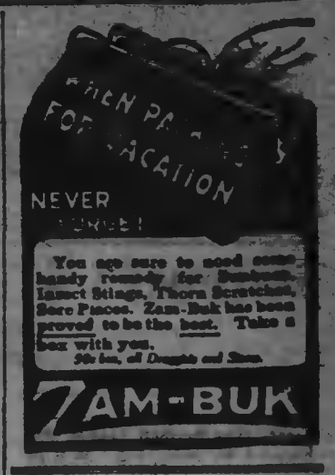
"Informations laid?"

"None."

Witness, as Constable, had arrested no person. He laid an information as License Inspector.

"Did you ever, as County Constable, execute a search warrant?"

"Yes, one besides the Harding warrant."



NEVER
You are sure to need some handy remedy for Sunburn, Insect Stings, Thorn Scratches, Sore Places. Zam-Buk has been proved to be the best. Take a box with you.
ZAM-BUK

"That was since your lawsuit with Harding?"

"It was last Spring."

It was after the rumour started that Harding was going to make trouble for Batten.

I think it was.

And aside from Crowe (witness) getting busy on this he hadn't done anything in five years?

That's right. But I was sent for, I didn't ask for the job.

Witness said he generally had people make up their differences and be friends, his own adaptation of the Golden Rule.

Mr. Kerr spoke of arrests in the Gow neighbourhood.

You were not called in on these?

No. Do you want to know why?

Witness admitted that he was regarded as something of a lawyer and solicitor in Dummer.

Had His Own Opinion.

Did you not tell Fred Parsons in the Hunro House that you were Solicitor for Batten?

Not that I remember.

You had a conversation with Parsons?

I wouldn't know him if I saw him.

Mr. Crowe admitted that he had used an expression in a jocular manner about advising Batten. He was peeved when Mr. Kerr demanded a straight answer and would not allow the explanation. Witness was hitting into another speech when Mr. Kerr said: [illegible] after his interests in the box.

I can look after myself.

You made use of the expression.

I made use of it as a joke.

Did you for fun, or a joke or as truth or in any other way make use of the expression that you were solicitor for Batten.

Witness replied that he had said that some mentioned him, in fun, as "Batten's detective."

Witness sailed away into another address for Mr. Kerr's benefit, and the latter cut in with a "shut up," and the court cautioned witness to merely answer the questions.

Mr. Crowe said Batten was a friend of his. He liked Harding. Was he not a blood relation.

"I don't like the idea that a friend of mine has a reputation like Harding's. His mother and me are first cousins.

COURT DECIDES THAT RATEPAYER CAN SUE

Legal Proceedings Will Be Taken Against City Board of Control

MONTREAL, June 15.—His Lordship Chief Justice Archibald has decided that Charles P. Dubuc, as a ratepayer of Montreal, has a right to take legal proceedings against the City Board of Control to prevent them making a contract with the Aztec Oil and Asphalt Refining Company for supplying asphalt to the city. Mr. Dubuc was the local agent for John Baker, Jr., of New York, who put in a tender for asphalt up to the end of this year at a lower figure than that of the Aztec Company when the Board of Control passed resolutions to give them the contract, and to give them a further contract for eight years, if they erected refinery works in this city. Mr. Dubuc applied to courts as a ratepayer of the city for an interim injunction to restrain the Board of Control from awarding the contract or acting on this resolution. The question as to whether he had a right to take such action was argued before the Chief Justice the latter part of last week, by Arnold Wainwright, K.C., for the petitioner; P. E. Lemarche, K.C., for the city, and F. P. Markey, K.C., for the Aztec Company, who intervened. The result was that the interim injunction was confirmed and the action will be heard on its merits before the Superior Court. The counsel for the Aztec Company claimed that their asphalt was pure Mexican asphalt, while that of the Company represented by the petitioner was a blend of three kinds. At the time this was claimed, however, His Lordship said that this was a matter to be decided when the case was heard on its merits and evidence taken. The Chief Justice said that the Board of Control had no legal right to reject the lowest tender unless valid reason could be shown for so doing. It would also be better for the Aztec Company themselves not to put to the expense and inconvenience of putting up works here, if the longer term contract were entered into only to find later that such contract was illegal.

More Munitions From Canada

High Commissioner Takes Up the Question With British War Office

LONDON, June 15.—Gen. Bertram's statement at Toronto, attributing to the British authorities the blame for the lack of ammunition orders for Canada, is being taken up with the War Office by Sir George Perley. The latter finds a discrepancy between that statement and the War Office's assurances, recently given, that Canada will receive all the orders it is possible to give her. It is largely a question, he suggests, of what sort of munitions Canada could supply in large quantities. The War Office requires complete and high explosive shells.

As regards the assertions of Mr. W. W. Butler, vice-president of the Canadian Car and Foundry Company, that J. P. Morgan and Company have raised opposition to some of the Canadian contracts, Sir George points out that the War Office deals directly with the Shell Committee of Ottawa, which has the decision concerning the placing of orders with Canadian firms. Any antagonism from the United States, Sir George surmises, would refer only to sub-contracts for parts given to American factories. If Canada can supply the exact article wanted, the Imperial Government can have no incentive to pass over offers made by Canadian concerns.

To prevent rear end railroad collisions an Illinois man has invented a danger signal that can be placed on a track that will derail a following train if not heeded.

Death of a Former Resident

Examiner Special:

ROCHESTER N.Y., June 14.—Geo. J. Kennedy, 43 years old, who was born in Lindsay, Ont., lived there for sixteen years, and then removed to Peterborough, Ont., afterwards coming to Rochester, died early Sunday following a brief illness, at his home here, 196 Whitney Street. Deceased leaves his mother, four sisters, Mrs. Wm. Hughes, Mrs. R. Hughes, Mrs. Fred Boldt and Miss Lottie Kennedy, all of Rochester, and one brother, Walter B. Kennedy, also residing in Rochester. Interment took place this (Monday) morning here in Mt. Hope cemetery.

Canning Trade Suffered Through Lack of Orders

The failure of the Dominion Canners to pay their preferred dividend and the reorganisation of the British Canadian Canners as foreshadowed by the forthcoming bondholders' meeting are of the utmost interest to grocers, both wholesale and retail.

It is evident that there will be a smaller pack this year than usual and that prices will be somewhat higher. The past year or two have been unfavorable to the canning trade as the big railway and construction camps have either reduced the number of employees to the minimum or entirely suspended operations. These were the big consumers of canned goods and their decreased orders naturally affect the trade.

MR. CARSON'S ABILITY IS RECOGNIZED

Summer School at Lake Couchiching, to serve on the Faculty staff for the summer session, which opens on June 27th, and closes August 13th. This must be taken as a splendid tribute to the ability of Mr. Carson as a Y.M.C.A. worker.

Responsible For The Reverse

WASHINGTON, June 15—The collapse of the apparently overwhelmingly victorious westward march of the Russian armies is directly attributable to the recent crisis in the relations between China and Japan, according to information which has reached diplomatic circles here.

At the beginning of the war Russia turned to Japan for a supply of war material. All the Japanese reserve ammunition which could safely be spared was despatched overland to Russia. In addition, the Japanese arms factories began to execute great contracts for all sorts of military equipment to Russia.

When the negotiations between China and Japan suddenly assumed a critical phase it is said the Japanese Government regarded it as prudent to retain in Japan these military supplies as a precautionary measure.

The effect was almost instantly manifested at the Russian front, for it developed that the Russians had exhausted their own reserve stock, and, with their limited manufacturing facilities, were dependent upon Japan.

Appeals were made to Japan to loosen the embargo and pressure was brought to bear through her allies. Now the current of supply has again been established.

Turks Trying To Get Separate Peace Terms

ROME, June 14.—Ever since Italy declared war against Austria (and, in a sense, war also against her ally, Germany), Turkey, the ill-starred partner of the "Kill or conquer" policy of Berlin, has realized the hopelessness of her position. Dismay has seized the governing party of Young Turks in Constantinople. They feel that the hour of retribution is at hand, and that they will be asked to pay to the utmost farthing the price of their ill-timed intervention on the side of Germany. From authentic information it can be stated that the present Government of Turkey has had enough of the German alliance. It is tired of the war, and ardently desires peace. It has been driven to entertain the possibility of separate peace because it can see no other feasible method of procuring the cessation of hostilities, for far as Turkey is concerned, on any other conditions.

It is worthy of note that Turkey has not declared war against Italy; further, it can be stated that Turkey has indirectly conveyed to Italy her intention not to declare war. This is not so much an ardent sign of friendship for Italy as it is of her early intention of divorcing herself from the unhappy alliance which has brought her to the verge of destruction and which menaces her integrity even as a nation. In view of the changed attitude of the Islamic partner of the Kaiser, it is significant that Naby Bey, Turkish Ambassador in Rome, and his whole staff are still in the Italian capital. According to information furnished, Naby and the members of the Cabinet will remain as heretofore.

AN EXPERIENCED NEGOTIATOR.

In view of the instructions received from Constantinople, and which Naby has communicated to the Italian authorities, the latter, while seeking cognisance, have tacitly approved these instructions. Naby, it may be remarked, has already acquired some fame as a peace emissary, for he was a member of the conference in Switzerland which helped put an end to the war between Turkey and Italy. It was said by one intimately qualified to express an opinion that Turkey is now casting about for a suitable modus operandi for treating with the quadruple alliance. Whether any Turkish proposals, informally submitted, and having for their basis the conclusion of a separate peace by the Islamic ally of the central powers, would be entertained by members of the quadruple alliance, is a question upon which it can be ventured at this stage to express no opinion whatever.

Britain Wants Deluge of Shells

LONDON, June 15—Addressing a meeting of masters and men at Bristol on Saturday, Hon. David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, said: "The whole nation is in the same boat, and unless every muscle is strained all will be swept down stream together. It is a question either of common weal or common fall. We want a deluge of shells to rain for forty days and forty nights, unceasingly."

Mr. Lloyd George announced that Lord Kitchener had given instructions that all skilled engineers in the trenches be sought out and invited to return to the workshops, where, he said, they would be more useful than in the firing line.

Visiting an aeroplane factory afterwards, Mr. Lloyd George urged the staff to do their utmost to increase the output. The Germans, he said, have many more aeroplanes than the British, and the more machines produced the better. British airmen, he said, were so superior to the Germans that one was worth three of the enemy, but more British machines were imperative.

Wheat Acreage Has Increased 14.8 Per Cent. Outlook Very Promising

Acreage is Estimated 12,896,000, an Increase of 1,662,500 Over 1914—Oats Will Occupy 11,427,000 Acres, Increase of 1,365,500 or 13 Per Cent.—Other Field Crops Make Only a Fair Showing With Some Increases and a Few Decreases.

OTTAWA, June 5.—A press bulletin issued by the Census and Statistics Office is of special interest as giving the preliminary estimate of the area sown to grain crops in Canada for the present season and the condition of these crops on May 31, as reported by correspondents. The reports received show that in the Maritime Provinces cold and rainy weather during May delayed farmwork, and at the end of the month a good deal of seeding had still to be completed. In Quebec and Ontario cold winds and frost, coming after the exceptionally warm weather of April, retarded growth. In these provinces the frosts injured pastures, but did little damage to grain crops. In the Northwest provinces growth was checked somewhat by cold and frosty weather, but, on the whole, conditions continue to be favourable. In some parts of Manitoba and Saskatchewan the need of rain was being felt. In Alberta and British Columbia the condition of the grain crops was generally favourable.

Areas Sown to Wheat.

Wheat is estimated to occupy this year a total area of 12,896,000 acres, which is more by 1,662,500 acres, or 14.8 per cent. than the area sown for 1914 and more by 2,602,100 acres, or 25 per cent. than the area harvested in 1914, the area sown for last year having been reduced by 939,600 acres, the estimated aggregate of total failures through the winter-killing of fall wheat (211,500 acres) and through drought affecting spring wheat (728,100 acres). Not only is the wheat area this year, under the double stimulus of patriotic impulse and high prices, 25 per cent. in excess of last year's harvested area; but it is also the largest area ever sown to wheat in Canada.

As previously reported the area to be harvested of fall sown wheat is 1,208,700 acres, the balance of 11,687,300 acres having been sown this spring. Whilst every province shows an increase in the wheat area it is the three Northwest provinces which preponderate in the national effort to produce more wheat. The total area sown to wheat in these provinces is 11,60,700 acres, an increase over last year's harvested area of 2,324,300 acres, or 25 per cent. In Manitoba the area is 3,466,900 acres, an increase of 21 per cent.; in Saskatchewan it is 6,642,100 acres, an increase of 24 per cent.; and in Alberta it is 1,650,700 acres, an increase of 35 per cent. Rather more than half of the total wheat area of Canada is in the single Province of Saskatchewan.

Other Field Crops.

Oats are estimated to occupy a total area in Canada of 11,427,000 acres, an increase over last year's harvested area of 1,365,00 acres, or 13 per cent., barley 1,518,400 acres as compared with 1,495,600 acres last year, rye, 106,449 acres against 111,280 acres peas 189,470 acres, compared with 205,950 acres, mixed grains 453,000 acres, against 463,300 acres, hay and clover 7,788,400 acres, against 7,997,000 acres, and alfalfa 94,480 acres, against 90,385 acres.

Field Crops and Anticipated Yield.

Measured in percentage of a standard of 100 representing a full crop, all the grain crops were reported as showing a high average, the points being as follows: Fall wheat 94, spring wheat 96, oats and barley 93, rye 91, peas 93, and mixed grains 91, Hay and clover with 96, pastures and alfalfa with 87 are not so good, these crops having suffered from cold and frosty nights during May. Converting the points of standard condition for the principal grain crops into a scale of 100 representing the average of the past five years 1910-1914, the result, —assuming conditions between now and harvest to be equal to the average,—is an anticipated increase in the yield per acre of 15.6 per cent. for fall wheat, 2.6 per cent. for spring wheat and 2.5 per cent. for rye. For oats and barley the indications are for yields slightly below the average, or to the extent of 1.5 per cent. for oats and 0.7 per cent. for barley.

Whirlwind Sale at Banks Garage

Big Savings to Baseball Boys and "Lucky Strikes" for Fishermen

Some people are as cheerless as a rainy Tuesday morning and have to carry around with them a page of comics as an antidote. Not so with Charley Banks, of the "Plate Glass Garage," Charlotte street. His belfray is full of snap and go, and his entire premises is buzzing with biz. Its mechanical efficiency is mainly due to the intelligent co-operation of its personnel and the skillful employment of its equipment. The large show room and window display are huge advertisements for the business, and no one who goes by needs to be told what's going on inside.

All this is just incidental to the important announcement which Mr. Banks makes in to-day's Examiner. His automobile and bicycle business is in a state of "Forward, March!" and he finds it necessary to concentrate all his attention on these lines in future. With this object in view he has deliberately put the knife to his stock of baseball goods and fishing tackle, although they have been allied lines which have helped him to be known as the main sporting goods man of the city. Baseball boys will now have a chance to save big money on all wanted supplies for the season. And, just as the fishing season opens, enthusiastic Nimrods will be sure to take advantage of this sale to secure some of the fancy fishing tackle outfits in Mr. Banks' well known stocks.

NEW SOURCE OF KHAKI DYE FOUND FOR GREAT BRITAIN

EDINBURGH, June 15.—The present shortage of synthetic yellow dyes has put considerable difficulties in the way of the manufacturer of khaki clothes, says a writer in "Made in Britain." A temporary way out of the difficulty was found, however, by the increased use of fustic, a natural yellow dye stuff, consisting of the wod of a tree, chlorophora tinctoria, which grows freely in Jamaica and British Honduras. The increased demand has now greatly raised the price of fustic, of which, at the outbreak of the war, there was only a small supply available in Europe, though one of the prizes captured from Germany had a considerable consignment on board. A certain amount has been obtained from France, which country and the United States have hitherto taken the bulk of the fustic exported from Jamaica.

When the shortage of yellow dyestuffs in this country first became apparent, the Imperial Institute took steps to place British dye firms in touch with exporters of fustic in Jamaica. Only a moderate amount of cut fustic wood was, as it happened, available in the island, but, as a result of the institute's action, the Government of Jamaica have offered to purchase from the growers further supplies and carry these at Government cost to Kingston, the port of shipment. The Government of British Honduras is also taking action, and a further supply of the wood may possibly be forthcoming.

HAVE GONE ON TRIP TO CANADIAN WEST

Messrs. C. H. Moore and George Ruth, real estate men, left this afternoon for the Canadian West on a business trip. Messrs. Moore and Ruth own twelve thousand acres of farm lands in Saskatchewan, part of which is situated close to North Battleford, and the remainder is near Viking, on the Grand Trunk Pacific. They will visit the principal Canadian cities before returning.

The Crops Are Looking Fine

They Never Looked Better to Mr. Joseph Barnard—Plenty of Rain.

Seldom in the lives of the oldest inhabitants of Peterborough, city or county, has the crop prospects looked better than they do to-day. Such is the consensus of opinion that is expressed on all sides, and which has been subscribed to by Mr. Joseph Barnard, court constable, who at the present time is exercising the functions of his office at the June Sitting of the County Court. Mr. Barnard is a familiar figure, both in the city and county. His familiarity with conditions appertaining to farm life qualifies him to speak with authority on such matters. His opinion in this respect is corroborated on all sides. Optimism is not found wanting in the rural communities when such weather as now prevails is to be had. Warm thundershowers every day, or say intermingled with warm growing weather, has combined to bring the crop to a stage of development, which if continued, will ensure a bumper harvest.

Crops in Canadian Northwest.

Estimated acreage under crop in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, June 7, given out by the secretary of the Northwest Grain Dealers' Association to-day:

Wheat—1914, 10,922,000; 1915, 12,840,000. Increase 14.5.

Oats—1914, 6,017,000; 1915, 6,621,000. Increase 10.2.

Wheat in farmers' hands to market 2000 bushels.

The report indicates that seeding was completed under perfect conditions and that there have been practically ideal conditions since; only isolated reports of small damage from wind and cutworm. Indications point with reasonable weather to a good crop.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S.

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and quit rheum for years," writes Mr. John G. Hess, Lunenburg, N.S. "Five years ago three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

In a new propelling arrangement for boats blades are thrust into the water and backward and then lifted clear for the return movement.

Capt. Rogers of Barrie Has Eleven Holes in His Body From Bullet Wounds

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, June 15.—Callers on the Minister of Militia this morning included Captain Rogers, of Barrie, Ont., who got three machine-gun bullets in his legs at the battle of Langemarck. Rogers was at the head of his company in the famous charge which resulted in the death of Col. Birchall and the practical wiping out of the 4th Battalion from Western Ontario.

Rogers has no less than eleven holes in his body. He carries around with him as a souvenir one of the machine-gun bullets extracted from his right knee, which is still stiff. Capt. Rogers, speaking of the fight, says it was 8 p.m. on that fateful April day when the Turcos and other French troops who were driven back by the German gas went through the lines of the 4th Battalion. It was not until midnight that the order was received to move forward. Some time during the following night Capt. Rogers came back from the front in an ambulance with his legs perforated with machine-gun bullets. Capt. Rogers lay in a cow stable for several hours after he was hit. After his removal other Canadian wounded still in the shed were murdered by the Germans. Capt. Rogers confirms the story that a couple of Canadian wounded were crucified by the Germans, and that the Canadians later on enacted a terrible revenge.

Capt. Rogers is anxious to return to the front as soon as he is able. He will probably remain in Canada for some time, however, to give the soldiers in training at the various camps the benefit of his experiences in actual, modern warfare.

GERMANY'S FOOD PROBLEM SOLVED

Amsterdam, via London, June 15.—A telegram from Berlin states that Herr Clemens Delbrueck, German Minister of the Interior, has informed the Prussian Diet that the food problem may be regarded as solved, and that there may even be carried over considerable reserves into the coming harvest year.

An inventory of the supplies of flour showed a surplus of 6,985,929 double hundredweights. Potato statistics as of May 15 were similarly favourable, the supply being on a level with that of normal times.

The Prussian Minister of Agriculture informed the Budget Committee of the Diet that German troops had planted eighty per cent. of the arable area of the occupied territory in Belgium and France. Grain and potatoes were planted.

The Minister added that the cultivation of the moorland of Germany would not materially affect the food supply.

J. J. CROWE OF DUMMER AMUSED COURT, ETC.

You may hate a relation worse than any friend.

Everybody is a friend of mine that's straightforward and honest.

You haven't the same affection for Harding you have for Batten?

No, one is a friend of mine who hasn't a good reputation.

You and Batten are good friends?

We're relatives like Harding and me.

Cain was a relative of Abel, said Mr. Kerr. Have you the friendship Cain had to Abel toward Harding.

"I'd murder no man," J. J. said indignantly.

News travels in Dummer.

Witness said that a story once started in Dummer travels like wild fire.

"We're all relatives. A combination

Witness said he had not been specially friendly with Batten since the case began. He admitted a relationship with him like the Payne-Harding alliance.

Isn't it true that you've gone over Dummer with a curry or fine tooth comb trying to get evidence against Harding?

No, sir.

Why have you been persistently and abnormally driving throuhg the township?

I haven't been.

Weren't you ever known as the commander of Batten's scouts?

Yes, only Batten has no scouts.

No Preliminaries.

Is it true that you have been putting some of the witnesses through their paces? That you were acting as a lawyer cross-examining them?

If I'd wanted to do that I'd have brought them to you. I mean if you'd been my lawyer.

You did talk over the case with Mr. and Mrs. Schwarts?

I have and more than them.

You tried to help Batten?

I only told them to tell the truth, to tell a lie for no man and if you would let the witnesses tell their story we'd beat you so bad you wouldn't know yourself.

Not a Busy-body.

Is it true that you have made yourself a busy-body in this case?

It's not true.

The time you spent was for pay and as a constable?

Not that I know of.

What is your pay as a constable?

Witness and Mr. Gordon objected.

Witness said he was entitled to 25c. for every subpoena and 10 cents a mile for the distance travelled to serve witnesses.

Not Like Lawyer.

How many have you served?

I just don't know.

Oh! You haven't made your will up yet? And the county may get a tidy bill from J. J.?

I think you're trying to kill time. There is no danger of me going to excess like you.

Witness said he was not there for charity.

"I'd like to have you in here and I'd soon settle this matter. Witness evidently meant that he wanted the muzzle removed more.

Mr. Kerr—You were active in this case before you got any pay? With your tongue at any rate?

Well it's my own and if I use it properly I have a just right to do so.

Mr. Kerr—You certainly have no obstruction in your speech?

No stoppage is right.

Have you got any other job excepting talking?

Farming.

Farming is a "side" occupation?

My side occupation is giving good advice. I went to Batten and Harding and told them to settle this.

To Mr. Gordon.

Under cross-examination witness explained the Parson's story and also told how he had tried to induce Harding and Batten to be friends and not carry their trouble to court.

Major S. W. Anderson.

Major Anderson said he lived on the 1st Concession of Douro. He knew Harding for fifteen years.

Do you know if Harding had a general reputation in that neighbourhood as to his honesty, e.g., Dishonesty.

His Honour required a direct answer to that question.

Witness said finally that Harding's reputation for honesty had not been very good.

To Mr. Kerr witness said he was a Major in the 3rd Dragoons.

Did you make any inquiries as to his reputation.

I didn't have to.

But did you?

I did not.

Witness received a "general" idea of Harding's reputation from conversations.

Are you enough acquainted with Dummer to be able to come here and say what they say of this man.

Yes.

But you don't know how many men there are in Dummer?

No.

Well, there are several hundred in Dummer.

Yes.

Have you spoken with fifty on this subject?

I cannot say I have.

You mean that those you spoke with did not speak well of him.

Yes.

And some spoke worse than others?

Yes.

And you come here friendly toward Harding?

No particular friendship between Harding and myself.

You've heard Batten speak of Harding in connection with the theft of lumber from Batten?

Since I came to Peterborough on this case.

You knew your evidence would have a tendency to blacken Harding.

Yes.

Witness met Batten once and J. J. Crowe twice. The case was discussed on each occasion.

Batten told me Harding had sued him.

I told him I did not want to discuss this case.

And you are not on terms of friendship with Harding?

No, and not with Mr. Batten.

Mr. Gordon—Why are you not on good terms with Harding?

The question was disallowed.

Mr. Kerr remarked that the repeated transgressions here "simply contemptible."

Witness said he did not think that any evidence he would give against Harding would blacken his character.

Mr. Gordon—Why?

Question disallowed.

When Batten was talking to you about the wood, what did he say about Harding?

Mr. Kerr interrupted to emphasize that the reply must only be in connection with the report that Harding had stolen Batten's lumber.

Mr. Gordon said—"I can't examine this witness with these interruptions."

Mr. Gordon said he had been interrupted a thousand times in the past week. He held that Mr. Kerr had indicated to Maj. Anderson just what to say, and refused to press the question.

NEED 170,000 FARM HANDS.

Women Working in British Fields — Acting As Deliverers of Milk.

LONDON, June 14.—There is a war shortage of 170,000 male agricultural labourers on the farms of England, Scotland and Wales, according to a report from the Board of Agriculture. During the next two months the board hopes to fill virtually all these vacancies with women.

Already women have come to the assistance of farmers in the counties of Essex, Norfolk, and Lincolnshire in planting the potato crop and in truck gardening. Several hundred women are being trained and employed in place of men labourers on dairy farms in Cheshire, Dorset, and Berks, where the wages paid range from $3.50 to $5 a week.

There is one feature of dairy work which the board hopes to see taken over everywhere by women for the duration of the war, and that is the twice-daily drive to the station with the milk or the delivery of milk to the customers. It is a common sight in Ireland to see the women drive with the milk to the station or creamery in a donkey cart.

Ran Into a Trench Full of Germans

Corp. Stanley Fenwick, of Canadian Engineers, Had Exciting Experience

Mr. E. E. Fenwick, 418 1-2 George Street, has received a letter from his son, Corp. Stanley Fenwick, with the 2nd Field Company, Canadian Engineers, dated, "In the field, May 29th."

Corp. Fenwick says: "I was in the trenches and they shelled us very heavily all day. Believe me it was hot, but I only got a little bit of shell in my right arm. It was rather sore for a while, but is much better now. I got one of the boys to dress it for me, and so I didn't get sent away, and nothing was said about it.

I think we will soon have the Huns on the run. We've been giving them beans lately. Of course, I can't tell you just where, but it's all in the papers, but it doesn't mention the Canadians as doin git.

I went out the other night with one man in front of our trench and we were about 200 yards ahead when we ran right into a trench full of Germans. It was a sap run out in front of their trench. I sent my men back with the news while I stayed and watched them and a sergeant and two men came out. We came back all right, but I can't tell you what happened to the Huns.

COURAGE.

Whatsoever mars your life,
Whatsoever brings you strife,
Rise above it.
Whatsoever gives you fear,
Whatsoever makes you veer,
From the path of duty clear,
Rise above it.

Whatsoever checks your growth,
Rise above it.
Be it selfishness or sloth,
Rise above it.
Whatsoever bars your soul,
From the kingdom of control,
Keeps you from the final goal,
Rise above it.

In your past has error been?
Rise above it.
Be not slave unto your sin,
Rise above it.
Set your face unto the dawn,
Cry your motto, "Onward, on!"
Never mind the thing that's gone,
Rise above it.

Do not meet the knocking crew?
Prove it false by what you do—
Rise above it.
Give out love and strength and light,
And the carper's petty spite
All will vanish out of sight,
Rise above it.

Naught without can keep you back,
Rise above it.
In yourself is all the lack,
Rise above it.
There is nothing that can mar
Life for you, but what you are,
If there's any inward bar,

Be the master. Quell the beast,
Till the voice of self has ceased,
Rise above it.
This the truth the sages taught,
From the soul of being caught;
Evil reals within your thought—
Rise above it.

SHE GAINED 26 LBS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness and sinking spells, and was, in fact, a semi-invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up. By using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 26 pounds in weight."

Italian Fleet Sails Under Sealed Orders From Port of Taranto

Before Fleet Steamed Into the Adriatic, Remarkable Religious Service Was Held---This Morning's Newsy Despatches.

SPECIAL CABLE:

ROME, June 16.—The Italian fleet sailed under sealed orders late last night from the seaport of Taranto at the southeastern end of Italy.

Before the fleet steamed into the Adriatic, a remarkable religious service was held in the ancient Cathedral of St. Cataldor.

All afternoon great crowds streamed into the Cathedral. Toward evening an immense throng gathered along the harbour front to watch the departure of the ships.

LONDON, June 16.—John Redmond, the noted Irish leader, is seriously ill of ptomaine poisoning.

BERLIN, June 16.—Count Zeppelin, the German airship creator, is ill at his home in Stuttgart. The nature of the illness is not stated. The Count is in his 77th year.

LONDON, June 16.—An official statement says Turks' resistance at Dardanelles is perceptibly weakening.

ATHENS, June 16.—It is believed here that Greece will join the Allies before June 20th.

ROME, June 16.—Powerful Austrian forts have temporarily halted the Italian army advancing on Trent.

LONDON, June 15.—In the Commons to-night Premier Asquith declared Britain has no intention of releasing the German blockade as suggested in Berlin.

PARIS, June 15.—Germans were repulsed in all their fierce attacks to recover Souchez. Their casualties were terrific.

LONDON, June 15.—The Press Bureau officially announced that Allies have no intention of ending operations in the Dardanelles.

ROME, June 15.—Austrian aviators dropped bombs on Venice to-night, but Italians brought one down which makes the fourth machine captured by Italians.

PARIS, June 15.—Newspapers here publish despatches to-day saying the German Governor of Belgium is starving Belgium workmen because they refused to build an arsenal at Malines.

BERLIN, June 15.—German Admiralty this afternoon officially admitted loss of submarine and capture of its crew by the British.

CAIRO, June 15.—A large force of Turks was entirely wipped out by the British in Gallipoli Peninsula. The Allies are making progress.

Irish Lads on The St. Paul

NEW YORK, June 16.—The American liner St. Paul, arriving here, had 337 immigrants in the steerage, of whom, the officers said, fully 300 were young Irishmen from Connaught and Galway, who left the country to escape possible conscription. Many of them were green country lads.

When they were walking along the landing stage in Liverpool carrying valises an English recruiting sergeant stopped ten of them and said: "Fall in, here." They were all more than six feet tall and physically fit. After eyeing them and making them mark time, the sergeant placed his hand on his short sword and said: "You beauties! You know the kind I mean. Deserting your country in the hour of her need. I would like to run this through each one of you. Fall out. Go on board while you are safe."

On the voyage sailors on the St. Paul made several of the countrymen walk about the decks carrying broomsticks over their shoulders and wearing tin saucepans on their heads.

One of the officers said that the Irishmen were the most verdant lot he had ever seen.

"What beats me," he continued, "is where they got the money to come away with. They were lads who had never seen money before to any extent, and yet they all carried gold with them. If you turned one of them around quickly and asked him his name he could not tell you, and if you gave him another spin and asked him where he came from I am sure he would not know. There must be some agency at work in Ireland supplying these lads with money to come to America, because this is not the first lot we have brought over."

A Difference to be Considered

The difference in cost between a pure, wholesome cream of tartar baking powder and one made of alum is a mere trifle, perhaps one cent for a whole cake or pan of biscuits.

But there is a vast difference in healthfulness in favor of food made with Royal Baking Powder.

Read the label on your can of baking powder and see what it is made of. There is

No Alum in

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Fifteen Killed and Fifteen Wounded In Zeppelin Raid

On British Northeast Coast Last Night---Fires Were Also Started---French Aeroplanes Doing Much Damage to Enemy.

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, June 16.—Fifteen persons were killed and fifteen were wounded in a Zeppelin raid on the British northeast coast last night. The Admiralty announced to-day that some fires were started.

This is the heaviest loss of life recorded in Zeppelin raids on England. In the recent bombardment six persons lost their lives.

Following out its new policy of suppressing names of localities attacked, the first official statement from the Admiralty to-day stated that the "northeast coast" was bombarded.

FRENCH AEROPLANES RETALIATE.

KARLSRUHE, via Berlin, June 16.—"Send Zeppelins to London and Paris," was the cry of Karlsruhe newspapers to-day, voicing the feeling of indignation over yesterday's raid by a squadron of French aeroplanes.

Complete report to the police show that nineteen persons killed, fourteen seriously injured, an more than a score hurt by bombs.

CHICAGO CAR STRIKE OVER.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 16.—The great car strike was called off at 5 o'clock this morning. Full service on all elevated and surface lines will be resumed at noon.

An agreement to end the transport tie-up was reached following an all night conference in Mayor Thompson's office at the City Hall. Points in dispute will be arbitrated.

Turks Murder the Wounded Soldiers

Special Cable to The Examiner:

TORONTO, June 16.—That the Turks in their warfare at the Dardanelles are following the example of the Prussian allies in Belgium is shown by the following account of Turkish atrocities sent to Mrs. W. J. Courtney, 14 Woodside road, from Sapper George S. Clifford, of the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force:

"I am writing by candle light in my tent. The light is none too good, I can assure you, and my knee is my writing desk, so I hope you will forgive the writing and all errors. I am in Egypt at the present time of writing at Alexandria, and am under cover at an Australian rest camp. Our chief troubles are sand and flies. Occasionally snakes, lizards, and mosquitoes are to be found in and around our tent. We have been very near the Dardanelles, and have seen several train loads of wounded brought back during the past week, but I was much astonished to find them in good spirits in spite of what they had been through and were still suffering. They were mostly Australians and New Zealanders. I had the opportunity of speaking to a few of the wounded. They told me the Turks cut out the tongue of their little bugler boy, pulled out the tongues of others, and bayoneted a few of the helpless wounded. I also met some of the sailors from the Inflexible, which was in action up at the Dardanelles; they told me they found one poor marine nailed to the door, the work of Turks. This is not a war in my estimation, but absolute brutality. Our side has had to pay rather dearly for landing up the Dardanelles, but I am pleased to say we have now got the Turks on the run."

EXPECT TO IDENTIFY GIRL

TORONTO, June 16.—Before many days are over Inspector Kennedy of the Detective Department expects to be able to say who Louisa Markefeldt, the mysterious girl held as a vagrant and who claims to be a German spy, really is. He stated this morning that he expected to confront her with some person who knows her and that by Friday, when she comes up in the police court, everything will be known about her.

The stories from Peterborough, Niagara Falls and Guelph about her were no surprise to the inspector, for keeping the matter quiet.

Rev. Mr. Barber of Niagara Falls, for whom the girl worked, wrote the inspector that she was extremely pro-German, but that he did not believe she was a spy. She had been examined by the military authorities there because of her peculiarities.

The girl is also said to have worked in Guelph and that she went there from the Margaret Cox Home in Peterborough and acted strangely there. While there she seemed to be in communication with a man called Major Guildenstein as several letters were seen in her possession addressed to him.

After a controversy lasting ten years it has been decided in France that the use of old corks in wine bottles is not detrimental to health.

KNOWS NOTHING OF SISTER'S ACTIONS

Lottie Markesfeldt Has Not Heard From Her Sister Louisa Lately

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, June 16.—Louisa Markesfeldt came here direct from Niagara-on-the-Lake on November 18, 1914. She came at once to the Chief of Police here and reported quite regularly on the 18th of every month. She was employed first at W. G. & R. shirt factory. She was discharged after a month for incompetence and also for prying around in departments where she had no business. The other girl employes feared her exceedingly, believing her to be a man in disguise. Later she worked as a domestic for Mrs. Henry Hillbourne, Mrs. James Gewdy and Mrs. William Barnhardt. At one time during the winter she was destitute. The Berlin Chief of Police is of the opinion that she did not spying here, but would have done so if she had had an opportunity. She told him a similar story to that related by her to the Toronto police. Soon after her arrival here she rented a locked box at the Postoffice, but the Postmaster affirms she received no letters. He watched her particularly.

A girl, answering to the description of Louisa Markesfeldt dropped a letter seen after the sinking of the Lusitania. It had no envelope and was addressed to no one. It came from New York and carried the information that the Transylvania also would be sunk.

She went by the name of the "German Spy Girl." She left without the permission of the Chief of Police here though warned not to do so. Though she had little money when she left, she told her mistress she had the permission of the chief to go and that she was going to New York, and knew how she could get there.

She left Niagara almost immediately after she had been made to register there. She has been visited in Toronto by Mr. C. E. Willcox, the immigration officer at the border, who paroled her.

Woman Surprising Burglars in Home Is Badly Beaten

NEW YORK, June 16.—Burglars attacked Mrs. Margaret O'Brien, widow of Charles P. O'Brien, in her home, No. 407 West 148th street, yesterday afternoon. She was beaten so severely with blackjacks that last night she was in bed under the care of a physician and a nurse.

Despite the fact that the number of detectives on Washington Heights has been greatly increased, robbery of residences and apartments continue unchecked, according to the residents. Most of these burglaries are committed in the afternoon.

Mrs. O'Brien and two maids were on the third floor of her residence at 2 o'clock when she heard the front door being forced open. Two burglars, apparently believing no one was home, had opened the door with a "jimmy," breaking the lock.

Mrs. O'Brien ran downstairs and as she entered the drawing room she was attacked by two men, both of whom beat her with bluejacks. She fell under the blows and was so seriously injured she could not resist them.

The robbers were dragging her into a rear room when the two maids ran downstairs, saw what had happened and ran to the street, screamin. Their cries attracted many of the neighbours and several policemen. Led by Policeman Murphy, the neighbours entered the house and searched for the robbers, but they had fled through the basement to the rear yards and had reached Convent Avenue. They obtained nothing.

Dr. W. T. Alexander of No. 940 St. Nicholas Avenue, attended Mrs. O'Brien for wounds on the scalp and face. She also had many bruises from being struck and kicked. A nurse was called and she was put to bed in her home.

To Regain a Healthy, Girlish Complexion

If you would have a clear, fresh, girlish complexion, one ounce of ordinary mercolised wax will aid you in this direction more than shelves full of cosmetics. It produces a natural beauty. This wax, procurable at any drugstore, completely absorbs a bad complexion, revealing the healthy young skin underneath. Its work is done so gradually, day by day, that no inconvenience is caused. The wax is applied at night, like cold cream, and removed in the morning with soap and water.

Another valuable rejuvenating treatment—this for wrinkles—is to bathe your face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½ pt. witch hazel. This has a remarkable action in smoothing out the lines and "ironing up" the loose tissue.

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

Still, this gel was mighty attractive and so I shrugged my shoulders, straightened myself and sez: "You see mto think th's some good reason why this gel should marry, and so I'll tell ya just where I stand. I never studied much about gettin' married, but it looks to me that it would be askin' any gel to gamble with her whole life as the table-stakes for me to propose matrimony with her, and I can easy see 'at this gel is a heap more showy-gaited 'n I am. I don't intend to ever pester her one way or the other; but I'll tell you this; if the time ever comes that she'd say right out that it would be a big accommodation to her, why I'll marry her, right then."

That old hermit had a tantalizin' way with his eyes; sometimes they'd look as though he wondered what sort of an insect you happened to be, and sometimes they'd look as though he was laughin' at ya away back inside his head; but now he pulled back his blinds and let me look in through his eyes the way he had let the gel look that morning', and I felt warmed all through and light-hearted.

We were ridin' close together and he reached across and put his hand on my knee. "Son," sez he, "I could tell your fortune this minute as well as you'll know it on your death-bed. A woman, a good woman, the very best woman the' is, isn't no kin to an angel. She's nothin' but a she-man—but you'll never find this out unless some woman kills what's the best part of ya now. The good Lord's probably got somethin' picked out for you to do, so go ahead and do it, without doubtin' the right, and without gettin' bitter. I was like you once, in my heart, I thought a real woman was like what gels are taught to pertend, and I hardly dared lift my eyes so they could hint the thoughts my mind was full of.

"And then she give me the poisoned apple, and killed the boy that I was. The man that I became was mad with bitterness and rage and after I'd rushed from the paradise in which I'd been dreaming, I planted my own angels at the gate, and went laughing in search of Hell. I tare off my name and trampled it, I destroyed the ties of home and family, and finally I thought that an Injun squaw would take the place of the woman—the woman who had once been all the angels there were."

We had been climbin' a little slope at a walk, and now he touched his hoss and rode ahead; and there was the three of us strung out at intervals nothin' would bridge but a shout and each one so busy thinkin', that he had all the company he had any use for.

After a time the old hermit dropped back along side of me again and his face had cleared back to its usual expression of sober amusement. "If ever you love a woman," sez he to me, "why, don't be afraid to tell her about it. Don't be afraid o' scarin' her, don't fuss about how you look or the words you ort to say; but tell her just how you feel and make it just as strong as you know how. A woman don't want to make love, but she does want love to be made. She wants to hang back, act indignant, and run away; but she also wants to be chased and caught. Marry her with a high hand, if you can; but if you're not the right man, don't try to tear up the world simply because experience is the only real teacher the' is."

Then it was that he unfolded his idees about she-men and character-wrappin's and such-like, and it made me step beyond my stride now and again to savvy what he meant. He had it figgered out that woman's natural weapon was pretendin', and man's was in bein' brutal so that neither one could altogether understand the other and this kept 'em interested.

At times I'd think he was talkin' mighty mean about woman, and then with just a word or so he'd twist my head around to the right angle and I'd see how he wanted it took. I remember once that I thought he had gone a leetle mite too far in accusin' women of all bein' liars, and he had flared back at me that women never were liars — that is not the same kind o' liars that men are.

"Did ya ever notice a little hen bird flutterin' off with a broken wing and then after she had attracted your attention mountin' up on that wing and flyin' clean away?" I admitted that I had, o' course. "Well," sez he, "that's the kind that all women are. A man charges like a bull, with his eyes shut, and then when he hits a stone wall, or a tree, or his best friend, why he puts out and sez that was exactly what he aimed at."

I had thought old Josiah never could be a moody man; but he was moody enough that mornin'. He left me after a time and rode ahead again, and then he came back and his eyes were shinin' with excitement. "Happy," sez he, "if you had trusted a man, trusted him in everything, and he had proved false, false in everything, and you had your fingers around his throat—what 'd you do?"

"Why I reckon I'd try to make his backbone pop out through his windpipe," sez I.

"And then supposin', after you had got purty well along on this project, the gel you thought the whole world of should come and beg for his life, sayin' that all he had done was because he loved her—then what'd you do?"

I studied over it a little, and then said, "that's sure a puzzler."

"Well, it don't make much difference," sez the old hermit with a little twinkle in his eye. "If you had been in the position I meant, and it had taken you as long to make up your mind as it did this time, the feller would have been entirely spoiled no matter what you did decide to do. That's what happened to me when I was an unbroken colt, and the gel—well, that gel you brought to my cabin reminds me of her, though no woman that ever was could be quite like her."

Then he shrugged his shoulders, pulled the blinds across his eyes and pointin' out a certain upstandin' cottonwood, he sez: "The cabin stands right under that tree. We'd better approach from three sides at once."

"Dou you reckon he's still alive?" sez I.

"Whenever I'm on my way to find out about a thing," sez he, "I think of whatever is most different, and this keeps me fresh, so my mind'll move at its quickest when I throw the spurs into it."

CHAPTER NINETEEN.
Happy Falls Asleep.

Nothin' interfered with us and we reached the cabin at the same time. The' was three rooms to it and we pirated around on the outside purty thorough before goin' in. The old man lay in a bunk and his face was a bluish gray, his eyelids stood half open without winkin', and his hair and moustache looked whiter than snow in the moonlight. Me and Tom Smith hung back, but the old hermit went up and examined him.

"I reckon they give him a drug," sez he "but I think we can fetch him around."

For the next couple of hours about all me and Tom Smith had to do was to dance around and wait on the old hermit. He had us build him a fire and he gave that man a powerful lot of hot water with some brown powder in it to drink, beginnin' a spoonful at a time and increasin' it until the poor feller couldn't swaller another drop. He had a couple o' jugs o' hot water at the victim's back and feet, and a cloth of first hot and then cold water at his head; and me and Tom Smith takin' turns rubbin' wrists, ankles, and back.

At the end of two hours the victim began to bead up with sweat and the old hermit gave a sigh of satisfaction, and held out his tobacco pouch to us. We all three took a sober smoke, and then we cooked us a meal, and had another smoke. By this time the victim was able to follow us with his eyes; but they had just a curious stare in 'em, like a young infant's eyes. When he'd try to move his hand it would wander all over and shake constant.

As there wasn't much for me to do in the house, I went out and rummaged around outside. The mules were all right as a little stream ran through one corner of the corral, and there was grass enough in it to do 'em; but I found some grain in the shed and gave 'em a feed o' that. Everything in the house and out showed the place was used occasional but not often. There wasn't any extra saddles nor hosses around, but I saw a bunch o' cows grain' some distance to the south.

When I went inside again, the victim looked at me with questionin' eyes, and tried to speak; but couldn't quite make it, and the old hermit who sat beside him stroked his brow until his eyes closed and he drifted off again.

About four, the old man opened his eyes and lookin' up at the hermit managed to whisper: "Has my son got here yet?"

"No," sez old Josiah, a little snappish, "he's not comin'."

"Nope," sez Josiah in a kindly tone, "you'll have to go to her."

"Is she with my son?" sez the old man.

"I don't know nothin' about your son," sez the old hermit, speakin' a shade cross again, "except that your daughter risked her life and everything else lookin' for him. As soon as you feel strong enough, we'll take you to her."

"How long has she been away?" whispered the old man.

"Oh, about thirty hours," sez old Josiah.

"Hours!" exclaimed the old man, reachin' his solid voice again. "I thought it was weeks."

The old hermit gave him some white powder and told me to get the buckboard ready. I didn't think the'd be much use startin' with him unless he was given food first; but it wasn't my deal so I took some blankets and spread 'em on the floor which was tight. Then I came in and gathered up the man's clothes, and was mightily surprised to find the money belt lyin' on top of them, and was able to feel some gold coins in it.

I asked old Josiah how he supposed they happened to be left, and he said he reckoned it was to prove to whoever found him 'at the' hadn't been any foul play. We dressed the old man and put him in the buckboard and by this time Tom Smith had fixed us some supper and after eatin' this we were ready to start. The buckboard had a top and the' was a small trunk, still locked, under the driver's seat.

We started back just about dusk, followin' a trail through the timber. I hitched my hoss behind and did the drivin', old Josiah rode ahead, and Tom Smith fetched up in the rear. Every time the mules would shake down a little trot the old man would groan, as we had to go purty slow. Just before we reached Big Jeff's place on the stage road, we turned south and took up the same trail we had come, as it was plumb dark by now. As soon as we had crossed the stage road, old Josiah sent Tom Smith ahead to keep the gel from worryin'.

"Are you sure there's no danger of your meetin' some of Big Jeff's men?" sez Tom Smith.

"Well, if we do," sez the old hermit with a dry chuckle, "they'll have to take care o' themselves."

Old Josiah rode just close enough ahead, now, for me to barely make him out in gloom, and it was a mournful, doleful drive. I never did care much for slow drivin' and on this trip I about reached my limit. I think the old man drowsed most of the time; but he formed the habit of givin' long, dismal groans that didn't make things a bit more cheerful.

Suffered Intense Pain in Her Back.

Could Hardly Do Her Housework.

If a pain attacks you in the back "stop and think" what it is and what causes it.

If the kidneys are at fault—and in a large majority of cases of pain in the back they are—doctor them at once, and doctor them persistently, as it is impossible to have a well strong back unless the kidneys perform their functions properly.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all forms of kidney trouble, and cure them to stay cured.

Mrs. H. F. Jacob, Lavant Station, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in telling you how much good your medicine has done me. I had suffered from intense pains in my back, and was so bad I could hardly do my housework. My kidneys were also bothering me a great deal. I tried several kinds of patent medicines, and was almost discouraged, and was looking for some other kind of medicine to try when I noticed your advertisement of Doan's Kidney Pills, so I thought it could not hurt to try them. I noticed a great difference when I had used one box, and to my great relief when I had used three boxes I was entirely cured, and I have not been bothered since. I will not hesitate to recommend them to all I know."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c a box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

MOTHER OF SCHOOL GIRL

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Daughter's Health.

Plover, Iowa.—"From a small child my 13 year old daughter had female weakness. I spoke to three doctors about it and they did not help her any. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had been of great benefit to me, so I decided to have her give it a trial. She has taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound according to directions on the bottle and she is cured of this trouble. She was all run down when she started taking the Compound and her periods did not come right. She was so poorly and weak that I often had to help her dress herself, but now she is regular and is growing strong and healthy."—Mrs. MARTIN HELVIG, Plover, Iowa.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

THE BABY'S WELFARE

A MOTHER'S DREAD

A fear clutches at the heart of the mother that her own little one may not live long. She dreads its second summer, or that it may never wake from its sound sleep. All mankind loves a mother—loves to see a mother love her child. A baby and its mother are insured against ill-health if the mother takes Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription, a tonic for women that Dr. R. V. Pierce invented nearly a half century ago for women's ills. This is a vegetable tonic, made only of the herbs roots with glycerine, which puts the female system into perfect, healthy action.

Many mothers of families in the United States have reason to be grateful to the person who recommended Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription. It is put up for the single purpose of curing disease of women. It has sold more largely on this continent than any other medicine for women. Another point in its favour: it is a temperance remedy and does not contain a single drop of alcohol nor of any narcotic.

Young mothers who preserve the charms of face and figure in spite of an increasing family and the care of growing children are always to be envied. Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription gives the strength and health upon which happy motherhood depends. It enables the mother to nourish the infant life depending on her, and enjoy the hourly happiness of watching the development of a perfectly healthy child.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

RESCUES SWEETHEART

Girl Drags Drowning Lover From Water and Thereby Mends Breach.

By WALTER JAMES DELANEY.

"I wouldn't go out tonight, Elizabeth, if I were you," spoke querulous, rheumatic old Grandma Danby.

"I must, grandma," was the reply, firm yet pained, and the old woman glanced keenly at the young face wearing care and sorrow, and sighed, and then was silent, gazing sadly, dreamily into the flickering grate.

"Dear child," crooned the old woman, as Elizabeth threw a cape across her shoulders and flitted from the room. "Dear, poor child—I know! I know!"

Yes, indeed, the old dame knew, for when the fires of youth were hers she had loved and lost. There was rude comfort at the little cottage, a pension and enough to make her grandchild independent, but love that had cheered the lonely life of the fair young girl had seared her heart with a cruel blow, and had left her what she was—a cheerless, solitary being, living only in one fond memory of the past.

That past, how golden it had been—and only a year agone! Just a year this very night, not chill and sere, although September-like now, but a star-spangled evening of sweet sounds, a stroll along the whispering sands, and troth plighted under the great, whitely elm that had winded the old brook for over a century.

Those strange, sinuous whispering sands, ever moving, ever singing a siren-like dirge—but on that night of nights they had seemed to weave a sweet melody of hope, and promise, and love. Then under the great elm where each had promised, no matter how widely parted, no matter what might happen, to return there upon each anniversary as to a shrine devoted to a love undying, eternal.

"It was all my fault," moaned Elizabeth, as slowly, sadly she started down the edge of the sand reach, a watery moon casting dim, weird shadows across her path. "Oh, why was I jealous, why was I so impulsive and cruel!"

She recalled the May day festival at the village where she had been so proud of her lover, Randal Grey, and then so irrationally jealous of him.

In a fit of pique, incited by a false friend, a scheming girl companion, she had tried to punish her lover, entirely innocent of any real purpose to pain her, and she had lost him.

For he had gone away from Merton and she had heard of him among newer scenes, the gayest of the gay. He had forgotten her long since, her aching heart told her.

"And I can never forget!" she wailed to the sighing night winds, and pursued her lonely path on a pilgrimage of sorrow and penitence.

She faltered as she came in sight of the old elm. Its nodding branches seemed to beckon and then repel. She covered her face with her hands and swayed where she stood.

"I thought it would comfort me to come," she moaned, "but it is breaking my heart!"

For with a tide-like rush the sweet past was now more vividly recurrent than ever. Every bush, every rock, every turn of the path renewed some fond, sweet word he had spoken—the loved and lost one.

At last she reached the old trysting place. She sank like a wearied child to the moss-covered trunk and cried her heart out. Then dull, drear retrospect intervened, and accepting the burden her own folly had brought about, she sat mutely submissive to the fate that showed no brightness ahead.

Hark!

Her pulses stirred at a cry of alarm. It was vague, distant, but echoing. It was a call for help.

Elizabeth started to her feet and bent her ear. A new fear came into her face as she traced the call—across the sloping expanse of stunted oak to where the brook ran and the whispering sands were the most treacherous.

There were danger signs in the vicinity, but a stranger would scarcely notice them after nightfall, she realized.

The humane instinct was too intensely developed in Elizabeth to need arging, even when her mind was immersed in her own individual troubles. She was a true daughter of the woodland, and she sped like a sprite along the upper ledges overlooking the brook.

"Help!"

It was closer now, that cry, though not so distant. There was a token of weakness in the utterance, a forlorn intonation telling of exhausted effort and strength.

Her own feet, swift as they were, barely evaded one or two dangerous spots in her rapid flight. Then as she neared what was familiarly known to the denizens of the vicinity as "The Pits," her heart stood still and she chilled with a shock.

A human form was visible in the swirling mass of quicksands, appealing wildly for help, with arms outstretched, sinking deeper and deeper each succeeding moment.

In an instant Elizabeth forgot self, peril, all save that a precious human life was in the balance.

She ran to where the ruined old bridge lay. It had spanned a narrow brook, but long in disuse. She knew fully the last possible resource for assisting the man engulfed in the quicksands. How she managed to drag one of the great rough logs, the size of a railroad tie in thickness, fully 20 feet, she never knew. Superhuman strength seemed infused. Her hands were torn and bleeding, her breath came in gasps. She mastered to tilt the end of the heavy timber across the ledge of rock and let it drop.

The log narrowly grazed the head of the man now struggling waist-deep in the shifting mass. Both ends, however, were safely anchored. Elizabeth crept out on the log.

"Grasp the log firmly with one hand—give me the other—"

Then her voice died away and her soul seemed to go with it, for the man she had saved was—Randal Grey.

He was pretty well exhausted, but he smiled up into her eyes with grateful energy, as slowly, with difficulty he was extricated from his fearful dilemma.

It was like a hideous dream with a golden awakening, as both reached the soft ground and sank upon a grassy plat exhausted, their eyes met, and then their hands.

"You have saved my life!" he breathed. "I owe it to you—Elizabeth!"

How sweetly, how fervently he pronounced her name, the ring of a year ago in it!

"I am glad," she said simply, and shrank back away in very contriteness and sense of unworthiness.

"If you had not been near," he began, and then asked; "How came you to be?"

Her eyes drooped and she arose to her feet. He caught sight of her poor, bleeding hands and grasped them and kissed them.

"It was just a year ago—the old elm—do you remember?"

She bent her head, and he guessed the truth.

"Its call was strong upon me—I had not forgotten," he said in a low, eager tone. "Elizabeth, say it was all a mistake your cold, bitter letter to me."

"It was more—it was cruel, wicked, and I have been punished. Oh, Randal, my heart is breaking!"

He caught her swaying form in his arms. He clasped her close, leading the way past peril into peace, past the weird whispering sands to the soft shadow of the great elm, its swaying boughs seeming to welcome so much youth and loveliness and joy.

PIMPLES
APPEARED ON HIS FACE AND HANDS.

The primary cause of pimples arises from the blood not being in a good condition. When the blood becomes impure you will find that pimples will break out all over the body, but more particularly on the forehead, nose and chin, and although they are not a dangerous trouble, they make you appear unsightly both to your friends and yourself. What you need, when these pimples break out, is to get a real good blood purifying medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. One that will build up the system by cleansing the blood of all the impurities and poisons which cause the skin to break out in these eruptions.

Mr. F. A. McKenzie, Portage La Prairie, Man., writes: "Last summer I was all run down and unfit for work of any kind. All kinds of food seemed distasteful to me. Pimples appeared on my face and hands, and I seemed to grow worse every day. One day a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. Half-heartedly I did so, and the results obtained were marvellous. I regained my health, I took on flesh, and in a short time the pimples and skin eruptions disappeared entirely; thanks to the healing powers of B.B.B. I freely recommend it to all sufferers."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CONSTIPATIENTS
Read This—

It must be remembered that the bowels should move freely once a day to ensure perfect health. When such is not the case the poisonous waste material is absorbed into the system, thus producing a self blood poisoning.

The causes of Constipation are many and varied. Among the more common may be mentioned poor stomach digestion, a deficiency of bile in the intestines, a lack of secretion in the bowels, and a want of the natural muscular contraction of the intestines from above downward.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 60c, stimulates and restores the stomach digestion, increases the flow of bile into the intestine, causes a flow from the intestinal glands, and restores the natural downward action of the intestines, rendering it easy to secure a free action of the bowels, which is one of the most important requisites to health. 1

WONDERFUL FOR THE BLOOD
Cures Sallow Skin, Headache, Languor and Tiredness.

You don't need to be told how you feel,—blue, sort of sickish, poor appetite, vague pains, tired in the morning. This condition is common at this season.

Fortunately there is prompt relief in Dr. Hamilton's Pills which immediately relieve the system of all poisons and disease-producing matter.

Thousands have been so utterly depressed, so worn out as to be despondent, but Dr. Hamilton's Pills always cured them. "I can speak feelingly on the power of Dr. Hamilton's Pills," writes C. T. Fearman, of Kingston. "Last spring my blood was thin and weak, I was terribly run down, had awful headaches and a gnawing, empty feeling about my stomach, I couldn't sleep or work until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills,—they did me a world of good." MAJOR HAMILTON GAULT
Montreal Man For Many Years Took Serious View of Military Work

Major A. Hamilton Gault, the Montrealer who equipped and raised at his own expense the Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry long devoted his time to military work and always trained seriously. He saw service in the South African campaign in the Second Canadian Mounted Rifles in Cape Colony and the Transvaal, and was awarded the Queen's medal with three clasps.

When he returned to Canada he resumed his business interests and his military work as an officer of the Fifth Royal Highlanders. When the present war commenced he was not long getting ready or the ffront. He raised the Princess Patricia's, a regiment recognized as one of the finest ever to leave the Dominion's shores, composed, for the most part, of men who had seen service in the Imperial army. Major Gault was given a commission with the regiment he raised and before leaving for the front Princess Patricia, after whom the regiment was named, herself presented the regimental colors.

The battalion, headed by their band, marched through the streets of Montreal just before they departed for England, and were given a great reception, and the men were very much admired for their fine appearance. Just before he sailed for England Major Gault said: "I am proud of the men; and rightly so, and when they get into action Canada will hear of them."

His words have come true.

In England and Wales there are over 9,000,000 inhabited houses.

More than sixteen million tons of coal are mined in India each year.

SPEEDY LITTLE MACHINE
New "Tabloid" Biplanes Fly a Hundred Miles an Hour

On several occasions the British Royal Flying Corps penetrated into German territory and succeeded in dropping bombs on the Zeppelin sheds, despite the fact that these shelters are protected by numerous anti-aircraft guns. Although these daring raids reflect much credit on the plucky aviators attached to the British air service, it is doubtful whether they could have been so successfully carried out had not the Flying Corps been recently provided with a new type of aeroplane, which can give points to any German machine. This is the tiny British-built biplane known as the "tabloid," owing to its diminutive size, and on machines of this type the British air raiders have been able to carry out their hazardous feats. The machine is a very light aeroplane, fitted with an 80-horsepower engine, and the high power forces the frail machine through the air at a normal speed of one hundred miles an hour. Over the engine is fitted a big armored cowl, and the body of the aeroplane tapers almost to a point, so that in appearance it resembles a big bullet piercing the atmosphere.

Owing to the enormous speed at which these machines can travel, they present most elusive marks to the German gunners, and also the slower Taube monoplanes cannot overtake them in the air.

TORTURED BY RHEUMATISM

Sunday School Supt. Tells How "Fruit-a-tives" Relieved

TORONTO, ONT., Oct. 1st, 1913.

"I have lived in this city for more than 12 years and am well known. I suffered from Rheumatism, especially in my hands. I spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now and am pleased to tell you that I am well. All the enlargement has not left my hands, and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in eighteen months."

Ingenious Air Bombs

Bombs thrown from the air are usually exploded by contact. With the Martin flare bomb, designed specially to be dropped from aeroplanes, there is a "safety pin" which renders the bomb harmless until it has been withdrawn and until a fall of about 300 feet through the air has caused the propeller to rotate and release the firing mechanism. All destructive explosives cause damage by the actual shock of the explosion—that is, by the disturbance in the air created by the expansion of the contents of the shell; by the fragments of the shell or the bullets which it contains flying in all directions; by the fumes which may be given off on explosion, and which may have a stupefying or fatal effect on people in the vicinity; and by the falling of bricks and mortar displaced by the bombs.

ACID STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

Common Sense Advice by a Distinguished Specialist.

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach, and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatments are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized, and its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a simple antacid, taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acidity is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause distress may be eaten with impunity if the meal is followed with a little bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist, and should always be kept handy.

Many New Motor Boats on the Lakes – Real Estate Changes Hands

Hurrah! "Wellie" Dunford has a new motor boat! I imagine I see him on his first trip on the milk route. Every woman at every wharf from Mt. Julian to Hurricane Point will fall on his neck and weep for joy. Joy that they can now have a good long sleep in the morning instead of having their heads wrenched from their pillows at the peak of day by the savage put-put of his old red torpedo (rest) destroyer. Joy of anxious mothers that the rest of their darling infants will be no longer disturbed in the middle of the night, as it were, by the volcanic eruptions of his slow combustion engine. Joy of nervous maidens that they will not be awakened out of their beauty-sleep by its ten explosions per minute and those without a muffler.

"I say unto you that likewise great joy shall be in Stony Lake over this one boat that needed a muffler, more than over ninety and nine that needed none."

The mufflerless craft has changed her rigester from Clark's Bay to Young's Point. Anyday it is a usual sight to see a couple of men tenderly nursing her "inwards" trying to improve her gasoline. "Wellie" had become so used to her that he could read her every thought and some of them were rather expressive. It will take the Young's Point boys some time to develop that acquaintance.

Mr. Dunford's new boat is like Hr. H. W. Stock's "Itasca Jr.," and gets over the ground at a smart pace—all muffled up.

Last Saturday night the boys of the Zion Methodist church at Hall's Glen and those of the Bethel church met the crack football team of Warsaw on their own ground and trimmed them to a finish by a score of three to nothing.

The Lillicrap island near "Headlands" has passed into the possession of Col. Collins of Toronto, cousin of Mr. J. D. Collins of Peterborough. The transfer was made last fall. Mr. and Mrs. Nettleton and party of Toronto, friends of Col. Collins, are occupying it at present.

A trim new speed boat by the name of "Bertha" has made its appearance on the waters of Stoney Lake. The other night she was lying peacefully at the McCracken's Landing wharf, and there was much conjecturing among the natives as to whose boat she was. Mr. Pickens, the wit of the Landing, came to the conclusion "that Bertha was a strange girl around these parts."

INDIAN RIVER NEWS

Examiner Special:

INDIAN RIVER, June 16—The recent showers have made the farmers happy and the prospects are much better for good crops.

Mr. Arthur Devlin and Mr. Richard Sullivan spent Sunday last with friends in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Guerin of Peterborough spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. James Guerin, here.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice O'Leary spent last Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Fitzpatrick, Asphodel.

Mr. J. T. Andress took in 18,000 pounds of milk on Monday last.

A very interesting game of baseball was played on Saturday evening last between the Indian River east and west boys. The game resulted in favour of Indian River west, the score being 9 to 7. The pitching of Donegan and Head was fast at times. A baseball game is to be played at Indian River on Saturday evening next between the same teams and a much better game is expected. I.R.C. is to be filled in with some of the veteran players, such as A. Whibbs and Wm. Guerin. The officers elected for the season are:

President, James Foley.
Hon. Pres., John Sullivan.
Secretary, John Smith.
Treasurer, Joseph Donegan.
Captain, John Head.
Com. of Management — Stephen Murphy, John Meade and Dennis O'Brien.

The President, Mr. Foley, spoke a few words of encouragement to the boys, and urged them to attend practice and that Indian River had the material and with good practice could meet almost any team in the county. The boys have purchased a new outfit and intend to stay with the game.

Crop Conditions In the West

WINNIPEG, Man., June 16.—Summarising crop conditions in the West from reports from 175 correspondents, the Free Press says: Sixty-eight points report general conditions excellent, 56 points good, 23 fair, and 3 conditions poor.

Speaking of frost damage, the Free Press declares that "the actual amount of land being re-seeded for frost damage is small. There are much larger areas being re-seeded for cutworms, which, in some districts, have eaten entire fields. Something like 100 points out of 175 report no frost damage at all; twenty points frost, but no permanent damage; ten points considerable permanent damage, and three points damage of very serious nature.

"The chief regret is that frost has caused delay, and the crop, which on June 1st was two weeks ahead of 1914, is now behind its conditions on June 15th last year. This, of course, applies only to frosted areas, though the progress of the whole crop has not been so rapid as could have been desired during the past two weeks. Recovery in the frosted areas is good, but slow. Warm, moist weather, but especially warm weather, is now needed."

DON'T WASH YOUR HAIR WITH SOAP

When you wash your hair, don't use soap. Most soap and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drugstore and a few ounces will last a whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

CAMPBELLFORD DEFEATED HASTINGS

Special to The Examiner.

HASTINGS, June 15.—The many friends here of Miss Maggie Brown regret to learn of her death, which took place last week at Roseneath, whither she had gone to visit her sister. The circumstances surrounding her death are attended with unusual sadness, following so closely to that of her father, who died only a few months ago. Deceased was well known in Hastings, having resided here for a number of years, and the deepest sympathy is extended to the mother, who has, in such a short time, been doubly bereaved.

The union picnic of the Presbyterian and Methodist congregations of Westwood was held on Wednesday per steamer to Healey Falls. A large crowd was in attendance, and "a very enjoyable outing" was the verdict of the entire company.

We regret to have to record the death of Mr. Patrick English, of Asphodel, who passed away at his home on Thursday last, after an illness of but a few days. The funeral was held on Saturday morning from his late residence to Norwood Church, where service was held, after which the remains were conveyed to Hastings and interred beside those of his wife, who pre-deceased him a few years ago. By his death a family of several children are left in sorrow, the youngest child being only some six or seven years of age, and they have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their sad bereavement. Mr. J. J. English, Hastings, is a brother of the deceased.

Everything passed off quietly at the raising of Mr. B. Crowley's barn last week, no accident having befallen any one, although some parts had to be elevated to a very great height.

The lacrosse boys, accompanied by several of their friends, went down to Campbellford on Friday for a game with the team there, but suffered defeat in a score of 7-0 in favour of Campbellford.

Quite a crowd boarded the steamer "Rainbow" on Thursday last for the annual excursion to Peterborough, under the auspices of the English Church. A good time is reported.

Rev. B. Eyre, B.A., B.D., of Frelton, spent a short time last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Beavis.

The June meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. V. German. Important business was discussed and final arrangements completed for the excursion to Peterborough on June 25th per steamer "Stoney Lake."

Mrs. Wm. McConnal returned on Saturday from the branch meeting held in Port Hope. She purposes giving a report of the proceedings at the meeting of the W. M. S. on Thursday of this week.

An excursion from Rawdley passed through on Tuesday, and a merry crowd was on board.

Mr. D. Simpson, of Toronto, spent a few days with friends here.

Norwood and Hastings juniors played a friendly game of lacrosse on Thursday.

Messrs. W. Preston and N. Beavis spent the past week in Peterborough, attending as jurors at the Court. They spent Sunday at their homes here, but returned on Monday morning to finish the session, which is a lengthy one.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Stewart, of Toronto, came down during the week, and are preparing their cottage for the summer.

Corporal Ben Hicks, of the Overseas Contingent, has been visiting his parents here.

Rev. T. Richards, of Toronto, was in town on Wednesday last.

Rev. T. H. Anderson has returned from the conference recently convened in Oshawa.

Mrs. F. McKee spent Thursday in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Warner are spending a few days with Bobcaygeon friends.

Mrs. E. J. Laing and daughter, Mable, of Norwood, have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. N. Beavis.

Miss Gladys Stevenson spent Sunday in Norwood.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The Czar's Son and Heir

The Czarevitch, the future ruler of all the Russias, has been described as the most valuable child in the world. When he succeeds to the throne he will inherit all the huge fortune of the Romanoff family, which is estimated at no smaller a sum than two hundred million dollars. In addition to this as ruler of the Russian people, he will enjoy an income of $10,000,000 a year, and have the absolute control of 100 estates employing 30,000 servants. At present the child is the recipient of an allowance of $75,000 a year, a banking account having been opened for him soon after his birth; when, incidentally, his life was insured for $5,500,000.

VICTORIA HOUSE, M'CRACKEN'S LANDING

Preparing for a Busy Season

The best advertisement that a summer resort can have are well pleased guests. They invariably come again, and never tire telling their friends during the winter about the good times they had the previous summer. Result: More business the following season.

The management of the Victoria House, McCracken's Landing, do not believe in spending money advertising; instead they put it on the table in the form of good substantial 'grub,' and each season sees an ever increasing number of guests. The summer of nineteen-fifteen promises to eclipse anything in the past.

The following have registered so far this season: Mrs. J. W. McKinney and Mrs. McGee, Sewickley, Pa., Mr. J. W. Wilson, Rochester, N.Y., Mrs. (Dr.) Bell, Toronto, Mr. S. F. Grylls, Mr. H. Millar and Mr. A. McGuire, Lakefield, Messrs. N. A. Moore, T. S. Crawford, John Blewett, H. Debois, J. Dunsdale, E. J. Gibson, O. Wilson, W. J. Charlton, J. G. Brown, E. W. Bailey, William Graham, O. A. Langley, B. Preston, Robert Webster, F. J. Burgess, Cecil Wilson, all of Lakefield, Mr. G. R. Holt, Peterborough, Miss J. H. Sawyer, Miss E. Larmer, Mr. H. W. Blewett of Lakefield, Mr. J. W. McKinney, Sewickley, Pa., Mr. W. G. Cochrane, Miss Edna Campbell, Miss Irene McLean and Mr. J. A. McNabb, Peterborough.

Doctor Said Only Hope Was In An Operation

Was Skeptical When He Began the Use of Dr. Chase's Ointment—Relief Came Quickly

Here is a plain, honest statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Ointment. Between the lines of this letter you can read the gratitude which its writer feels. One does not suffer from annoying, distressing piles for ten years without appreciating a cure when it is obtained.

Almost every mail brings the report of someone who has been cured of piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Such statements are never used without the permission of the writer, and until we are satisfied that the cure is genuine and the writer a person of responsibility.

You may believe in operations for piles, and think there is no other cure. Write to Mr. Ingles, enclosing stamp, and he will gladly verify his statement. He will tell you that the pain, the expense, the risk of an operation are quite unnecessary. That relief and cure come with the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Ernest W. Ingles, Penticton, B.C., writes: "I suffered from piles for ten years, and though I tried all kinds of ointments and injections I really had no permanent relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. When I began this treatment I had absolutely no faith in it, for I had been examined by a well-known physician in Vancouver, and he said that an operation was the only thing that would benefit me. It was surprising the relief I obtained from the very first box, and now, after using four boxes, I am practically cured. My case was so exceptionally bad that I received no relief day or night, and for this reason the results are wonderful."

You can obtain Dr. Chase's Ointment from any dealer at 60 cents a box. If you do not want to risk this much send a two-cent stamp to pay postage, and mention this paper, and we shall send you a sample box free. We are so certain that any sufferer from piles will obtain relief by using this ointment that we do not hesitate to make you this offer. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

IN LATEST MILITARY STYLE.

By Anabel Worthington.

Extremely military in detail and appearance is this waist as shown in the main view, while in the smaller front view an entirely different version may be seen. This shows how adaptable a single pattern can be. The military aspect is secured largely by means of the braid trimming, the metal buttons and the straps on shoulder and pocket. The material is satin, in army blue. The smart little turnovers on collar and cuffs are the only concession to the feminine.

The other version shows the neck cut down in a V, short sleeves with turnback cuffs, and the absence of strap and pocket. Linen also lends itself well to the military idea, while for the plain style linen, cotton, gaberdine, poplin, madras and the striped wash silks would be very suitable. For medium size 2½ yards of 36-inch material would be required. The pattern, No. 7,143, can be obtained in six sizes, from 34 to 44 inches bust measure.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

THE BRITISH HAVE RESUMED OFFENSIVE ATTACKING ALONG BETHUNE and LaBASSEE CANAL

BRITISH FORCES NOW ATTACKING ALONG THE CANAL

First Rush Drove the Germans Out of a Line of Trenches Battle is Proceeding With Great Violence--General Assault on the German Positions on Both Sides of Bethune-Labassee Canal.

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, France, June 16.—(French official communique.)—The British have again resumed the offensive along the Bethune-LaBassee Canal. Cooperating with the French, who are hammering away at the enemy's lines to the south near Arras, the English troops have begun a general assault on the German positions on both sides of the canal.

The official communique this afternoon reported that the first rush of the Britons drove the Germans out of their line of trenches. The battle is proceeding with great violence, both sides bombarding very heavily.

PETROGRAD, June 16.—Grand Duke Constantine Constantinovitch, aged 57, head of the military schools of the Russian Empire, and an infantry general, died at midnight of heart disease, it was officially announced to-day. He was a cousin of the Czar.

ROME, June 16,—King Constantine of Greece has had another relapse, according to Athens despatches this afternoon. The king is now said to be suffering from nephritis as well as pleurisy.

LONDON, June 16.—Great arms and ship-building factories are located along the north-east coast of England, and these may have been the object of last night's Zeppelin attack. The Armstrong wireless at Newcastle, and the Dorman Long wireless at Stockton and Middlesborough manufacture shells. Important ammunition and ship works are located near Hartlepool.

LONDON, June 16.—Chairman A. A. Booth of the Cunard Company's board of directors, admitted to-day at the inquiry, that the Lusitania was proceeding at a comparatively slow speed when she was torpedoed, because the company wanted to save money. Thos. Quinn, a seaman, who was in the Crow's Nest when the Lusitania was torpedoed, followed Booth. "The Lusitania could not have escaped if she had been rushing along at a hundred knots," said Quinn. "There was absolutely no warning. I saw no periscope or anything—just the torpedo ripping through the water."

THOS. HARRISON'S SUIT WAS LOST

Thos. Harrison, formerly of North Monaghan, recently lost a suit in Barrie for $280 damages from the G. T.R. for two horses which were killed on the line to Port Hope about a year ago.

It will be remembered that the plaintiff's goods had been seized, but Harrison's son asked the Sheriff's representatives for two horses, which were turned over to him. As it was reported, Harrison turned the horses out again and they were later chased off the property, seized, and were killed on the G.T.R. Jos. Barnard, Thos. Castle, Jas. Cunningham and Mr. Delahey, section foreman, went up to Barrie as witnesses.

RECRUITING SATISFACTORY

Major-General Hughes Says the 35,000 Men Needed Are Nearly All Secured and Canada Will Soon Have 157,000 Under Arms

THE SHELL CONTRACTS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, June 16.—General the Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, was in Toronto for half on hour to-day on his way to Niagara and London camps. On his staff the general is now carrying two war-scarred soldiers, who figured in the great fight at St. Julien. They are Captain Dansereau of Toronto, adjutant of the 48th Highlanders at the front, and Major Kirkcaldy of Brandon, Man., both invalided home because of their wounds. Major Kirkcaldy had been wounded in the chest by German shrapnel at St. Julien. "These two fine fellows are on my personal staff for a time," explained the General, "because I want to take them around to the Canadian camps so that they can tell our troops of the actual conditions at the front. We want the men to know what they are going to face. These officers have been there and know. They can tell, and their talks to officers should be useful."

The Shell Contracts.

General Hughes was asked about the complaint that the Canadian manufacturers were not getting all the shell contracts that they could handle.

"I read General Bertram's speech," he said. "The trouble is that the Canadian firms are all trying to get in on this shell-making now when they discover that there is money in it, but they wouldn't touch it at first."

Much of General Hughes' time was taken up to-day by a Toronto man who wanted to sell the Militia Department an apparatus for supplying oxygen to soldiers who have to face the German gas fumes. The affair was somewhat in the shape of a large coffee pot. The Minister of Militia showed some slight signs of impatience.

"The men could never carry a thing like that with them into the trenches," he said.

"Have you ever been on the firing line?" inquired the General.

"No, but ——"

"Well, it wouldn't work. The men could not wait for this until they have their lungs or their stomachs burned out. They must have something that will make them immune."

Then he turned to your representative and made it clear that to the Minister of Militia in war time, life is just one invention after another. "I have had thousands of them fired at me," he said.

Enlistment Good.

"How is enlistment?" queried the reporter.

"Fine. We have the 35,000 we want almost all secured now. We have over 120,000 men organized and under arms in addition. We are getting a good class of men. Everything in that direction is going well. We will soon have 157,000 men under arms."

General Hughes declares that there was a common mistake made in referring to the action in which the Canadians figured so gloriously as "the battle of Langemarck."

"The Canadians were not at Langemarck. That was where the Algerians fled. Our men were at St. Julien, and that is the name we should give to the action."

The General is loud in his praise of the French infantry also. He thinks they have done superb fighting.

TENDER IS AWARDED

De Laval Dairy Supply Company Receives Contract for Auxiliary Pumping Unit at Price of $15,850

CAPACITY INCREASED

The tender for an auxiliary pumping unit of six million gallons capacity has been awarded to the DeLaval Dairy Supply Company. The Utilities Commisson met this morning and after some discussion in which the tenders of both the Allis-Chalmers Company and the DeLaval Dairy Supply Company were considered, decided to accept the tender of the last named Company, at the price of $15,850.00. The pumping unit will be installed in the present waterworks pumping station and will be available for use in case of a breakdown through anchor ice or any other cause. At first it was decided to install a plant of four and one-half million gallons' capacity, but owing to the increasing demand for water the Commissioners concluded that the best interests would be served by increasing the capacity to six million gallons.

PTE. ADAM MAY NOT BE DEAD

Letter From One of His Chums Says Only That He Went to the Base

A letter from the firing line, written by one of the chums of Pte. C. H. Adam, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Adam, Pearl Avenue, received yesterday, has raised the hope that Pte. Adam is not dead. He was reported killed in action at the Battle of Langemarck some weeks ago and until yesterday no further word was received and his family mourned him as dead. The letter yesterday from a chum says that he received a parcel of tobacco, etc., but as "Tal" had gone to the "base" he was not there to share it with them.

The family has written for further particulars and until they are further informed can only hope that he is not dead. Pte. Adam enlisted in Winnipeg, where he has been for the past few years. His father is Conductor C. H. Adam.

A VERDICT OF $300 FOR THE PLAINTIFF

Dummer Slander Action Came to an End Last Evening When Jury Decided Case Against Wm. Batten—Were Out Two Hours.

AN INTERESTING CASE

Three hundred dollars and costs was the jury's award to Frank Harding in his claim for $1,500 damages from William Batten, on a charge of slander. Judgment was entered by the court. Mr. Gordon obtained a thirty-day stay.

Thus ended the Dummer case, which held the attention of the County Court throughout Monday and Tuesday, and was finally concluded last night, at 9 o'clock, when the jury returned their verdict after being out about two hours.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, who appeared for the defendant, and Mr. Kerr, who acted for Harding, concluded two fine addresses at 6 o'clock. Judge Huycke reviewed the law governing slander and completed his directions half an hour later. The jury then retired to their room, where they partook of lunch provided by Coleman, and proceeded with their duties.

Court resumed at 8.20 p.m. and towards 9 o'clock returned. The jurymen were: W. J. Northey, foreman; Andrew McIntosh, Jos. Sanderson, Wm. Preston, Thos. O'Reilly, Harry McDonald, Ira Goodfellow, Ed. Richardson, Wm. Roberts, Uriah Payne, A. Olin and Nelson Beavis.

This case attracted wide interest in Dummer and the adjoining townships, where Harding and Batten have many friends and an extensive acquaintance. Quite a number of them had driven miles to attend the hearing, and on Tuesday, particularly, they predominated in the crowded benches of the court chamber.

Batten was found guilty of having circulated slanderous statements to the effects that Harding had stolen from him 4,000 feet of lumber.

In his address Mr. Gordon confined himself largely to a review of the evidence which has been fully reported. He stated that the courts did not encourage slander cases, because of the dissention they generally create in communities.

Mr. Kerr Was Caustic.

Placed in a different position from that of Mr. Gordon's, Mr. Kerr's address covered a wider range, and afforded him an opportunity for an effective appeal of which he made the most. Is review was searching in detail, extensive in scope and was effectively delivered.

"Give a dog a bad name," he said, "and everybody will shy a stone at him. Start a story with J. J. Crowe and Billy Batten, the loudest and fastest talkers in Dummer, behind it, and in two weeks the devil wouldn't have a worse reputation." He turned all his forces on the evidence of J. J. Crowe. This man, Mr. Kerr said, was a blood relation of Harding's, but in the witness box he had displayed towards the plaintiff only hatred and ill-will.

"God forbid that you or I should ever have a friend of that kind." Continuing, he said that Crowe testified that he had tried to draw Harding and Batten together. As an intermediary he was a Dornbusch or Bernstorff, creating greater discord than before.

Mr. Kerr made much of the fact that Batten had failed to go into the box. He could have admitted, like a man that he was wrong, could have apologized, and would have been regarded as a hero throughout Dummer. Instead, the box yawned while the defendant skulked behind a line of defence that was merely insinuations against Harding, and as such were very properly ruled out by the Court.

At this point Mr. Kerr explained at length the form and design, as he saw it, of the defence. The slander with which the court was concerned was alleged to have occurred about a year ago. This did not permit the introduction of evidence previous and irrelevent to this case. The defence submitted evidence of this kind, but neglected to give the plaintiff the required seven days' notice, together with a statement of claim that he might be prepared for the line of evidence to be submitted in defence. Instead, evidence which the defence knew would be ruled out was offered, and with a design that the jury might be influenced by innuendo and insinuation. The jury would say that the plaintiff and the court were trying to inhibit the presentation of evidence detrimental to the plaintiff.

Mr. Kerr compared this method to

Y.M.C.A. EFFORT TO COMPLETE THE DESIRED AMOUNT

One Day Campaign to Secure Balance of $12,000 Needed Will Be Conducted by the Committee To-morrow

CLOCK NOT STOPPED

A number of people who have been passing the corner of George and Hunter streets have during the past few days been asking the question—"Does the Y.M.C.A. clock stop at $10,000?" The answer is "No."

The minimum amount needed for the Y.M.C.A. is $12,000, and while $10,200 was secured in the three days' effort last week, the Association workers propose to push the hands of the clock around to the $12,000 figure in a one day effort to be conducted to-morrow (Thursday, the 17th.)

The people of Peterborough have been remarkably generous in the present campaign as well as in the one for Patriotic funds, and are showing themselves in every way loyal and public spirited. There are still a number of people who have not been approached, being out of town or for other reasons not located, and it is hoped that others who have come down on the subscription list for their regular annual subscriptions will now make a special pledge to meet the extra needs of the present effort, so it is expected that $12,000 actually will be secured. A conditional pledge of $500 will complete the amount desired, when $11,500 has been pledged.

"Boost" is the word for to-morrow, for Peterborough must get there in the Y.M.C.A. campaign.

Garbage Collection For the East Ward

Private System Will Be Introduced at Cost of Ten Cents a Week

Sanitary Inspector Spence is arranging for a private garbage collecting system for East City. There are a number of people in the East Ward who are desirous of enjoying privileges similar to those which exist in other parts of the city. They have frequently objected to being left off of the garbage collecting area, and have complained to Sanitary Inspector Spence with the result that an attempt will be made to introduce a private system of garbage collection. Garbage will be collected twice a week at a nominal cost of ten cents a week for each patron. Anybody who is desirous of participating in the service will receive full information by applying to Sanitary Inspector Spence.

LOCAL LADY HURT BY ACCIDENT

At the Golf Links on Monday Evening When Golf Stick Slipped From Hands of Her Husband

A very serious accident occurred at the Golf Links on Monday evening, when Mrs. Wm. Sangster was accidentally hit by a golf stick in the hands of her husband, and sustained a serious injury to her face.

It is understood Mr. Sangster, who is a Mechanical Engineer at the De Laval Plant, was demonstrating to his wife how to put a shot, when the stick accidentally slipped and Mrs. Sangster, who was beside him, was hit on the side of her chin. She suffered a severe cut. On Monday evening two physicians and a dentist were with her to try and save her teeth. Last evening she was very restless, but she is resting a little easier to-day.

Getting Lots of Souvenirs

Peterboro' Boys Are Also Being Heavily Shelled Writes Pte. Northcott

Mr. R. M. Northcott, 177 Murray Street, has received a letter from his son, Pte. Victor Northcott of the 57th detachment, 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Division. Writing on May 27th Pte. Northcott says: "We have been getting shelled very heavily these last few days. Bert. Carpenter of the 57th was killed a couple of days ago, and several Peterborough boys wounded. We have lots of German souvenirs, helmets, buttons, bayonets etc. It is awfully hot weather out here now, as well as the other "hot stuff." I think we are going into billets out of these trenches for a few days' rest. I hope so. The Peterborough boys send their best regards."

County Council Adjourned at Noon

CIVIC FIRE INSURANCE.

The Utilities Commission and the citizens are to be congratulated upon the commission having taken a definite step in providing blanket insurance against loss by fire. This step is represented by the awarding of a contract at a meeting held to-day for an auxiliary pumping plant at the Waterworks station. The commission deserves credit also for awarding the contract to a local organization, the De Laval Company; and for stipulating that everything in connection with the erection of the new plant that can be produced in Peterborough shall be obtained here. The interest on the total estimated cost of $20,000 represents a cheap insurance, which covers every building in the city with its contents. A breakdown in water supply in case of fire will soon be practically impossible.

WILL HOLD HIS OWN.

The Maritime Provinces are reputed to be well provided with brains, and to furnish a generous supply of grey matter to the rest of the Dominion. It is therefore to be considered a compliment if a Maritime Province draws on Ontario for mental capital, as has been done by Mr. F. H. Stevens, the publisher of a new newspaper, the Victoria Observer, at Hartland, New Brunswick. He has done wisely in "impressing" an Ontario journalist, Mr. J. F. Breckon, well-known in Peterborough, and formerly a member of The Examiner staff. Judging by the first issue of the Observer, published under Mr. Breckon's management, and from our knowledge of his ability, we have no doubt that he will hold his place at the front among the intellectual "high-brows" of the Maritime Province.

"JITNEY" SERVICE FOR EAST CITY.

Brantford has a civic transportation problem as Peterborough has. A certain section of Brantford — West Brantford—is separated by a stream from the part of the city served by street cars. The street car line will not be extended, but the city council will try to induce the street railway commission to run a 'bus system to connect with the street cars. It is admitted that the Peterborough residents east of the river, are at a disadvantage by lack of facilities for reaching the main business section of the city. As in Brantford the bridge crossing the river at Hunter street is not considered at present strong enough to sustain car traffic, and justify extension of the street car lines; but it seems that a supplementary service might be established. Just now the "jitney" is a transportation factor in large cities. Why would not some enterprising citizen be warranted in establishing a "jitney" service from East City arranged to connect with the present street car service? Such a service to be effective and satisfactory should make dependable and regular connections with the street cars at Hunter street or Charlotte street intersections with George street. It seems probable that a properly conducted service, would receive sufficient patronage to pay the cost of installation; it certainly would if the complaints of lack of transportation, we so often hear, are generally acquiesced in by the people on the east side of the river.

COUNTY MARKET ROADS.

Nobody questions the fact that next to a good crop for the farmer, good facilities for getting it to market are the important matter. Any farmer who stops to think will see that the advantage of good roads to his market far outweighs the comparatively small proportion of its cost he has to pay. He will see that when he counts the wear and tear of his horseflesh and vehicles, and the loss of time—and temper—relatively resulting from good and bad roads, the money value of good roads is directly expressed in a much larger net price for his farm products.

The Provincial Public Highways Commission appointed in 1913, after an exhaustive study of the question of good roads, has made a report and a summary of it has been issued. The provincial scheme of highways development recognizes two main classes, county or market, and township roads, though in fact a township road is as much a market road as any other. At a time when the County Council is in session, the county roads system is worthy of attention. The first Highway Improvement Act was passed by the Ross Government in the year of 1901, revised and amended in 1897 and 1912. The new Ontario Highways Act was passed in 1915. Under it the general basis of the county roads system is as follows:

A county council is authorized to assume a system of roads for construction and maintenance.

A by-law adopting such a system may be passed by a two-thirds majority of a county council, representing at least one-half of the equalized assessment of the county.

Failing to receive a two-thirds majority of the county council, it may be carried by a simple majority of the council, and confirmed by a majority vote of the ratepayers.

The roads assumed are to be such as will accommodate the greater part of the local market travel, creating a system of main market roads.

The roads are to be built in accordance with the regulations of the Department of Public Works and Highways.

The direction and superintendence of the work is placed in charge of a county engineer or capable superintendent appointed by the county council. A committee of the county council should cooperate with, advise and direct the road superintendent.

The system of roads assumed and the by-law fixing the plan of improvement are subject to approval by Order-in-Council.

The mileage assumed under a county roads system varies, but is usually from 12 to 15 per cent. of the total road mileage of the county. Gravel roads are commonly built at a cost of $1,000 to $2,500 per mile, and broken stone roads at from $2,500 to $4,000. To promote construction of county roads, under the new legislation, the government contribution has been increased from 33 1-3 per cent. to 40 per cent. of the cost of construction, and 20 per cent. is paid of cost of maintenance.

As good county roads — meaning the leading roads to market — would be almost as useless as a barn without doors, without good township roads leading to them, the law deals with township roads. The report points out that on township roads much money is wasted on them through lack or organization, to give proper attention where and when necessary. Therefore, it is felt by the government that most benefit can accrue, not from giving financial aid, but by encouraging efficient township organization. Therefore the government provides for paying 25 per cent. of the salary—up to $600—of a township road overseer, or foreman, who will lay out and supervise all work and expenditure on township roads. All expenditure is to be on a wholly cash basis, the money to be raised by a rate on township assessment.

It is important to recognize, as the government has done, that system and organization are the first conditions of good roads; and that lack of these things is responsible in country as well as city, for a great deal of wasted effort, wasted money, and unsatisfactory results.

So far, under the old road legislation, twenty provincial counties have come under the Highways Act and developed highly efficient systems of county roads. Under the stimulus of additional government aid, it is expected that the remaining eighteen counties will adopt a similar policy of highway improvement, which will, in turn, mean an improvement to conditions that will be of advantage to the farming community, inexpressibly greater than any cost in money or effect that may be involved.

This matter is respectfully called to the attention of the County Council of Peterborough, with the suggestion of the possibility of the matter receiving attention this year. The provisions of the new Highways Act will come into force on Jan. 1, 1916. This gives county councils ample opportunity during the present season, to formulate plans and organize, so that next year an extensive programme of highway improvement may be begun and carried out. It is hoped that the importance of good roads will be practically appreciated. While farmers work hard to raise good crops; it does not seem to their advantage that the cream of the profits from their products, should be skimmed off by the compulsion of doing marketting over bad roads.

WILD BEAST LOOSE IN THE WORLD.

The New York Tribune, in an editorial article, says:

"Let no German mistake the temper of the American people; let no German high or low misunderstand the new vision which has come to our citizens in the days which they have stood beside their murdered fellow-citizens.

"Whether we now join in the war, whether we now draw the sword henceforth and until the destruction of those who to-day dominate Germany, the American people will look upon the nations who are fighting the Germans as allies. They will hope and pray for their success. Many millions will regret that no American soldiers are in those lines doing America's part in the battle to defend civilization.

"Let none mistake this fact. A wild beast is loose in the world, a creature combining the ferocity of the animal with the lust of the degenerate human. The struggle is not a struggle of nations: it is a battle between civilization and barbarism. A German victory would mean the destruction of all we hold best in our national life."

First Thanksgiving.

The first Thanksgiving was conducted by an English minister named Wolfall in 1578, on the shores of Newfoundland. The first celebration in the present territory of the United States was held in the Popham colony at Sagadahoc, on the coast of Maine, in 1607. The first regular appointment of a Thanksgiving day was by Governor Bradford, the first governor of Massachusetts bay.
